Willkie Nominated on 6th Ballot In Amazing G. O. P. Stampede

Rumania Cedes Lands to Russia

Carol Bows to Soviet Demands for All Of Bessarabia and Part of Bucovina; Army Is Reported Massing in Transylvania To Meet Threat of Hungarian Invasion

The War Today

RUMANIA APPEARS ABOUT to join the list of dismembered European nations.

KING CAROL BOWS to a Soviet ultimatum to return Bessarabia to Russia; to cede to Moscow part of Bucovina; to turn over the Black Sea port of Constanta and grant Soviet supervision over two others.

AS HE YIELDS, CAROL rushes 2,000,000 men to the Hungarian frontier, anticipating an attempt to wrest Transylvania from him. And he watches Bulgaria, which eyes covetously southern Dobruja.

IN THE WEST, THE GERMANS advance into the positions outlined in the armistice terms, and meet the Spaniards at the Spanish frontier. Meanwhile the Nazis again bomb England and are in turn bombed by the British fleet. Page 6.

ITALY ATTACKS MALTA again from the air and claims some successes in Africa. Page 6.

Bear Moves Over the Balkans

By the Associated Press

Bucharest, June 27.—Rumania bowed tonight to a Soviet demand for great areas of her territory, and moved nearly 2,000,000 men into Transylvania to meet an expected Hungarian attempt to regain that former Magyar province.

[The United Press reported from Budapest that Hungary moved troops up to Rumania's western frontier awaiting a "go-ahead" signal from Germany and Italy to strike and reclaim Transylvania.

[Later the United Press reported that diplomatic circles in Budapest heard that Hungary had already sent a demand to Rumania concerning Transylvania.]

Despite earlier reports that Red troops already were on the march, it was disclosed late tonight that Russia had agreed to hold back from the actual occupation of the ceded areas—Bessarabia and northern Bucovina—until the last details of the capitulation had been worked out. Diplomats labored at the task. It is expected to be completed tomorrow and that Soviet troops then would cross the frontier.

[An Associated Press dispatch from Ankara, Turkey, stated a Turkish naval squadron steamed through the Straits of Bosporus to the Black Sea after announcement of Rumanian capitulation.

Submission Is Kept From Bucharest's Populace

[The dispatch declared the Turks feared a general move in their direction and were prepared to defend the Bosporus against attack.]

The capital was quiet tonight. The press still had not been permitted to publish a word of the Red ultimatum or of King Carol's acceptance.

Whether she fights Hungary or not, whether Bulgaria presses her own territorial claim for Dobruja or lets it lie, Rumania, World War heir to Balkan supremacy, was well on the road to dismemberment.

It is a road that winds from Munich, through Czecho-Slovakia and Poland to Finland and back again to France.

Amid reports that Red warplanes were darkening the horizon and that Red troops, tanks and artillery were massing at her frontier, Rumania's grand council, under the presidency of 46-year-old King Carol II, gave reluctant consent to demands which authoritative sources outlined as follows:

Return of Bessarabia, 17,146 square miles of fertile country, inhabited by more than 3,000,000 persons, which once was part of the Czarist Russian Empire and to which Red Russia never formally renounced her claim.

Cession of the northern part of Bucovina Province, once part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire, but how much of Bucovina's 4,000 square miles and 911,000 inhabitants Russia wanted was not

Sixth	WILLKIE NOMINATION UNANIMOUS

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia (Friday) June 28.—Wendell L. Willkie, 48, is the Republican nominee for President of the United States.

The politically-impossible occurred here early this morning after six fatiguing ballots that had kept delegates almost continuously in their seats for eight hours.

On motion of Gov. Bricker, of Ohio, seconded by some of Willkie's most bitter antagonists, the nomination was made unanimous at 1:45 a. m.

And at 1:50 a. m. a hall churning with bewildered delegates still confused over the blitzkrieg, were dismissed for the night, but not to sleep.

It was midway through the sixth and last ballot that block delivery of Pennsylvania's 74 votes put Willkie over, but the outcome had been obvious since the third ballot.

'This Is Just the Beginning of the Fight'

Willkie early today declared:

"I am very thankful, very appreciative and very humble. This is just the beginning of the fight and I am going to give everything I have in this battle for unity, cooperation and the betterment of our national defense. I made an estimate that I would be nominated on the fifth ballot. I missed it by one. I want to go now and join my family."

Willkie went through this convention like nothing a Republican gathering has seen before, charging ever upward from an initial vote of 105, to 171 on the second, 250 on the third, 306 on the fourth, 429 on the fifth, to that last sixth ballot verdict which delegates thundered to unanimity.

It was the same miraculous pace he had set through the last six weeks of the pre-convention campaign, and in the same mad stride that he, an outsider, had kept since arrival in this city last Saturday.

The going was too fast for the 38-year-old Thomas E. Dewey, who led on the first ballot, then lost rapidly. And it was too fast for Senator Taft, of Ohio, who ran a steadily gaining race through every ballot, but failed to play tortoise to Willkie's hare.

After the Third Ballot, It Was Over

Willkie passed Taft on the third ballot. Both outstripped Dewey on the fourth ballot, with Willkie piling up gains double those of Taft.

But at the end of the fifth ballot, with Willkie 429 and Taft 377, delegates might as well have gone home. It was over. But they didn't want to leave. They stayed and cheered, "We Want Willkie" until the New York Hoosier was unanimously crowned and lights were doused by Chairman Martin.

As State delegations that had voted with Dewey and Taft rushed to join the bandwagon, switching their votes, only two balked, Washington and Wisconsin demanded official polls of their delegations, while galleries booed both.

Willkie smashed down District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey first. The amazing thing is that it all happened just as he predicted it would two weeks ago in Washington.

"Dewey will lead on the first ballot," he said, "and then fade and give the lead to Taft.

"If the convention thinks Taft

Treasury Gets Right to Hold French Ships

1917 Espionage Act Invoked to Confer Power on Morgenthau

President Roosevelt yesterday took what was generally believed to be the first step toward preventing 11 French ships, including the $60,000,000 Normandie, from falling into Nazi hands.

By proclamation, he authorized the Treasury and the Governor of the Panama Canal to seize any domestic or foreign vessels in American ports to protect them or United States harbors or United States interests from possible injury. In certain cases officers and crews of affected ships may be removed and United States guards substituted.

Mr. Roosevelt's proclamation makes effective a specific section of the Espionage Act of June 15, 1917, and supplements his proclamation of last September establishing a limited emergency. Under the Espionage Act, ships may be detained "to secure the observance of the rights and obligations of the United States."

Speculate on Debt

Speculation that this provision might be stretched to cover seizure of French ships for the $4,200,000,000 French World War debt evoked no comment from Treasury officials.

A Treasury spokesman discounted the possibility that the President's action might have any connection

The People Steal a Show

Willkie Gets Chance to Swap 'Punches' With 'That Fellow'

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia, Friday, June 28.—Wendell Willkie now gets his chance "to swap punches with that fellow, Roosevelt."

He was given the chance early this morning when a runaway Republican National Convention made a shambles of the "stop Willkie" barriers. It was a convention which the people snatched away from the professional politicians in one of the most astounding dramas in American history.

"We want Willkie! We want Willkie!"

This cry of the thousands packed into stifling, klieg-lighted galleries found its echo among the delegates on the floor, who broke away from the professionals trying to hold them in line.

Until the very last dramatic moment that saw Willkie carried to victory, the managers of Senator Robert A. Taft thought they had the votes to hold the incredible Hoosier.

Pew Crossed Up

They were saying that Michigan, once it left Vandenberg, would go to Taft. But the amateurs in that delegation broke away and gave their votes to the amateur candidate of their choice—Willkie.

Joseph N. Pew, supposed boss of the big Pennsylvania delegation, was laying back with 53 votes which he had been giving to Gov. Arthur B. James, now on this sixth ballot, he was going to shove them over to Taft.

The historians may as well not bother looking for a parallel to this. William Jennings Bryan, who stampeded the '96 convention with his "Cross of Gold" speech? No, that won't do, because Bryan was a professional, a golden-voiced opportunist awaiting his chance.

Garfield, who came from nowhere to beat Grant? No. He, too, was a professional, a man who had gone to the '84 convention to nominate his good friend, Sherman.

No, there is no story in American politics like that of Wendell Willkie. Whoever heard of an erstwhile Democrat running like this in a convention of Republicans? Whoever heard of a utilities executive winning favor in any convention?

Taft Delegates Sullen

But there it is.

With five ballots taken, Willkie has captured well over 400 votes, and is rushing for the winning mark of 501.

The Taft delegates are still a bit sullen.

"The State of Washington," bawls the chairman of that delegation, "casts 16 votes for a sound Republican."

That is a crack at Willkie's re-

Yes, Mrs. Willkie Will Aid Campaign But—No Speeches

Philadelphia, June 28 (AP).—Mrs. Wendell Willkie, "a little bit numb" at the idea that her husband will contend for the Presidency, said today she would help in the campaign if his co-workers don't "think she's excess baggage."

There is one thing she won't do. She won't make speeches.

And about entertaining in the White House—

She said, "I'll tell you what I think about that after I've done it."

She sat through the entire exciting day at Convention Hall yesterday as the votes fell by blocks into her husband's campaign kit. But no one around her recognized her.

She had sent a friend out to buy her a big hat under which she hid, and she had borrowed a friend's ticket for a seat in the balcony.

Home Town Tells The World It's Glad for Willkie

Elwood, Ind., June 27 (AP).—After tense hours of listening to radios, the 10,000 residents of Elwood, birthplace of Wendell L. Willkie, turned loose and shouted themselves hoarse tonight when he received the Republican Presidential nomination.

Motorists weaved their way through hundreds of pedestrians, blowing their horns continually; factory whistles let loose shrill blasts; citizens afoot blew horns, beat drums, pans and cans, and there was general pandemonium.

The G. O. P. standard bearer has promised Elwood to come "back home" to deliver his acceptance speech.

This industrial city is in the heart of a tomato-growing belt and sponsors of the Indiana tomato festival here July 26 have invited Willkie to attend, in the hope he will make that the occasion of his acceptance.

Sen. McNary Mentioned as Running Mate

Taft Says He Prefers Senate; Rejection By Dewey Seen

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia (Friday), June 28.—Almost to the very moment of Wendell Willkie's selection for the Presidency, the forgotten man of the Republican National Convention was the Vice Presidential nominee.

Far from knowing who they wanted, most of the delegates seemed hardly to have given the matter a thought. And Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, floor manager for Willkie, wasn't much help, either.

"No commitments and no conclusions," he told The Post in the midst of a roaring crowd that surged around him on the floor to offer congratulations on Willkie nomination.

Nevertheless, one name stood out on the lips of several of the experienced politicians attending the convention and that was the name of 66-year-old Senator Charles McNary, of Oregon, minority leader of the upper House.

And, queried on the point, Stassen himself observed that he had "always liked Charles McNary."

Another Republican, one of the most prominent of the gallery of party leaders here, indicated he

"A Good Citizen"

D. C. Wife Asks Freedom From Dozenberg, Soviet Spy

Mrs. Frances Dallant, 45, who declared she "always had been a good citizen of the United States," yesterday asked the District Court to annul her marriage to Nicholas Dallant (alias Dozenberg) whom she called a Russian spy.

DOZENBERG

Mrs. Dallant's complaint told the court that Dallant took her around the world on a mission of espionage after they were married in Yokohama, Japan, August 21, 1936. She said Dallant tricked her into the marriage by pretending to be a moving picture producer born in Bismarck, N. Dak., and that if she had known the man was a Russian secret agent she would not have married him.

Mrs. Dallant is a nurse employed by the Social Security Board and lives at 3700 Massachusetts avenue northwest. She was a yeoman in Government service in the World War.

Dozenberg was sentenced in New York last March to a year and a day in Federal prison upon his plea of guilty for a passport fraud.

Attorney Needham C. Turnage, U. S. Commissioner here, filed the complaint in which Mrs. Dallant charged her husband with

(More Willkie Pictures, Biography of Mrs. Willkie, Page 12)

By Henry Paynter
Associated Press Staff Writer

Many good citizens of tree-shaded Elwood, Ind., think Wendell Willkie is the greatest man that ever left there, but some are alleged to give devout thanks nightly that dear Mrs. Willkie's boy Wendell moved almost 1,000 miles away.

Tempting apples hang undisturbed on Elwood trees, street fighting and general hell-raising have virtually died out, noses are no longer bloody, and the smaller outbuildings remain upright. But now that peace has eneveloped Elwood, some folks there wonder how in heck Wall Street and Washington manage to get along with Wendell.

Anyone seeking in Willkie's adolescence clews to his irrepressible personality may be bewildered by Elwood's composite recollection of him as a mixture of Peck's bad boy, a juvenile Norman Thomas, and a misplaced Oxford Don. Just try to form your own mental picture of a youth who:

To amuse himself played Hamlet from memory, wearing his mother's old petticoat for a cape.

With a brother, using fists only, tried to beat up the entire police department of Bloomington, Ind.

Fried eggs, made steel, milked cows and taught history to work his way through college.

Joined the Methodist and also the Episcopal Church; beat up boys who sneered at his Sunday clothes; scandalized his mother's friends by inventing a Sunday gambling game

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

HOOSIER PHYSIQUE: Only a man with Wendell Willkie's powerful physique could have survived the strain of his solid 96-hour palm-to-palm contact with wavering delegates. While Taft rested at a friend's house in Bryn Mawr, and while Dewey's aides kept him protected, Willkie exchanged banter and hand-shakes with scores of delegates, alternates, local maharajahs and medicine men.

Harlan Miller

Before the first ballot Willkie's eyes were bloodshot with lack of sleep. He looked a little like a man rescued from a mine disaster. But he was still giving callers that old irresistible personality with undiminished voltage.

* * * *

POKER FACES: Nothing gives a delegate such a chance to laugh up his sleeve as the flattering intimation that he has inside dope on the way a convention is going . . . When the first ballot began, some of the delegates didn't know how they themselves were going to vote.

* * * *

CANNED CAMPAIGNING: Willkie's innocent amateurs stole a march on rivals by sending out to radio stations some phonograph records urging his admirers to write and wire their delegates. These were timed so mail from the Pacific Coast would reach delegates just before the first ballot.

"——saving the Republic?"

* * * *

WASTED ORATORY: Because the loud-speakers went temperamental, those in the hall heard less at times than the radio audience. Of the first four speeches the only phrase that came over with complete clarity to the press tables was "The people of Philadelphia are friendly people."

* * * *

EMPTY SEATS: Incidentally, Philadelphia's friendly people stayed away from the convention sessions in large numbers. While big shots tried frantically to obtain tickets, there were often several thousand empty seats.

* * * *

OVER EAGER: Candidates' headquarter suites have surged into fantastic bedlam. Conferences go on in coat closets, bathrooms and out on the fire-escape. Writing tables are covered with half-eaten meals. Tired masterminds sprawl on beds littered with camapign literature.

"——I give you Zilch."

OFFICE SEEKING MAN: Carpets are covered with spilled campaign buttons. Under the beds are stacks of petitions, letters, telegrams. Couriers gallop in with the news that three Missouri delegates are coming around.

And you encounter the same India-rubber statesman at the different headquarters, assuring each in turn that they're working heart and soul for the cause.

* * * *

NASTY WISECRACK: Some one rushed into an inner sanctum with a report that some delegates, though pledged to another candidate, were willing to talk turkey.

"Are those his F. O. B. candidates," asks a weary aide, "or are they his C. O. D. delegates?"

* * * *

CANDIDATES SQUIRM: No matter how flattering and laudatory a nomination speech is, a sensitive candidate inevitably feels (as he listens to his radio) that he is being held out by the nape of his neck like a puppet offered at auction. But most of 'em like it "way down deep."

* * * *

FIRST STONE: As might have been expected, the first ones to yell out loud about Wendell Willkie's utilities job were men who have never been hostile to the utilities when they could crawl into bed with 'em.

Mrs. Roosevelt Gives Job Advice

New York, June 27 (INS).—Job-hunting youngsters today were given a three-point formula for success by Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt.

Addressing 250 boys and girls at the East Side Job Council, she advised:

"Draw a line between being too aggressive and knowing your own ability; never feel you can't do a job and don't give the impression you know more than the person hiring you."

Indiana Backs Senator Minton And 3d Term

McNutt Refuses to Be Delegate; Remains A Possible Nominee

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, June 27.—Indiana Democrats, whooping it up in a noisy and wide open State convention, today picked Lieut. Gov. Henry F. Schricker their standard bearer for Governor and renominated United States Senator Sherman Minton, strong New Dealer, without opposition.

They approved, though indirectly, a third term for President Roosevelt while cheering their own candidate for the Democratic Presidential nomination, Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, who keynoted the convention with a "keep out of war" speech.

The third-term indorsement came in an eleventh-hour resolution, offered by National Committeeman Frank M. McHale, head of the McNutt for President campaign.

McNutt Stand Indorsed

The resolution reaffirmed confidence in the "statesmanship patriotism and fidelity to the ideals of democracy of the distinguished former Governor (McNutt) of this State" and indorsed his (McNutt's) position in "in advocating the renomination of President Roosevelt."

The reference was to McNutt's Memorial Day statement calling upon Mr. Roosevelt to be a candidate for a third term because of the international crisis. The original report of the convention's resolutions committee had mentioned neither the third-term question nor McNutt's candidacy.

United States Senator Frederick Van Nuys, who had said in advance that he would not be a delegate to the party's national convention if the State platform indorsed a third term, was left off the national delegation. Usually a United States Senator is one of the delegates-at-large.

Delegation Uninstructed

Senator Minton was named a delegate-at-large, along with McHale and six other McNutt adherents. They will have a half-vote each. In all, the Indiana delegation will have 28 votes in the Chicago convention.

The delegation was given no instructions, but it is strong with McNutt supporters. McNutt refused to take a place on the delegation, giving rise to reports that he still considered himself a Presidential or Vice Presidential possibility.

Schricker, who has been lawyer, weekly newspaper publisher and banker, won nomination on the second ballot after R. Earl Peters, of Fort Wayne, former State director of the Federal Housing Administration, withdrew his candidacy. The third candidate, 31-year-old David M. Lewis, Marion County (Indianapolis) prosecutor, ran third. Schricker is 57 and makes his home at Knox.

Willkie's Modest 200-lb. Brothers 'Just the Brawn'

A Staff Correspondent

Philadelphia, June 28.—Wendell Willkie's three brawny brothers, Edward, Robert and Fred, sat cheerfully in the gallery, grinning broadly as the great ovation swept the hall. They ducked behind yellow straw hats as a photographer approached, and Edward exclaimed:

"You don't want our pictures. We're just Doris Duke's husbands. Wendell's the brains—we're just the brawn."

All three claimed to weigh more than 200 pounds.

Who will they vote for?

"Fred voted for Al Smith," Edward said. "He'll probably vote for Roosevelt."

D'Alesandro Told There's No Need For Traffic Study

Information tending to discourage a contemplated investigation of local traffic conditions by Representative D'Alesandro, of Maryland, was submitted to the legislator yesterday by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways.

Although D'Alesandro requested the Commissioners to furnish him with facts pertaining to all local traffic problems, Whitehurst's report, sent through Commissioner David McCoach, showed the Representative that such a study as contemplated by him is already under way in cooperation with the Public Roads Administration.

The current study will continue for at least another year, said Whitehurst, and will cost approximately $40,000—half of which is being paid from Federal funds.

Scream as Loudly, Stand Heat, Noise, As Well as Men

By Christine Sadler

Post Staff Writer

Philadelphia (Friay), June 28.—Smoke got in their eyes, veils got mixed in with pencils and orchids wilted on their shoulders. But the feminine cheering section of the Republican Party stayed right on the job this morning tallying votes and screaming out their enthusiasms.

Many of them wore dark goggles as protection against the high-powered lights turned on for moving picture companies, and many plainly showed by their looks that they had taken no time out for nose powdering since they arrived at 10 a. m. yesterday.

Should Hitler have been looking in on this demonstration of "democracy in action" he probably would have found the women's part least understandable of all—and no doubt would have been provoked at the trouble some of them had making the numbers come out right on their ballots.

To the girls themselves, however, it was the greatest political demonstration in which any of them ever had participated—and the grandest party.

Never before had they heard a member of their sex nominate one of the candidates for the Presidency, had they taken such a big part in seconding, nor been so influential in the caucuses. Never before had they heard so many feminine voices screaming preferences for candidates.

As Willkie's votes caught up with the "We Want Willkie" cries that had been growing all week, women put into practice all the rip roaring yells they had picked up at football games. Although the younger women and college girls in the balconies had led the Willkie cries all week the older ones joined in this morning.

Mrs. Scranton Yells

Mrs. Worthington Scranton, hostess of the convention and a sedate grandmother, waved her big white hat and stood on her chair to yell when Pennsylvania's 72 votes switched to Willkie.

Mrs. Banjamin Harrison, 82-year-old dowager queen of the Republican Party, had her hat off, too, and her lap full of tally sheets. Former Vice President Charles Dawes was helping her keep the totals.

Mrs. William Howard Taft, stately white-haired mother of Senator Robert A. Taft, came to conventin hall when the balloting began, but left the stage around 10 p. m. Representative Edith Nourse Rogers and a group of friends pooled their tally-keeping ability.

Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth, who was wearing a huge blue hat, seemed solemn and perturbed as the votes began to shift from Senator Taft.

With great inconsistency, women throughout the audience were using Taft and Vandenburg fans even while they yelled for Willkie. Also, some shifting of buttons was in evidence. At least one woman delegate had been wearing a Taft button on her lapel and a Willkie pin just inside throughout the week.

The precedent-shattering speech was made by Gladys Pyle, who placed in nomination for the Presidency the name of Gov. Harlan J. Bushfield, of South Dakota. Miss Pyle was United States Senator from South Dakota for 30 days in 1938 and now is in the insurance business.

Not a Serious Matter

Among her closest listeners were Gov. and Mrs. Bushfield themselves, who didn't take the nomination seriously enough to remain modestly outside the hall while it was in progress.

Mr. and Mrs. Hanford MacNider and their three sons were in the hall when MacNider's name was placed in nomination.

Mrs. MacNider said she thought the nomination speech was marvelous and that, no, she had no fears about becoming First Lady.

Jubilant over the demonstration in behalf of Wendell Willkie, Mrs. Philip Kerby, of New York City, head of the Willkie volunteer women, issued a statement in which she declared Willkie was the man women understand.

"He speaks a language any housewife can understand. Two-thirds of the thousands of women who have been working for us are 'Northern Democrats' or Republicans who swung to the New Deal. He can get them all back and add thousands more," Mrs. Kerby said.

Johnson Finds Big-League Convention a Trying Game

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 27.—Walter Johnson, who was one of baseball's great control artists, came to the Republican National Convention today and—lost control of the situation.

Here's the play by play:

The Big Train former hurler for the Washington Nats arrived in town last night and couldn't locate his hotel. After an hour's wandering, he found it.

He headed for Convention Hall this morning and ran into a traffic tie-up. That made him late for the opening.

At the door he had trouble getting in. Finally he made it. Once inside, he had no trouble in finding the speaker's platform, however.

Ever-modest, the man who has thrilled thousands with his pitching, sat quietly and almost unnoticed in a rear seat.

Finally, in a lull in proceedings, Chairman Joseph Martin called Walter.

The big fellow, whose ungainly stride to any pitching box used to be the signal for a demonstration, ambled to the speaker's rostrum.

His name was announced. Walter blushed and bowed to the applause, which, however, was nothing to what he received, say, in the World Series against Pittsburgh.

Walter was armed with a baseball and a cap—presents for Chairman Martin.

In presenting them he must have gotten his signals mixed, for Walter ended up with the cap on his head and the ball in Martin's hand.

But that isn't all.

While cameras clicked and the crowd cheered, Martin took a perfect grip on the ball and gave Walter a demonstration.

Johnson looked on with marked attention.

"That's the funniest thing I ever saw," said a veteran fan. "Joe Martin showing the greatest fast-ball pitcher in the history of baseball how to throw a fast ball."

The brief ceremonies over, Walter ambled back to his seat.

"Whew," he sighed. "I've been in front of some big crowds and in some pretty tough situations, but this is the worst. How do they stand it without getting nervous?"

The Gallup Poll

Sentiment for Third Term Levels Off After Sharp Rise in Nation-wide Survey

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

Princeton, N. J., June 27.—A Nation-wide study completed early this week indicates substantial sentiment throughout the country for a Roosevelt third term up to the time the Republicans met in Philadelphia to pick their candidate. While the trend of third-term sentiment has leveled off in recent weeks nevertheless 57 per cent of all voters with a definite opinion on the issue said they would vote for Roosevelt if he runs again.

DR. GALLUP

Third term sentiment rose sharply after the Nazi invasion of Holland, Belgium and France last month, then leveled off at the present figure. The trend follows:

"If President Roosevelt runs for third term, would you vote for him?"

	For 3d Term	Against
April	47%	53%
May (After Invasion)	57	43
Early June	57	43
Today	57	43

Approximately one voter in every eight (13 per cent) expressed no opinion.

Laid to Foreign Policy

The sharp increase since April can probably be ascribed to the Administration's foreign policy, since other surveys show little change in public attitude on domestic policies.

Since the President's popularity rose sharply on a war crisis, it may decline with equal sharpness if the crisis subsides or changes. The present situation does not necessarily mean any basic or permanent swing of sentiment toward the New Deal, and the fate of a Roosevelt third term, should he decide to run, is inextricably bound up with the swift and changing events abroad.

Midwest Divided

The fewest third term supporters, the poll indicates, are to be found in the Great Lakes region and in the farming Middlewest. The voters of the South, traditionally Democratic, are willing to vote for a third term by a large majority. Although Roosevelt has for many years been overwhelmingly popular in the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast area in Institute surveys that section is for a third term by only a relatively small margin.

The sectional vote follows:

	For 3d Term	Against
New England	57%	43%
Middle Atlantic	57	43

British Cruiser Docks At Rio De Janeiro

Copyright by New York Times

Rio de Janeiro, June 27.—Rusty and showing large black smudges in its hull and badly needing paint the British cruiser Hawkins arrived here today just as the U.S.S. Wichita sailed for Uruguay. Her guns were uncovered, with ammunition lying alongside and conveyors to feed the heavy guns were filled with shells. Admiral Henry Hardwood was aboard.

The ship5s officers evaded comments on the war or the French gesture. The ship leaves tomorrow.

Beaten Opponents Quickly Pledge Their Full Support to Willkie

Taft, Hoover and Dewey Congratulate G. O. P. Flag-Bearer

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia (Friday), June 28.—Wendell L. Willkie, Republican nominee for President, was pledged the support of his principal opponents for the nomination, in statements made soon after the decisive ballot.

Thomas E. Dewey sent Willkie the following telegram:

"I congratulate you on your nomination as the Republican candidate for President and I pledge you my full support in the fight ahead."

Senator Robert A. Taft telegraphed:

"Hearty congratulations. You may count on my sincere and strenuous assistance in restoring to this country a government based on reason, common sense and business principles."

Herbert Hoover's message said:

"My congratulations. The result of a free convention in a free people will carry you to victory."

Senator Bridges said:

"The Republican Party has nominated a great American citizen and the next President of the United States."

Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, the 1936 Republican Presidential nominee, issued this statement:

"It is a splendid thing that the convention made the nomination without any suspicion of jockeying or trading, and there were no smoke-filled rooms or one-man dictation in this convention. The fact that the convention did not take a lengthy recess from the first to the last roll call is evidence of this.

"The political principles of Mr. Willkie are very much in line with mine. I believe he got the nomination free of any commitments or promises that will in any way hamper him in making a splendid, vigorous, competent Chief Executive."

"POINTED" ARGUMENT IN "MICHIGAN"—Voices were raised many decibles and hands waved among Michigan delegates as an argument grew out of split-voting after the first roll call at the G. O. P. sent conversion to Republicanism.

The people in the galleries drown him with boos. What of Willkie's political antecedents, they seem to ask does a man have to be born in the Republican Party?

They were charging last night, the Taft and Dewey people, that the galleryites who were yelling "We Want Willkie!" were all actors in a dark plot—a couple of thousand Willkie adherents who had been "planted" in the hall to make whoopla for the Hoosier. They were charging that there had been some kind of a ticket scandal.

What, then, about tonight? Are these people who are yelling for Willkie now also members of a political league? And if so, how is that they got in again, and that now there are 14,000 instead of a mere 2,000?

Early last night the Taft managers were predicting that they would get a huge bloc of Dewey's votes quick.

The attitude of the Willkie camp was expressed by Wendell L. Willkie himself.

"The chips are down, and now we'll just have to wait and see who has the better hand," the Hoosier said.

"The situation, as I see it, is that the people want me but the politicians don't. We'll just have to wait and see who's strongest."

When the second ballot showed that Dewey had lost 22 votes and that Willkie had gained 66, the galleries went wild.

The major candidates in the race all remained in their headquarters in the downtown hotels while their fortunes were being decided in convention hall.

Willkie was remarkably calm. In a voice made hoarse by round-the-clock oratory these last five days, he chatted amiably with newspaper reporters who kept the vigil with him.

He said he had steadfastly refused to make any deals or enter into any combination.

"There is not a delegate here," he said, "that anybody can throw around like a sack of potatoes. I don't think any leaders can take any substantial bloc of votes anywhere. I don't like that kind of convention."

Even as Willkie was talking, G. O. P. veterans were passing around word that arrangements had been made to shift a large bloc of votes to Taft.

has the color and force to swap punches with Roosevelt, it will nominate him.

"If it doesn't I'm a 7-to-3 bet to win."

It happened that way exactly. Dewey, after getting off to a spectacular lead, lost 22 votes on the second ballot and 23 more on the third.

Managers of both Dewey and Taft clambered to the platform to second Bricker's motion for an unanimous vote, with Gov. James of Pennsylvania, whose delegation pushed Willkie over, Gov. Stassen of Minnesota, who helped swing it for Dewey, was there, too seconding.

And all the while galleries kept up the same hysterical cheering that marked Willkie's nomination to the convention Wednesday night.

Willkie wired the convention his thanks and Chairman Martin read the wire. Former President Hoover telegraphed Willkie congratulations and Martin read that. Then the convention's permanent chairman, himself one of the 13 Republicans matched in this race, made a pretty tribute to Willkie, forecast a victory, and adjourned the meeting.

The Dewey rumors were wrong. The Taft reports were in error. All of those stories about a deal between the two were slightly mistaken. Willkie, a born and nearly a life-long Democrat, actually did it. Delegates are as much bewildered over the outcome as the old-line Republican Party. Only the galleries were right. They knew it all along.

Through the day and night leaders strove desperately to nominate a Presidential candidate before midnight.

They were fearful lest the ill feeling that developed during Wednesday night's Willkie uproar might be advertised to the country as a deep party split.

They were anxious to show quick unity behind whichever candidate is nominated.

As the convention proceeded to a second call at 6 p. m. the race was still wide open, and dark horse contenders suffered a surge of new hope as the first ballot spread over a field of 13 candidates. Backers of former President Hoover were openly active for the first time, with "draft Hoover" badges. But the only living former President polled only 17 on the first test. He picked up four on the second.

The first cheers of the balloting roared when Connecticut cast the first big block of Willkie votes. The now familiar chant of "We want Willkie" started up again while first ballot votes were being counted.

Following closely the forecasts, Dewey's starting count was the most compact of any candidate, with 35 States delivering him delegates. Twenty-nine States contributed to Taft's runner-up position, while Willkie collected from 24, widely spread.

The first roll call took an hour and ten minutes, slowed down for nearly a quarter hour by two separate polls of the Georgia delegation following a challenge. But Chairman Martin tore through the second ballot in half an hour.

District of Columbia delegates gave Dewey two votes and Taft one on the first ballot, and stuck to this lineup on the second.

Last of the half-dozen Republican aspirants to be nominated before balloting started were proposed in a four-and-a-half-hour lack-luster morning session.

They were Senator Vandenberg, once a leading contender; Gov. James, Keystone State favorite son; Senate Minority Leader McNary, mentioned in some Vice Presidential calculations; Hanford MacNider, former Assistant Secretary of War; Senator Bridges, of New Hampshire, and Gov. Harlan J. Bushfield, of South Dakota. Bushfield disappeared from the running on the second ballot and Bridges slumped from 28 to 9.

All the familiar devices were used to keep morning demonstrations going. But there was nothing comparable to the organized hoopla of last night for Dewey and Taft or the explosive cross-fire of feeling when Willkie was proposed.

Vandenburg was nominated by Representative Roy Woodruff, of Michigan, as "his party's leading and often lonesome Congressional champion throughout the darker days when the New Deal rode high."

Sporadic cheering followed for ten minutes, with interludes of sacred music from the hall organ and singing of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic" and this convention's "God Save America."

At the morning session the longest pep show was the 20-minute strictly Pennsylvania stimulation for Gov. James, with the red-haired candidate's familiar "miner's quartet" giving a lift, and shirtsleeved former Senator George Wharton Pepper leading cheers. Senator James "Puddler Jim" Davis provided flowers in his nominating speech.

Of less general duration was the scattered demonstration for Senator McNary, urbane adviser behind many party councils, who was placed in nomination by Judge William A. Ekwall, of Oregon, former member of Congress. Ekwall asked the convention to nominate a man of no partisan bias and no political malice "who is probably closer to the soil and the grass roots of this country than any other candidate whose name will be presented."

Hardly had Chairman Martin tapped the gavel opening the morning session before MacNider, a former Legion commander, was placed in nomination by Verne Marshall, of Iowa. Marshall said Mac Nider refused to allow a demonstration, saying "horse play can't meet this issue."

The convention recessed at 2:45 p. m. for a rest before ballots after hearing Gladys Pyle, once briefly a Senator, nominate the last of the very dark horses, Gov. Bushfield. It reassembled again at 4:30 for the 2 votes before taking time out once more at 6:30.

As the first session opened, Chairman Martin announced:

"I hope we can select a Presidential nominee by tonight."

In event of a deadlock, Martin said, the convention will take an overnight recess.

"I do not want tired and weary delegates to quarrel among themselves, creating a situation which would reflect to the detriment of the Republican Party," he said.

Pharmacist Found Dead From Drug

A certificate of suicide was issued last night by Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald after an investigation of the death of Arthur Lee Haislip, 28, of 5036 Hanna place southeast.

Haislip was found unconscious in the rear of a drugstore where he worked as a pharmacist at 4407 Bowen road southeast, about 2 a. m. by Norman Mayberry, of Takoma Park, Md., a male nurse who had been attending him.

Shh! A Dark Plot's Afoot—Or Is It?

Every Convention Huddle Mixes Observers' Signals

By the United Press

Philadelphia, June 27.—Rumors of dark plottings, deals, sellouts, ganglings and other conduct unbefitting a politician and a gentleman spread rapidly through this convention city tonight as the time approached for selection of a Republican Presidential candidate.

Possibly a few of them had some basis in fact, but many were the result of that trait of human nature known as "seeing-significance-in-minor-matters." It is a trait that manifests itself in political circles more than anywhere else.

But appearances can deceive. For example:

J. Russell Sprague, campaign manager for Thomas E. Dewey; Col. R. B. Creager, one of Senator Robert A. Taft's managers; Gov. Harold E. Stassen of Minnesota, floor manager for Wendell L. Willkie, were observed in a huddle, and the word spread that "It's a deal." The men came out of the huddle with an agreement for a routine recess.

Gannett Called "Toots"

Willkie rushed out of his headquarters with such speed that onlookers were certain something momentous was afoot. He was going after a bite to eat.

Dewey was reported to have visited former Gov. Alf M. Landon of Kansas. His headquarters even admitted it. But, they said, "it was a social call." It might have been at that.

A woman approached Frank E. Gannett and called him "Toots." It was Mrs. Gannett.

The chief of the convention's police squadron was seen darting through the swinging kitchen doors of the Hall Cafe, and there was speculation that he was looking for bombs as a result of a story published yesterday about a nonexistent bomb plot. He came out of the kitchen with a sandwich.

A man went up to a fellow from Iowa and asked for information about the State's candidate, Hanford MacNider. "Sit down and I'll tell you all about him," said the fellow from Iowa. It was MacNider.

Cry of "Fight" Went Up

A man in the Pennsylvania delegation shucked his coat during a demonstration and the cry of "fight" went up. It was just former Senator George Wharton Pepper getting set to lead cheers for Gov. Arthur H. James.

A youngish looking man was telling his companion in the hotel lobby the reasons Willkie should be President. A Willkie rooter overheard and remarked to the person with him: "See there? Youth is for Willkie." That particular youth had better be. It was 20-year-old Phil Willkie, the candidate's son.

Girl Scout Camp Aides Appointed

Appointment of a registered nurse, a dietician and a waterfront director for Camp May Fletcher, District Girl Scout camp near Harrisonburg, Va., was announced yesterday by Anne McLean, camp director.

Supervisor of the nursing staff is Mary A. Sullivan, surgical nursing instructor at Boston (Mass.) City Hospital. Mrs. Gail C. Wilber, Grove City (Pa.) College dietician, will head the cooking staff, and Phyllis Baldwin, who has served as waterfront director for several years in Girl Scout camps in Maine and Vermont, will be in charge of water activities.

It was also announced that a limited number of girls who are not members of the Girl Scout would be accepted for one of the three two-week periods of the camp, which opens July 1.

Senator McNary Mentioned as Running Mate

thought McNary would be an excellent choice.

There is no question, however, that some of the enthusiasm for McNary is predicated on the belief that neither Senator Taft nor District Attorney Dewey would accept the Vice Presidential nomination.

Dewey has said to friends more than once in recent months that he would not take the Vice Presidential nomination because he couldn't afford it.

Taft tonight said definitely he would not accept the second place nomination.

"I consider the Senate a much better job, a better field of service—and I have just started," he said. "I feel that I can be of more useful service as a Senator than as Vice President."

Furthermore, more delegates declared tonight that Dewey is almost as inexperienced a politician as Willkie and held it unlikely that the convention would name two so-called "amateurs" on the same ticket. In the minds of many, Willkie is a New Yorker—and this consideration, too, would militate against Dewey.

Geographically Right

On the other hand McNary comes—politically speaking—from an ideal part of the country, it was asserted here tonight. To compliment Willkie's Eastern and Middle Western support, McNary, it is held, could swing the West, where he is one of the best known men in public life.

It is true, however, that McNary has never looked with a kindly eye on Willkie—largely because of the latter's favorable attitude toward the Administration's reciprocal trade policies. But as former President Hoover observed, the present state of the world has perhaps relegated the trade agreements to "the heaven of forgotten issues."

McNary's long experience in the Senate and shrewd leadership of the Republicans during the seven "lean" years has impressed itself on the minds of many delegates here.

Other Vice Presidential candidates there are aplenty—and, in the last analysis, the convention's choice will actually depend on Willkie's desire. Since neither he, Stasson, nor Representative Charles Halleck, of Indiana, who nominated him, have indicated any preference as yet, the question is still very much in doubt.

In addition to McNary and the prominent Presidential candidates who were defeated, a real contender for the nomination is expected to be Hanford MacNider, one-time commander of the American Legion, former Minister to Canada, and Iowa's favorite son.

Veteran Favored

A caucus of delegates who saw service in the war was held between the balloting this evening, and it was reported that "the sense of the meeting" was that a veteran should be named to the Vice Presidency—with the emphasis on MacNider.

While McNary consistently commanded the votes only of Oregon during the Presidential race MacNider's support extended somewhat beyond the confines of Iowa for a few ballots at least.

Senator Styles Bridges, of New Hampshire, is a candidate, as is Representative Dewey Short, of Missouri. Bridges may make a strong bid, and it is probable that Short, the "orator of the Ozarks," will gain at least the complementary votes of his colleagues in the House who are also delegates.

Willkie Taught School, Made Steel to Get Start

G. O. P. Candidate Enlisted Day War Was Declared

Won fame as Indiana's greatest poker player.

Wore a red sweater, preached "socialism" from soap boxes, chewed tobacco, begged Clarence Darrow to defend arrested pickets, and championed the poor.

Took all prizes for learning in college.

The Willkies, father, mother (both practicing lawyers), two daughters and four sons grew up arguing night and day about everything under the sun in a three-story maple-shaded frame house, painted two shades of green, in the center of Elwood, in a yard overrun with cows, chickens, horses, dogs, cats and children.

The four Willkie boys (only one smaller than Wendell, who, at 48, stands 6 feet 1 inch tall and a muscular 210 pounds) were a one-family gang. Angry delegations of neighbors, school and civic authorities constantly called to complain of bloody noses and more outrageous depredations. Picture their bewilderment on finding the six Willkie children acting "Macbeth" or "Hamlet" from memory, or surrounded by 6,000 books (a town wonder) wrangling over the respective merits of Dickens and Thackeray.

Willkie's four grandparents were fugitives from Germany, Democrats and liberals defeated in the 1848 revolutions. His father made a tidy fortune speculating in Elwood real estate during a natural gas boom when industries flocked there and nobody bothered to turn off the lights.

The gas wasted, petered out. Elwood's boom collapsed. Factories shut down, banks closed, unemployment, misery and vice flourished. The elder Willkie, acknowledged one of the best lawyers of his time, was debt bound. Willkie, going hand in hand with his father to the wrong side of the tracks, where his father was always defending union members of the poor, formed "an abiding hatred for abuses of big business in relations with labor and the community."

Though the family was hard up, it was early decided all six children must have educations. Wendell sold papers, collected bills, worked in a steel mill and on a Puerto Rican sugar plantation, was a migratory farm worker in California, an Iowa farmhand (he almost married the farmer's daughter); ran a cement block machine in Wyoming, worked in the wheat fields of Oklahoma and Kansas and drove a baker's wagon.

Started As Teacher

Few of his present friends know he was an accomplished shortorder cook, having worked up from dishwasher.

His first romance ended melodramatically. His father headed a reform movement, had gotten after a big, burly poolroom keeper, whose daughter unfortunately, was Wendell's sweetheart. Willkie, all spruced up, carrying a bouquet, was halfway up to the front door when the angry father, bellowing like a bull, came after him without a word of warning. Willkie broke all high hurdle records across five fences and escaped when her pa's pants caught on a fence picket.

At Indiana University, in-between soap box orating and cop-fighting, Willkie managed to get consistently high grades, take an active part in campus politics (occasionally against his schoolmate, Paul V. McNutt) and eventually joined Beta Theta Pi.

After graduating, Willkie taught history at Coffeyville (Kans.) High School. He decided to make history teaching his life work.

But, missing his father, thinking how his father's career had been balked by his economic handicap, Willkie decided to go out and make money so he could be "free." Abandoning history teaching, he went back to Indiana University, took three years of law, won all honors, and started practicing law in his father's office.

In his first day in court, however, he was assistant to his brother, the prosecutor. Their father was defense counsel. Willkie worked weeks preparing the case and delivered an opening for the State—a masterpiece, he thought—lasting three hours.

Exhausted, but triumphant, he grinned at his father and sat down. His father made a one-sentence opening for the defense, and also sat down, having demolished the State's case, by saying:

"I am sure my son will be a great lawyer, because he can make so much out of nothing."

Willkie enlisted in the United States Army on the day war was declared because of his family's hatred for German autocracy. He became a captain and served in France, but, like many soldiers, doesn't like to talk about it, except that after the war he found fiendish glee, as a voluntary defender of court-martialed privates in the A. E. F., in putting pompous brass hats on the witness stand and pulling them apart.

Back, he met Miss Edith Wilk, a librarian, at a wedding party. There was bucolic joshing about the similarity of names. Beginning to be active in politics, Willkie got her a job as librarian, and got himself a job as trustee to boss her. She quit. He asked her to change her name from Wilk to Willkie, "and she's been bossing me ever since."

Almost Snubbed Law

Willkie almost ran for Congress instead of going into law and then business. He had about made up his mind to accept a nomination, but decided to ask the advice of an older friend, Frank C. Dailey, Indianapolis lawyer and Woodrow Wilson's reform prosecutor there. Having waited an hour, he was just walking out to become a Congressman when Dailey hailed him, and got him a job in the legal department of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co., at Akron, Ohio.

Willkie was nothing less than a sensation in Akron. Although he soon became a partner of Mather, Nesbitt & Willkie and tried cases successfully for the railroads, the utilities and leading corporations, he did not buy an automobile (still hasn't one), and did not join the golf club.

They called him the "Bill Borah of Akron" because he went around in his black hats and loose black suits, his piercing blue eyes, wavy brown hair, and flailing arms terrifying the more timid as he spoke publicly "agin" things, and battled and helped break the political power of the Ku Klux Klan in Ohio.

Had Habit of Winning

But his habit of winning cases for the Northern Ohio Traction & Light Co., a subsidiary, attracted the attention of B. C. Cobb, head of the Commonwealth Power Corporation, and Cobb summoned Willkie to New York to help him assemble Commonwealth & Southern Corporation. When Cobb's health failed, he induced Willkie, who didn't like New York, to accept the presidency.

Willkie's principal duty in his new Wall Street job, of course, was to raise money. The depression was on.

Lamont and Perry Hall, of Morgan, Stanley & Co. (Morgan investment offshoot), came to admire Willkie for his "disciplined mind," his wide learning, financial shrewdness, administrative ability and "courage."

Hall marvels at Willkie's quick grasp of a complicated financing problem, especially when it changes swiftly, and admires him because he prefers—for his company—a sure thing to a gamble.

However, Willkie as an individual enjoys gambling, will bet on anything, and will play rummy with anyone for pennies. (His income is around $75,000 a year, of which State and Federal taxes probably take about a third.)

Versatility Noted

Willkie is equally at ease at a "new republic" house party, on the witness stand in Washington at a literary gathering (he is a book reviewer of distinction as well as a frequent contributor to intellectual and popular magazines) or debating before a strange audience.

Wall Street was in more of an uproar than Washington throughout Willkie's fight with the TVA. Leading financiers, brokers and corporation executives begged Willkie to "pipe down for the sake of all of them." He wouldn't. They offered various "settlements" under the rose. Willkie said it would be settled in public.

Willkie just couldn't see it their way. A group of top flight men from Wall Street, including Willkie, were summoned to a White House conference. They didn't like what the President had to say (which was confidential), but none of them said so.

Others there said Willkie, while maintaining respect for the office and character of the President, told in no uncertain terms what he thought. Willkie scared the wits out of the other Wall Streeters, and all the way back to Manhattan on the train they were looking over their shoulders. No thunderbolts struck.

A high source in Washington now says "Willkie's attack on Government power policy during the TVA negotiations was one of the most splendid, most remunerative jobs of shrieking in our times," and "increased by $30,000,000 the price TVA had to pay" for C. & S. System properties. Constantly under governmental fire, Willkie came back with a new plan every time one was rejected, and finally precipitated a settlement by suggesting the Securities and Exchange Commission as arbiter.

Proud of His Record

Willkie is proud of his record as a utility manager. At the bottom of the depression he hired 500 new appliance salesmen, offered bonuses to every employe to sell appliances to sell more power, and was as pleased as Punch when an elevator operator who didn't recognize him made him ride up and down ten times to try to sell him an icebox.

By this, and by his "objective-promotional rate," Willkie lowered rates and increased consumption in the average household in seven years from 600 kilowatts a year at 5 cents to 1,200 kilowatts at less than 3 cents—best of any big system.

Willkie's life in New York centers about his job. He and Mrs. Willkie don't "entertain socially" in the New York sense. Willkie used to take vacations fishing in Canada. Now he doesn't take vacations except for brief visits to his 1,500-acre corn-hog farm in Indiana.

Willkie doesn't do any work on the farm; just talks to the farmers, wearing an old business suit and a sweater. In fact, he doesn't do any exercising, except walking around and talking. But he doesn't seem to need it. When a friend dropped dead recently, Willkie insisted on being examined by a platoon of specialists who said there was a fair chance he could live 150 years.

He usually spends three or four days a week in his New York office, a block from Wall Street; travels around the system in Michigan, the Middle West and the South the rest of the time. He likes to eat, in the office, in a cubbyhole private dining room, bare of decoration. He will order a "sandwich," which means lamb chops and a vegetable, fruit and coffee. But always, too, a plateful of chunks of "rat cheese," of which he is really fond. He smokes two packages of cigarettes a day and likes Scotch highball or two when he's through for the day, usually between 6 and 8 p. m.

No Tailor's Model

He doesn't give the barber any special instructions for cutting his hair long and wavy. Just says, "Not too short." A tailor measures him in the office for his loose-fitting plain dark-blue suits. He wears cheap white shirts with soft collars and unobtrusive blue ties. His black shoes are made to order at the bargain price of $8.50 a pair, but his feet always hurt him—corns.

He gets to the office about 8:30 or 10 a. m. The office is unique for one of the world's biggest corporations. Kindly old men greet regular visitors by their first names, as does Fred Rahter, Willkie's male secretary, who greets each of the 20 or 30 people who call daily. About five from the outside get to see Willkie, possibly 15 from the company.

His private office is almost as bare as a monk's cell. There is a hatrack, a couple of easy chairs, a bookcase with standard reference books, a long table with unread current books and unread company reports. His plain, small desk is usually piled many inches deep with unanswered correspondence, but he can usually fish anything he wants out of the piles.

Doesn't Stay Mad

Willkie has a temper, but never stays mad; always apologizes for losing it. He is absent minded, usually forgets to have any money on his person, which can be inconvenient in New York. Rahter tries to keep him supplied, appeases injured taxi drivers, and carries the roll while traveling.

Willkie's personal manners are ingratiating. His favorite way to spend the evening is with his wife and the Frederick Attwoods. Attwood is vice president of Ohio Brass Co., and the Attwoods and Willkies knew each other in Akron, and have a further tie through their sons. Bill Attwood is head of the editorial department of the Princetonian, and Phil Willkie is business manager. The four see plays, visit the movies (Willkie likes "thrillers"), or listen to the radio, but most of all enjoy arguing with each other.

Willkie doesn't mind a practical joke on himself. One that Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General of the United States, played on him at the home of Lewis Gannett, in Connecticut, is legendary. Willkie, expecting another Government investigation, was hoping for a quiet week-end.

But G-men from Washington kept calling for Arnold long before he got there. Finally when Arnold arrived, he listened in pretended horror to the phone, raising his eyebrows as he looked at Willkie.

Willkie, unable to stand the suspence, broke down and asked Arnold to let him know if he, Arnold, had to prosecute Willkie for something. After several hours, Arnold confessed it was all a joke.

Willkie Rises After Parley In Elevator

Stassen Has to Hide In It to Get Private Word With Landon

Philadelphia, June 27.—Harold E. Stassen, 33-year-old Governor of Minnesota, enjoyed 30 seconds of privacy tonight—in a freight elevator in convention hall.

The young Minnesotan, floor manager for Wendell Willkie, shared the elevator with Alf Landon for a 12-minute conference between the second and third ballots. After that Willkie surged up.

Police slammed shut the elevator doors when photographers began to fire flash bulbs. Stassen and the party's 1936 candidate spent half a minute alone and then let the cameramen go to work.

Stassen divided the rest of his time tonight between rumor-charged corridors and a center aisle seat on the floor, from which he directed strategy in Willkie's sensational battle for the nomination.

The convention keynoter, built like a Minnesota tackle in a good year, plunged through aisles packed with canvassing delegates, reporters and photographers for a fateful series of between-ballot huddles on the floor.

He answered "fine" to some 50 people who asked "how's it going?" He listened quietly to a delegate in seagreen suit explaining "don't get me wrong—I was just trying to take some of the heat off him." He was told by a New York delegate, "I told him what I think, but he's got to make up his own mind."

As Earl Haskin, personal aide to Stassen, put it, "the Governor needs about three more ears."

The two-hour recess between the second and third ballots gave the floor manager his toughest workout. Excerpts from the timetable follows:

6:35 p. m.—Balloting over, Stassen starts off the floor, is detained by delegate who shouts "Hey, Harold." Runs through pages of a black, loose-leaf note book, checking figures against his ballot tally sheet.

6:43 p. m.—Greets delegate from Independence, Kans., and asks, "did you talk to Alf back there?"

6:55 p. m.—Issues statement to press: "We're climbing steadily on a good broad foundation of votes."

7:05 p. m.—Series of false starts in attempt to leave floor.

7:20 p. m.—Disappears into committee room 301 and confers, according to his aide, with "key men" in the Willkie campaign.

(Correspondents watches wrong door, misses Stassen exit.)

8:05—Now in elevator with Landon.

8:19—Out of elevator and back on floor.

8:19.30—Issues statement to press: "No announcement now. Mr. Landon and I had a very fine and thorough review of the situation."

8:40—Talks to Representative Barton, of New York, who seconded Willkie's nomination yesterday, and Mrs. Ruth B. Pratt, national committee woman from New York.

8:44—Third ballot begins.

Stassen rushed to the Kansas seats for another conference with Landon after the third ballot, which carried Willkie ahead of Senator Taft.

The G. O. P. leaders were separated from a score of reporters and photographers by a thin buffer of Iowa delegates.

They talked 10 minutes, while the convention pipe organ played "I've Been Working on the Railroad" and "God Bless America."

Plowing back through the aisle to his own seat, Stassen issued a final bulletin to the press: "Let me through."

Plan, Not Approved Yet, Would Recruit All Under 18

National officers of the American Legion have formulated a program for participating in the Government's national defense setup through organization of an "army" of private citizens 18 years of age or older.

Details of the plan, which was to have remained confidential until the legion's national executive committee had a chance to vote upon it, leaked out last night when prominent legionnaires in Maryland and the District voiced objections.

Members of the national committee in Washington and elsehere, it was learned, received drafts of the program from national legion headquarters in Indianapolis after weeks of consideration by leaders of the organization and after consultation with ranking Government officials in Washington.

The plan calls for making the national commander of the Legion, a post now held by Raymond J. Kelly, of Detroit, commander in chief of the "army." Legion members would officer the citizen defenders, who would be recruited from even the smallest communities.

In Maryland, opposition to the plan came chiefly from Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commander of the Maryland National Guard, and J. B. Hobbs, past commander of the Maryland Department of the Legion and now a member of the national committee, the Associated Press reported.

Two national committeemen from Washington, James B. Fitzgerald and Joseph Malloy, also a past department commander in the District, declined to comment. Fitzgerald said he would discuss the proposal with Kelly at Elizabeth, N. J., Saturday.

Malloy, who was found at a meeting of the executive committee of the District department, said he would withhold expression of judgment until the national committee had a chance to act. This view was seconded by William T. Slattery, district commander.

Duties of the "army" would be to promote interest in military training and in recruiting for the military services and for the civilian air corps, to make surveys of strategic points and plan for their defense, support defense plans of the Army and Navy and assist in education of the public, aid also in "blackout" tests and in operation of the draft and to cooperate with civic organizations in controlling "fifth column" activities.

In opposing subversive groups, it was stated, the "army" would seek to discourage the organization of vigilantes or other "direct action" groups.

Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, former chairman of the legion's national defense committee and commander of the District National Guard, was opposed to the plan, but only because he felt "creation of a volunteer organization would cause confusion in the defense plans of our Army and Navy."

Army Must Command

"In times of national emergency," Gen. Cox said, "we must have a supreme command. It would be all right to form volunteer groups to aid in recruiting, but the policy must be laid down by the Army. The arming of volunteer organizations would not be of benefit to the country."

As reported by the Associated Press, Commander Kelly's plan calls for a completely military organization, led and operated along Army lines and following the Army drill regulations.

It would be armed only if arms were issued it by Federal or State governments, but it was suggested that surveys be made to determine where arms could be obtained in event of emergency. Local officers, also, might decide to use privately owned weapons in training.

Communities under 2,500 population would be assigned a company of 59 men and two officers. Cities of 50,000 or more would have a battalion of 472 men and 22 officers for each 25,000 population.

The special legion committee that drafted the program conferred with the then secretaries of War and Navy, Woodring and Edison, and with Attorney General Robert Jackson, J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, and top-ranking officers of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

The committee was advised, the Associated Press reported, that the Federal Government could not, under the circumstances, direct such a home defense program but that cooperation should be sought with State governments.

One of the highest Army officers reached for comment in Washington last night said the Kelly plan "sounds like a fine program." He declined to be quoted by name until he had an opportunity to study the full program.

Senator Morris Sheppard, chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, said that "anything the Legion proposes will be given earnest consideration by the committee."

They corresponded when he went abroad "on business" and continued their friendship that autumn, when she was taking her master's degree in English literature at Columbia University, New York.

Dallant's courtship, the complaint said, was broken by other "business" trips, but finally Mrs. Dallant went to Japan and they were married. Their honeymoon trip, which she supposed to be controlled by business but now believes to have been a spying expedition, took them to Tientsin and Shanghai, China, to France, England, Austria, Germany and at length to Russia.

Threatened in Russia

Mrs. Dallant said that in Russia her husband left her alone at their hotel for days, where she was terrorized by Russian agents and soldiers who cross-examined her until she was hysterical and who threatened her relatives with harm if she pried into her husband's business.

After their return to New York, Mrs. Dallant said, she realized that her husband and Dozenberg, the Communist agent, were the same man and they separated. She said Dallant came back to her once, and she gave him $1,260.

Mrs. Dallant asked for a divorce for cruelty if she was not entitled to an annulment, for restoration to her previous name of Frances Davis DeLawder and for custody of her 2½-year-old daughter, Ruth Whittlesey Dallant.

Chilean Press Warns On Cartel Proposal

Copyright by New York Times

Santiago June 27.—The traditional fear of the United States exerting an overpowering influence in Latin America, forgotten for the moment in the face o fthe Nazi menace, is gradually reawakening here.

This is revealed by numerous articles in the Chilean press tending to lessen the importance of the fourthcoming Pan American meeting at Havana and emphasizing that the delegates must not commit themselves before the Congress of each country approves the resolutions after careful study.

According to the Frente Popular, the United States is now moved by a spirit of imperialism and is "trying to establish political and economic control of these countries, taking up the remains of European imperialisms destroyed in the war."

Reported Offering To Let Britain Keep Most of Empire

By the Associated Press

New York, June 27.—Important industrial and financial circles today said they were seriously considering the possibility of early peace in Europe.

Usually well-informed business sources with important international connections said they had received information through neutral countries of a peace offer by Hitler to England, on a basis which these circles considered might be found acceptable.

This information, which they said they considered reliable, indicated that the offer was on the basis of leaving Britain with some 95 per cent of her present empire, but calling for internationalization of Gibraltar and Suez.

(In Berlin, report of peace overtures were laughed off as "nonsense" in informed German sources, while in London, Herbert Morrison, British minister of supply, said in a broadcast to the empire, Britain would "hold on and hold out in the very jaws of the enemy, while the rest of the civilized world mobilizes its resources for victory.")

(Later in the evening the following official government statement was broadcast from London: "The British government has not changed its view of the conditions necessary for peace, and there is no sign that the Nazi government has changed its character, or that it has repented of those crimes which the British Empire is out to redress.")

This peace report was the most definite of several heard in Wall Street and in business circles during the day.

Despite denials abroad, many market and businessanalysts in Wall Street were trying to calculate what the repercussion upon the American economy of a peace in Europe, with Germany in control of most of continental Europe, would be.

Conclusions were varied, but among them were:

American armament spending would continue in huge volume, tending to offset possible cancellation of British orders.

The immediate effect, however, might be some slackening in industrial operations and a decline in sensitive markets.

Europe, however, with a huge deficit in food and peacetime supplies, would soon be anxious to make large purchases here, particularly of farm products.

Means of payment might be difficult, inasmuch as America already holds about three-quarters of the world's monetary gold, and is strongly opposed to barter with Germany.

An intensive competition for foreign markets might ensue, with American manufacturers having to face low prices made by a regimented, Nazified European industry.

How severe the competition would be, would depend upon whether the Reich would try to hold down labor for cheap production, as in the past, or would seek to increase living standards of their workers.

Some Wall Streeters expressed surprise that reports indicated the initiative came from Germany, and, if this were true, they said it might well indicate that the Reich is concerned over its problem of maintaining essential supplies, or may be worried about the moves of its "partner," Russia.

Germans Hit Back for Raid On Oil Bases

Bombs Are Dropped Over Wide Area Of British Isles

Copyright by New York Times

London (Friday), June 28.—The German air force struck once again at this country early today following an exchange of hammer blows yesterday and Wednesday night in which, according to official assertions here British bombers inflicted widespread damage on enemy military objectives while German fliers accomplished little, although they strewed bombs in districts of Scotland, England and Wales during raids yesterday morning.

The alarms this morning heralded sudden pandemonium with anti-aircraft guns blazing away, the noise of bombs exploding and the distant growl of airplane motors in the skies, while civilians scurried for shelter.

When the raid began reports from various points were meager, stating only the districts where sentries along the coastline had spotted the sky invaders.

Losses Are Even

The British admitted that their aerial attacks on air bases, oil refineries, factories and railroad freight depots in Germany and Holland had cost them three planes but said on the other hand that German raids on this country this morning resulted in destruction of three enemy planes and severe crippling of a fourth.

One British raid against the enemy was carried out during daylight today, and stressing this fact British officials pointed out that the steady series of German visits to this country had been carried out only at night.

Two civilians died of heart attacks brought on by the excitement of sirens screaming, antiaircraft guns roaring and bombs exploding when the German planes soared over Britain this morning. Other casualties were slight and no serious damage was done, it was announced jointly by the Air Ministry and the Minister of Home Security.

Oil Refinery Hit

In the daylight raid over Germany today, the Air Ministry said, British bombers scored direct hits on an oil refinery at Misburg, near Hanover, starting several fires. Other R. A. F. bombers attacked refineries at Bremen and a factory at Salzbergen, but the result of these attacks was not stated. All planes engaged in these flights have returned to their bases safely.

This morning a British fighter patrol flew over parts of conquered France, where they encountered German fighter planes. A dogfight ensued and one German plane was shot down and another was seen hurtling to earth out of control.

Kennedy Gives U. S. Nationals Final Warning to Quit Britain

By Robert P. Post

Copyright by New York Times

London, June 27.—With the announcement that the steamship Washington is heading for Eire to take off United States refugees, United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy today issued a final warning to all United States citizens to go home aboard that ship as a last resort.

"My advice to Americans who do not have any urgent reason for remaining here any longer is, 'Go home,'" the Ambassador said. "The Government cannot continue to dispatch vessels and their crews into belligerent waters to accommodate those who persist in remaining in the danger area."

Obviously Her Last Voyage

Apparently this additional dispatch of a United States ship is considered to be the last. Saying that the embassy is unable to give permission to United States citizens to travel on British ships, Kennedy said: "The Government cannot be blamed for assuming that those who do not leave now are prepared to stay for the duration of the war, come what may, and stay at their own risk. . . . Americas citizens are advised that traveling on belligerent vessels is against the laws of the United States and that the embassy is therefore unable to grant permission for such travel."

There are still a large number of United States citizens left here and this number will undoubtedly be augmented by a number of United States-born women who married Britons and have now resurrected their passports and are trying to get back to America with their children.

1,500 Waiting to Sail

Undoubtedly many others will try to get to the United States the same way, but there are at least 1,500 bona fide Americans waiting to go from here and it is doubtful whether many others can be accommodated on the Washington.

Apparently the ship, which is already making almost as many "last appearances" as an opera prima donna, is not available as a general refugee ship for British children—few real Englishmen are trying to use her that way.

Nevertheless it is obvious that if any number of British children are to be taken out of the way of German bombs, United States shipping must help in the process.

Britons Look Ahead to Order Of 'Forward!'

Second Cabinet Officer Pledges Offensive Efforts

By the Associated Press

London, June 27.—Britain, already preparing to defend herself against invasion, was told by her leaders today that the time is coming when the order will be changed from "hold fast" to "forward!"

It seemed increasingly clear the French Fleet and field units were going to fight on England's side, regardless of France's surrender.

The second promise from a member of the government that there would be an offensive as well as a defensive effort came from Minister of Supply Herbert Morrison.

"Long-Range Policies"

In a report to Commons, which later held a secret session to consider his words, the minister declared:

"We have concentrated (thus far) quite properly on immediate production. But we are not going to forget the long view.

"We all hope that this period of the last few weeks will in due course change, and we must think of long-term policies and of offensive as well as defensive policies."

"Very big" orders for raw materials, he said, have been placed in the United States.

War Minister Anthony Eden already had told the people that there would be a day "to sally forth from the fortress to the attack."

But Lord Beaverbrook's Evening Standard declared that England as a "fortress" is "unfortunately not yet much more than a phrase," and urged a speed-up of the tempo of defense.

Neutral naval observers said Adolf Hitler "obviously" would mass submarine transports, fast torpedo boats and "mosquito" troop carriers along the coast for a naval assault on England.

De Gaulle Goes Ahead

Indications that this was being done were given by the German radio as early as June 24, when it was announced that Grand Admiral Erich Raeder had inspected German naval units in Belgian, Dutch and French waters "to assure himself of the state of preparedness of these units against England."

French Gen. Charles de Gaulle worked urgently in London with a growing staff to establish a French legion, and set up a French center for armament and research and a non-political French national committee to coordinate French policy.

He announced receipt of "definite information" that Gen. Charles Catroux, Governor of French Indo-China who was said by the Bordeaux French government to have been recalled, would fight any invasion of that French possession.

De Gaulle said, too, that Gen August Nogues, French commander in chief in northern Africa, was taking "all necessary steps for organizing resistance."

Important French fleet units, refusing to surrender as ordered, were reported to be assembling at north African ports to continue the fight with the British navy.

Casablanca, in French Morocco, and Algiers, in north Africa, on the Mediterranean, were concentration points.

Still other French ar vessels apparently remained in the British-controlled port of Alexandria, Egypt.

Kipling Outsells Shakespeare As 1,500 Jam Postoffice Auction

HORSE COLLARS AND HAIRBRUSHES went on the block yesterday at the District Postoffice's annual "dead letter" sale. Top—A part of the crowd of 1,500 bargain-hunters. Chinese Table Scarf For $5.25 Proves Best Bargain of Day

Shakespeare took a beating at the District Postoffice's auction sale of dead letter articles yesterday as 1,500 bargain hunters had a field day—buying everything from kitchen implements to pajamas, and even a horse collar.

The crowd apparently was not literary-minded, for a handsome set of Shakespeare's complete works went on the block for only $2. Kipling's works sold for 50 cents more, while a set of volumes on modern business brought the sum of $4.

Best bargain of the day, according to Charles Kracke, of the dead-letter office, who has been auctioneer at the sales for the past 15 years, was a finely knitted imported Chinese table scarf which brought $5.25. Kracke said if he were a good judge of values—and he admitted he was—the table decoration must have been worth $100. Irony of the sale was that another woman who had her eye on the Chinese importation was first on hand when the doors opened and waited to bid only for this article. She lost out by 25 cents and departed in disappointment.

$4 For Milk Can

A ten-gallon milk can brought $4, while the same was paid for a five-foot hand scythe. One lucky woman obtained a vacuum cleaner for $7.50 and another apparatus of the same make, minus the handle, sold for $3.50.

A horse bridle went for $1 and the collar sold for $3.

"We never have an auction without something pertaining to a horse," remarked the veteran auctioneer. "I'll tell you though, the people aren't the same," he volunteered. "We used to have millionaires come here to buy things for the poor. They must be dying out."

At least one enterprising businessman made a profit from the auction right on the premises. He bought a lot of 12 suitcases for $10.50, then went out in the hall and sold ten of them for an average of $3 apiece.

Youngster Buys Sled

One of the happiest purchasers was Wallis Alvers, 7, of 3218 Thirteenth street northwest, who outbid several other young colleagues to walk off with a sled at $3. Alvers was on hand early, but had to wait until midafternoon when the sled came up as article No. 92.

Officials said most of the 600-odd articles were sold for unusually low prices. It was all on the "cash-and-carry" basis and purchasers had to furnish their own containers.

Twelve pairs of slightly damaged pajamas went to a young man for the sum of $3.50. Another bargain was a flaming red evening gown cut along glamour girl lines, which was purchased by an attractive brunette for $1.

Ford of Canada Pledges All To War Effort

By the Associated Press

Windsor, Ontario, June 27.—All the facilities, resources, man-power and equipment of the Ford Motor Co. of Canada and the overseas affiliated Ford companies are making every possible contribution to defense of the British Empire and the successful prosecution of the war, Wallace R. Campbell, president of the Canadian Ford organization, said today.

Seizure of Ford Canadian property by the custodian of enemy property was advocated in the House of Commons at Ottawa yesterday by M. J. Coldwell, acting leader of the cooperative commonwealth federation, because of Henry Ford's refusal to make airplane motors for Britain in his United States plant.

Recalls Assurances

"At the outbreak of war I assured the Canadian government that Ford Motor Co. of Canada, Ltd., would make all its facilities available for the production of essential war supplies," Campbell said. "We have done that. Last night I reaffirmed the Ford position in Canada in a telegram to C. D. Howe, minister of munitions and supply."

Campbell said he had discussed the matter with Ford, personally, after he had received reports of the debate on the question in the House of Commons.

"Mr. Ford realized fully that all the industrial resources of a nation at war automatically become available in defense of the country in which they are located," he said. "In his statement to the press last night Mr. Ford said that Ford companies in the British Empire are serving their people as they should do."

He said that the Canadian Ford plant is particularly well fitted for the production of motorized transport.

"Even before war was declared, on the request of the Canadian government we laid the groundwork for military production," he said. "Since the beginning of the war nothing has been left undone to produce as quickly as possible equipment specified by the government.

"More than 50 per cent of the production of our Windsor plants consists of vehicles for military use. This percentage is rapidly increasing. We are supplying the British Empire with a total of approximately 35,000 of these units. Of this total nearly 10,000 are for the Canadian government and 25,000 are for use by other empire countries such as South Africa, Australia and India."

Campbell said the Canadian plant is being rapidly tooled for the production of universal machine gun carriers. These will be supplied to the Canadian government at the rate of 50 a week when production gets into full swing within the next few months.

Italy Shows No Intention To Oppose Russia in Balkans

By the Associated Press

Rome, June 27.—Italians tonight viewed with detachment the Soviet ultimatum to Rumania, demanding Bessarabia, another border region, and control of two ports. The press displayed the news objectively, without comment.

In spite of the fact that Italy once viewed with evident alarm any extension of Russian influence in southeastern Europe, foreign observers for a long time have concluded that Italy would do nothing to help Rumania.

Sympathy for Revision

As a matter of fact, Italians have shown sympathy for revisionist claims by Hungary and Bulgaria on Rumania.

Numerous Italians living in Rumania have been coming home recently.

[A United Press dispatch from Athens, Greece, declared that it was reported there that a huge Italian trans-Atlantic liner, accompanied by several smaller ships, had entered Santa Quaranto, Southernmost Albanian port, 15 miles north of Corfu.

[It was felt, the dispatch added that Italy thus might be moving forces to the Greek-Albanian frontier in answer to the Russian threat to the Balkans.]

Heavy new bombings of Malta, Britain's fortified island in the western Mediterranean, were reported by the high command.

"Intense destructive action" by waves of planes which attacked "air and naval objectives" was announced here.

[A distpatch from Valletta, Malta, however, said 23 persons were killed yesterday and many others wounded when the Italian planes, in one of five attacks, dropped bombs in a working-class section]

British Base Shelled

The Italian authorities also announced a warship bombardment of "considerable effect" on the British naval base of Sallum, on the Egyptian coast near Italian Libya.

They reported repeated Italian air raids on British military objectives "in northern Africa," and minimized the effects of British air bases on Massawa and Assab, Italian East Africa.

[From Cairo, the British military acknowledged that Italian troops and tanks had occupied a British frontier post betwen British Somaliland and Ethiopia, after a four-hour fight. However, British patrols from Kenya Colony were stated at Mairobi to have pushed 20 miles into Italian Somaliland without meeting resistance.]

Roosevelt Signs 8-Month Relief Bill For $1,157,711,357

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt signed into law today a $1,157,711,357 bill to finance relief for at least eight months, beginning July 1.

The measure provided a basic $975,000,000 fund for the full 12 months of the fiscal year but contained a provision which would permit the President and the WPA to use it over an eight-month period if they believed it necessary.

Congress earmarked $35,000,000 of the total for national defense projects.

The bill contains new restrictions against aliens on relief rolls and retains the recent provisions that at the end of 18 months, persons on relief must be dropped from the rolls.

It also contains a $50,000,000 fund to aid European war refugees and provides for machinery by which CCC enrollees may be trained in such noncombatant work as cooking, engineering and communications.

Nazis Profess Disinterest In Rumania

Britain Their Only Concern Now, Say Berlin Spokesmen

By the Associated Press

Berlin, June 27.—Germany and England exchanged raid for raid against each other's industrial and munitions centers as European eyes tonight turned speculatively toward the Balkans, where Rumania submitted to a Russian ultimatum stripping it of Bessarabia and northern Bucovina.

Nazis professed indifference to the Balkan developments and kept their emphasis on the main goal—England. As in the recent Russian troop movements into the Baltic states east and north of Prussia, German sources said the Reich was "disinterested" in the Russian-Rumanian affair.

Britain the Goal

Attention of press and officialdom was directed toward the promised forthcoming attack on England. It was repeatedly emphasized that England will pay "5 to 1, 10 to 1, 1,000 to 1" for injuries to Germany's population in what the high command described as Britain's random bombing of nonmilitary objectives.

That Germans were beginning to feel the effect of Britain's air attacks was indicated in the rising clamor for "thousand-fold" retaliation. In one night, newspapers said, 371 bombs fell on German soil, exclusive of the hundreds dropped on Holland and other German-held territories.

Quick on the heels of the Franco-German armistice, German troops moved southward along the French coast, where the extensive coastal railway system expedited their movement, toward contact between the German army and the Spanish border. Thus the whole French Atlantic coast will be available for Germany in any contemplated action against England.

In the face of the German occupation, the British raided the German-held coastline the night of June 24-25, but the high command reported easy repulse of these "weak enemy naval forces."

Otherwise all was quiet on the Western Front.

Berlin newspapers called attention to the fact that tomorrow is the twenty-first anniversary of the signing of the treaty of Versailles.

Hitler's Volkischer Beobachter commented that, with most of France occupied, the rest under German surveillance and England facing the German war machine alone, "Versailles is dead."

Nazis Assail De Gaulle

By the Associated Press

New York, June 27.—The German radio broadcast a message to the French people today warning them against enlisting in Gen. Charles de Gaulle's proposed French foreign legion, according to a broadcast picked up here by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

The text of the broadcast follows:

"Gen. de Gaulle, a soldier whose reputation as an expert is gauged by a number of pamphlets written in his study and whose moral reputation has been irretrievably shattered by his ignoble flight to London, has broadcast an announcement that he is organizing a French foreign legion in Great Britain.

"Frenchmen would be well advised to avoid any connection whatsoever with his legion.

"The armistice terms make it perfectly plain to every Frenchman that he is no longer entitled to fight against Germany or Italy. If he should do so, he lays himself open to all the penalties provided by international law against civilians who take part in hostilities.

"In view of the fact that the armistice terms had been published by the English press and the British Broadcasting Corporation only in misleading summaries, it shows an utter lack of responsibility on the part of Gen. De Gaulle, if he tries to persuade those countrymen who must rely on British sources of information to make an unjustifiable sacrifice and to undertake risks no honest and courageous soldier of whatever nationality would ever suggest."

with a Cuban proposal that governments in the Americas seize territory and shipping of belligerents in the Americas. He described the move as laying the groundwork for freezing shipping of France and Nazi-dominated neutrals as their money assets in this country have been frozen, should that be deemed necessary.

As a hypothetical case, he said if the Normandie should be ordered back to France, the Secretary of the Treasury would be authorized to hold her in New York until he could determine the origin of the orders and the ship's ultimate destination and to detain her indefinitely should the "ship's safety" appear endangered.

Meaning Explained

In the language of a White House statement explaining the proclamation:

"The powers which are made available by today's proclamation include the promulgation of regulations, subject to the President's approval, governing the anchorage and movement of vessels and, with the consent of the President, taking possession and control of any vessels if necessary to secure them from damage or injury, or to prevent damage or injury to United States harbors or waters, or to secure observances of the rights and obligations of the United States."

In addition to the Normandie, 83,423-ton luxury liner, the British Queen Elizabeth, 85,000 tons, is tied up in New York Harbor and across the river at Hoboken is the Holland liner Nieuw Amsterdam, tied up since May 14. The Queen Elizabeth, still uncompleted, made a dash from England to safety here last March.

Many Ships Affected

Four French freighters also are tied up at New York, as well as a Norwegian freighter leased by France, 28 British vessels, 32 Norwegian, 9 Danish, 6 Dutch, 4 Belgian and 5 Italian.

Other French tonnage in United States ports includes a tanker at Chester, Pa.; another at Corpus Christi, Tex., and one freighter at New Orleans, two at Los Angeles and one at Miami.

No authoritative list of shipping of other belligerents or Nazi-dominated neutrals was available last night, though a Maritime Commission attache made an unofficial guess at 500 scattered among United States ports. These included 16 Italian vessels in these waters June 8 when Italy declared war.

Other defense developments:

President Roosevelt signed a $1,768,913,000 bill for emergency Army and Navy needs, conferred with members of his Cabinet on his plan for Western Hemisphere economic solidarity, and went over progress of the Advisory Defense Commission's work.

Uniforms Bought

With approval of the emergency defense appropriation, the Army placed orders for nearly 1,000 armored scout cars with the White Motor Co., of Cleveland. They are to cost $5,387,500. Contracts for sufficient cloth for 1,500,000 uniforms were divided among three-score concerns.

Keel-laying ceremonies for the first 45,000-ton battleship ever built by any nation were held secretly at New York.

The Navy, meanwhile, was ready to give the starting signal for work on 68 new warships to cost $750,000,000 as soon as the Chief Executive approved legislation to speed shipbuilding by setting aside the normal requirement of competitive bidding.

The scout cars armed with machine guns, are designed to carry out some of the functions of horse cavalry before the days of mechanized warfare by scouting for information under fire.

The Army also gave a $428,736 order to the Midvale Co., Philadelphia, for gun tubes. Officials said it was the first substantial order given a manufacturer for such ordnance since the World War, as guns have been made in the last two decades only in Army and Navy arsenals.

When the Defense Commission members left the White House, William S. Knudsen, member in charge of production, said that he expected a decision within a week from the Packard Motor Co. as to whether it would undertake manufacture of engines for America's fighting planes.

Henry Morgenthau, jr., Secretary of the Treasury, said at his press conference that "in fairness" Great Britain should share in the production of Rolls-Royce airplane motors in this country, rather than because of any agreement between the two governments.

Ford Order Canceled

The national defense advisory commission on Tuesday disclosed that it had to cancel negotiations with Henry Ford for a 9,000 joint British-American engine order when Ford refused to make motors for any country other than the United States.

"The rights to the engine belongs to the British government," the Secretary said, "and I just don't see how they can be shut out on their own property."

Morgenthau disclosed that Maj. Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief of the Air Corps, "had desperately tried to get some Rolls-Royce engines" and when he was unsuccessful turned to the Secretary, who said he could help through the Allied purchasing mission, headed by Arthur Purvis.

Social Security Site Also to House Part of War Dept.

By Edward Ryan

A "dark horse" has crashed through and captured the "title" to the new Social Security-Railroad Retirement Building, it was learned last night.

Winner is the new National Defense Advisory Commission, although parts of the War Department will share the victory, with the prize to be delivered about September 1.

For nearly a month rumors have been current and undenied that the War Department would get the prized building. Last night the rumors had turned to fact—although the order was not yet official. W. E. Reynolds, commissioner of public buildings, said the decision would be made this morning.

The decision, it was indicated, now involves simply signing papers needed to make the transfer official.

Social Security Willing

Consolation prize for the losers was the fact that the names of their agencies still are attached to the building. This consolation may be good for some, since, it was pointed out, the transfer will be on a "temporary" basis, while the emergency continues to make urgent the space problems of the defense agencies.

The prize, while valued highly by officials of the Social Security and other agencies, was not hotly disputed. Social Security wanted the new buildings but was entirely willing to give preference to defense needs. What they appeared more concerned about was getting a quick decision so they could start revising their own moving plans.

Their own change of plans, it was reported, has already been ordered. Preparations to move the wage record office of the Social Security Board from Baltimore to the new Washington building have been canceled. Instead officials have started negotiating with owners of their Baltimore quarters for more space and better working facilities.

The new plans keep the Social Security and Railroad Retirement agencies split up among a dozen Washington buildings.

Opening About Sept. 1

At the same time, it saves—for the present, anyway—the Social Security Board a mammoth moving job, one of the biggest ever planned by a Federal agency. The task meant moving about 4,500 employes, tons of equipment, and 50,000,000 wage records from Baltimore to Washington—all without interrupting the work or damaging the records.

The new Social Security Building, at Third and Independence avenue southwest, was originally planned for opening about January 1. Opening date has now been pushed up to September 1, with the aid of a $500,000 deficiency appropriation.

It will give the Defense Commission and War Department about 900,000 square feet, nearly triple what the War Department expects in its own new building, now going up at Twenty-first street and New York avenue northwest. The latter, first unit of three that are planned, is scheduled to be ready about July 1 next year.

The War Department employes have already expanded to a World War temporary building at Nineteenth and C streets northwest, and to a reconditioned warehouse at First and M streets northeast. The Defense Commission has crammed its headquarters into the tiny Federal Reserve Building, and has room for some employes in the Munitions Building.

A double guard is being thrown up by the Patent Office to insure stricter secrecy for new inventions important to national defense or safety.

Biggest change, awaiting the President's signature on new legislation, will give Patent Commissioner Conway P. Coe authority, formerly used only in war time, to withhold patents for as long as "the national interest requires."

Plans call for a joint board of patent officials, and representatives of the War and Navy departments, to determine what patents are to be kept secret. The measure is to be effective for two years. It guarantees investors whose patents are held back the right to recover damages through the Court of Claims or by settlement with defense officials.

Second move has been to call in the building passes of all employes, except for a few officials—a move designed to protect both employes and the agency, it was pointed out. No patent secrets have been revealed, no employes are suspected, and the limitation of building passes came as a normal administrative action, officials said.

'New Moon' Will Charm Lovers of Lilting Music

MacDonald-Eddy Costarring Vehicle Brings Melodious Score and Extravagant Romance To the Screen at Loew's Palace Theater

"NEW MOON." Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the operetta by Oscar Hammerstein 2d Frank Mandel and Laurence Schwab, with music by Sigmund Romberg, adapted to the screen by Jacques Deval and Robert Arthur, costarring Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy, with Mary Boland, George Zucco, H. B. Warner, Grant Mitchell, Stanley Fields, Richard Purcell, John Miljan, Ivan Simpson, Claude King, Cecil Cunningham, George Irving, Edwin Maxwell and Winifred Harris. Produced and directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Previewed Tuesday, June 18. At Loew's Palace Theater.

BELL

THOSE WHO CAN DO with the extravagances of a typical "comic opera" plot for the sake of a wealth of delightful music delightfully sung, will find something greatly to their liking in "New Moon," opening this morning on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater, with Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy costarred. To the tin of ear, insistent on relentless logic and high integrity in their drama, the pretentious work will not be quite so impressive, save in the magnitude of its physical dimensions.

But this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the old stage piece by Oscar Hammerstein 2d, Frank Mandel and Laurence Schwab, with music by Sigmund Romberg, was not produced as drama, but as optical operetta. Its music sails both the high seas and the high C's, splashes through the Louisiana bayous, bobs up in woodland glades and even moves indoors on occasion. The songs are ten in number and include the gems from the original Romberg score, Handel's Largo and a few Negro choral ensembles that lend fine variety to a carnival of music that is better than that usually heard from the screen.

Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy never have been in finer voice than in this latest of their costarring vehicles. Miss MacDonald is especially happy in "Rondolet," "One Kiss" and "Lover, Come Back to Me" and Mr. Eddy lends rousing gusto to "Stout Hearted Men" and the "Shoe Shine Song." Together, they make a memorable interlude of "Wanting You" and each, also, has opportunity to be heard with the male and choral ensembles. So much for the best part of the picture.

The story is one of those amiable and unbelievable romances, in which a French lady of noble birth falls in love, aboard ship bound for New Orleans, with a handsome young nobleman with a price on his head—or was it the guillotine?—masquerading as a bond servant, to be auctioned to the highest bidder in the new world. So Charles is knocked down on the block to Marianne and in the capacity of house servant becomes both her social mentor and lover—he having been one of France's most glamorous rakes. From that situation, the imperial cops hound Charles into a lusty revolt, escape by ship, a storm at sea, to end all storms at sea, and the setting up of a cooperative community on a Robinson Crusoe Isle in the Caribbean—or somewhere. Then France is declared a Republic, the charges are quashed and all is well—except credibility.

The stars are supported in all this by one of the most imposing casts every assembled for this sort of thing. Mary Boland is the mainspring of most of the film's meager comedy; George Zucco is the hound of the law; H. B. Warner, a kindly padre; Stanley Fields, chief of Charles' bloodthirsty henchmen and Cecil Cunningham a perceiving and acid dowager, who promptly sees through Marianne's magnificent "mesalliance."

Grant Mitchell, as the Governor of Louisiana—this was before the "Second Louisiana Purchase"—Richard Purcell, John Miljan, Ivan Simpson, Claude King and a host of others supply support in full accord with Robert Z. Leonard's flamboyant direction.

The short-reels are conspicuously on the comic side, without the operatic embellishments. Pete Smith conducts another of his I. Q. tests, with amusing and enlightening results and "The Milky Way" is a gay cartoon flippancy, in color. The latest release of the "News of the Day" is about what you would expect, the times being what they are, and completes a bill primarily dedicated to the best the lighter screen has to offer in the way of song.

United Press Hollywood Correspondent

Hollywood, June 27 (U.P.).—Having filched personal correspondence from 50 wastebaskets, we are in a position today to detail the inner workings of 50 movie actresses' minds.

Some of them don't think at all. The others—boy!

It seemed that Director Preston Sturges called in the 50 to serve as stenographers in a big office scene of action in a movie entitled "The New Yorkers." Sturges said, furthermore, that he didn't want his typists pecking out the alphabet. He said there doubtless would be real stenographers in the audience and they would detect phony stenography.

So his 50 stenographers typed all day. At 6:30 p. m., when the whistle blew, they wiped the yellow make-up from their faces and scrammed. It was then that we obtained the evidence. Some of it was torn in small pieces and had to be put together like jig-saw puzzles. Other documents were wadded with chewing gum. Some were crumpled and some were smeared with lip rouge. We got 'em all.

Art Gets a Letter

One of the movie typists wrote to "Dear Art," with spelling and commas as follows:

"You could never guess where I'm at honey, this will be a surprise. I'm working. Realy, it's wonderful. I'm supposed to be a typist in a grate big office at Paramont studio. We sit here by the hours with nothing to do and get payed for it this is the life I only wish I could do this more often."

"Al Dear" was addressed a 2,000-word screed which said, in part:

"This isn't a bad job at all. All you do is walk in and sit down and play around on this typewriter. I love the way they ring the bell and have us file in like school children. Then on the second bell we all sit down, all 50 of us. Oh, joy. They finally got a shot. After lunch we shall play around together, ringing the bell.

"I get a big bang out of Joe. I think at one time I was afraid of him. Once I thought he was a wolf. Now I think he's a lamb. Whoo! Whoo!

"Now about the war. People killing people. It is much nicer for people to love people. Give me love.

"Our director has just brought everyone on the set candy. He is a dear. What shall I write about next? I've got to keep writing. I can't stop.

"Oh, dear! One of my very secret desires just passed by, but he won't give me a tumble. My, but it is getting warm in here. It is now 3 o'clock and they are about to make the second shot of the day."

Skip Down to Here

Skipping 1,500 words, or two hours more, we pick up later in the same letter:

"This is becoming very dull. I wish they would make a take. Nuts! Oh, it's okay. For a while they thought Dick Powell had walked too fast and got lost. Gee, I wish I could get up and walk around. I'm paralyzed from sitting . . ."

We couldn't find any more of that one. One of the torn pages said:

"If I get to heaven and you're not there, I'll paint your picture on the golden stair. I'll paint it so beautiful and so fair that even the angels will stop and stare."

"Please explain your recent absence, for which we understood you owe us 2½ days since Paramount went out of business," typed another actress in red ink. Still another covered page after page with "On nuts, oh nuts, oh nuts," repeated ad infinitum.

"I'd like to hug you like a big black bear," one steno began before she changed her mind and inserted another sheet of paper. Another one wrote:

Comes a Pi-Line

"The very thought of you, Dan, gives me the quertyuioppasdfghjklzxcvbn."

"Dear Bob," wrote a lady who probably was a blonde. "We are supposed to be secretaries in an office, so I must appear very important and businesslike. Did you drive by our house Monday night and slow down and go on by and not stop in? Right now a man has come up and has proceeded to shine a light in my eye."

"I like to be well dressed when I go out for supper parties," wrote one of the actresses in a note presumably intended for Santa Claus. "Would like some rabbit skins that look like ermine. Also need several hundred evening gosn. I look best in evening clothes. From now on you had better be good, or else."

We could go on quoting actresses' private thoughts indefinitely. But you get the idea. When a movie actress thinks, she really thinks, only you can't tell about what.

The Belle of Old New Orleans

as she appears in the role of Marianne, the flirtatious young noblewoman, opposite Nelson Eddy, in "New Moon." This Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picturization of the Sigmund Romberg operetta opens this morning on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, June 27.—Donald Meek, whom we've grown to love, told me in discussing acting that the tricks which stage producers tried to work out of players now become mannerisms and an asset to screen actors. "That eye-compelling stunt of going up-stage to catch a fly, or pulling out a hanky when the other fellow's talking, now have a cash value. Ronnie Colman has a trick of turning sideways and looking at you like a horse. Lionel Barrymore pops his eyes, sniffs, dilates his nostrils, like a stallion at dawning, and can out-snort anybody—even Brother Jack.

HOPPER

"Muni holds your attention by holding his glasses between his thumb and forefinger and then peering over them like grandpappy just before he was about to pop you one. I'm a son-of-a-gun by being gentle, and become a menace when I try to live up to my name. Fonda tries to scare you with his hushed, dynamic voice. But after seeing him dressed up as clown, I know he's hiding behind a mask of comedy." John Carradine listened in on this tirade, then pulled himself up inch by inch like an elongated caterpillar and said, "You're wound up like a top and can't be depended upon, except morally," and walked away.

Word got around that Oscar Serlin, who produced "Life With Father," had signed to produce for Jack Warner. I got Serlin on the phone just before he left for New York—he says it isn't so.

"Episode" has been renamed "My Love Came Back"—maybe because Olivia de Havilland kissed and made up with her studio, came back to work. Anyway, my spies tell me the sneak preview was something to shout about.

Jean Arthur, since April 1, has been living a quiet ranch life just outside of Tucson. After her day's work in "Arizona," she walks barefoot on the lawn, dunks the body in a pool, then becomes a patio-sitter and stargazer. She sees that animals on the set have fresh water and that there's clean water in the duck ponds.

When she saw goats nibbling on cacti, she ordered hay sent out to them. Goats continued to nible cacti. An orphan burro adopted her—Jean leads it around on a leash. She became anxious about 28 homeless dogs and decided to give a dog show at the swank hotel. Place was jammed, there was ice cream and cake for everybody, and even chow for the dogs. Prizes were given, uniformed assistants attended each mutt, officials from the Kennel Club were judges. When it was over, each dog had a home, with a three years' paid-up license. And Jean contributed $300 to the local charities. That's what I call a good-willer worker.

They had quite a time on "The Return of Frank James" set, while Henry Hull, Henry Fonda, and Gene Tierney waited for a climactic courtroom sequence. The crew was two hours getting a bit player, who had gone berserk, down from the rafters.

Our latest craze is a little thing invented by Arthur Murray called "Walking the Plank." It's a sort of tug-of-war between male and female, and they give you enough rope to hang yourself.

People talk about Hollywood being grown up. "We never will be," says Billy Haines, "until some of our people learn that a Duncan Phyfe isn't something you play on—but sit on."

I found Mickey Neilan looking wonderfully well, while he was visiting George Marshall on the set of "The Daltons Ride Again." Mickey's forgotten more gags than our new producers will ever think of. I still wonder why somebody doesn't give him a job—especially now, when laughs are worth $1,000 apiece.

Bigamist!

'Edison' Moves To Columbia This Morning

Spencer Tracy Plays Adult Inventor in Worthy Picture

Spencer Tracy returns to F street this morning as "Edison the Man," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's companion film to its "Young Tom Edison," which starred Mickey Rooney earlier this season. The Columbia Theater presents this feature after a week at the Capitol.

"Edison the Man" is concerned with the young and struggling inventor and from the facts as revealed in the film, Thomas Edison was not long a struggling inventor. The film's climax—the invention of the electric light—came comparatively early in his life and had already been preceded by a series of practical contributions to human communication. The head of Western Union, Gen. Powell, quickly rewarded the intellectual curiosity of the young stranger who stepped into a technical breach.

Well produced, with telling dignity if not with historical exactitude, "Edison the Man" is outstanding for its exceptional acting. Spencer Tracy's playing of the title role is the sharply chiseled portrait one expects from one of the screen's most capable actors. Charles Coburn, Gene Lockhart, Rita Johnson and Lynn Overman are outstanding in other leading roles.

RKO-Keith's

Still affording laughing audiences exhilarating escape from the grim actualities of the present day of wars and political conventions, "My Favorite Wife" goes rollicking into a third hilarious week at RKO-Keith's.

With Irene Dunne, Cary Grant and Gail Patrick in the pivotal roles—numerously and competently supported by a fine comedy cast, led by Granville Bates, this item deserves the popular success with which it has been met. It is one of the top comedies of this or any other season.

Also continued on the bill is the new March of Time release, "The United States Navy—1940," which becomes of additional interest in view of the present mystery surrounding the movements of the fleet.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Hollywood, June 27 (INS).—Walt Disney and Bob Benchley have been in excited conference over an idea for a full-length Technicolor feature, combining live action and animation. The new Disney plant, which is the pride of Walt's life, would serve as a setting and Benchley would portray a befuddled new employee wandering from department to department. In other words Benchley would serve as a comic excuse for showing the fascinating inner workings of the most elaborate and up-to-date cartoon studio in the world.

In addition to the live action sequences in which Benchley—and the public—finds out how cartoons are made, there will be preview flashes of scenes from forthcoming Disney gems.

Up until a few days ago, Producer Harry Joe Brown and Director Irving Cummings were still clinging to the hope that Cesar Romero would be well enough to go into "Down Argentine Way." But when it became apparent that Cesar would be ill for some time yet, there was a hot and heavy search for an actor to replace him. Result of all tests is the amazing choice of Russian Leonid Kinsky to play the Argentine gigolo, who escorts Betty Grable and Charlotte Greenwood. Seems Kinsky gave the role a humorous touch which went over big in his character and comedy bits but this is his best break to date.

There was considerable comment about Rita Johnson's gracious, womanly performance as Mrs. Edison in "Edison, the Man." I have heard it compared to Greer Garson's unforgettable, Mrs. Chips. In any case Rita's studio, M-G-M, is very pleased with her. Her contract has just been taken up and she will be given the femme lead in the James Hilton story, "Rage in Heaven," yarn, which concerns love and British politics, is not new, but was printed way back in 1932. (The way things are moving these days, eight years constitute a whole era.)

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Joan Crawford writes friends she'll be back about the middle of July; t'other afternoon, at Hollywood Park, Jobyna Arlen had tickets on four 90-1 shots and one of 'em, Vain Crystal, came in to the tune of $185; June Collyer Erwin made a hatful the same day on "Our Bud." She bet it because it's her brother's nickname—as good a reason as any; the Carmel Myers Blum Red Cross-Hollywood Guild shindig was an enormous success with 1,200 more ticket-buyers than there was room to accommodate. Ty Power practically got mobbed, Gracie Allen, Simone Simon, and Lola Lane did yeoman work collecting contributions and Penny Singleton's Blondie personality drew chuckles when she modeled in the fashion show.

Bob Preston lunches in the Paramount commissary with his present heart, Kay Craig, and then goes back to the "Moon Over Burma" set to make movie love to his former flame, Dottie Lamour; the Don Ameche offspring is due in two weeks. Don, who has three heirs, is hoping for an heiress but his studio, TCF, is probably rooting for "Four Sons;" Gable and Lombard, Bill Powell and Bride Diane Lewis, Kay Kyser and Ginny Simms, Eugene Pallette and Irishers Jim Cagney and George Murphy were all at the ball park t'other eve rooting for the Hollywood stars.

Alec Templeton, whose triumph over blindness is an object lesson to all, writes a friend that he's taking dancing lessons at the Arthur Murray Studio in Chicago; Walter Pidgeon's back from a Catalina jaunt looking veddy tan and handsome.

That's all today.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 27.

NORMAN CORWIN, who was responsible for "The Pursuit of Happiness" broadcasts, has signed his film contract, and will write and assist in the direction of "Two on An Island" . . . The Pullman Co. is threatening to withdraw its car from the Railroads on Parade exhibit at the Fair—because of the strip-tease scene which has been inserted . . . Artie Shaw is planning to be guest-conductor of the Philadelphia Little Symphony, in the fall . . . Paul Draper, Bobby Clark and Tess Gardella will be the probable line-up for the new Rome-Schrank fantasy, "The Little Dog Laughed."

FRANK CROCKER, head of the Terrace Club, sent to Fefe's new Cafe Pierre one case of port of 1830 vintage, to be served whenever he dines there—as an indication that he'll be a steady customer . . . Albert Spalding has signed for a new CBS program, in which he will not play the violin. Spalding, defending Symphony in the "Battle of Music" program, will oppose Frankie Myers, the 18 Club comic, in oral argument . . . One of the few remaining speakeasy-warning systems now in operation is used at the Ford Building's executive lounge, at the Fair, where the newspapermen congregate. Because Henry Ford, who objects to drinking, frequently arrives without advance notice, an alarm-system has been evolved, to warn of his arrival.

BARRY TRIVERS, the screen writer, employs as his house-boy an American-born Japanese youth who is a student at the University of California in Los Angeles . . . The boy recently was admitted into a U. C. L. A. fraternity, during the Hell Week initiation. Every pledgee submitted to the tasks delegated, but the cruelest one was assigned to the Japanese boy. Before he could secure his fraternity-pin, he had to go to the Douglas Aircraft factory, carrying a Leica, station himself at the gate, and for 5 minutes peer through the finder of his camera.

KIRSTEN FLAGSTAD: Walter Slezak is telling of his father, Leo Slezak, who once appeared in "Lohengrin"—wherein he was to make the customary entrance astride a swan. Slezak became involved in a discussion in the wings, and the prop-swan went past him and onto the stage. The distraught Slezak was shocked, turned to one of the stagehands, and asked: "When does the next swan leave?" . . . CRITICS CIRCLE: Morris Gest, who duplicated his famous Chauve-Souris curtain for his Midget Town presentation at the Fair, has added a new twist. He has placed the names of all Manhattan's notables, in embossed letterings, on all reserved seats . . . ANNE MORGAN: Barbara Bannister was guest of honor at Leon & Eddie's, where a percentage of the receipts was scheduled to go to the Allied Relief Fund. That percentage amounted to $300—the exact amount Barbara presented, in tips, to the musicians, bartenders, etc.

TIFFANY'S: Swifty Morgan, the sportsman, traveler and currently engaged as a jewelry salesman, approached J. Edgar Hoover and offered a tempting ring for sale. "Because you're doing such a wonderful job," Morgan spieled to the G-Man, who was hep to his game, "and because all America is proud of your accomplishments, I'm going to make a sacrifice, and sell you this ring for only $100. No more than $100" . . . "Is it worth that much?" asked the suspicious Hoover . . . "That much?" Swifty replied. "Say—the reward for its return is almost $1,000."

TRIUMPH: Dudley Field Malone attended two testimonial dinners given to Harry Hershfield, at which small medallions of the guest of honor were presented as souvenirs to the guests . . . When Hershfield met Malone later, and was asked: "Would you consider your testimonial dinner a success? he replied: "Yes—as soon as the guests found out that the medallions fitted the slots downstairs in Grand Central Station."

CHANGE: The bondholders at the World's Fair are suggesting that one change in the motif be introduced very soon—that interest in the foreign pavilions has been reduced by the fact that so many of the countries represented are at war, and that, therefore, it would be more advisable to have a patriotic theme coursing through all the activities in the amusement sector. As a result, parades will be held there regularly, with bands blaring American themes, etc., as an expression of the waves of patriotism sweeping the country.

FERVOR: Tallulah Bankhead, wearing a red, white and blue belt on which are emblazoned the imprints of France and England, raged against the enemies of the Allies and against all Communists undermining our institutions . . . "But, Tallulah," someone suggested, "suppose the Communists enter the war on the side of the Allies?" . . . "It still goes," she affirmed. "But in that case I might pretend that they've changed—and I'll just call them Socialists."

FINANCE DEPT.: Al Lackey, Sophie Tucker's husband, went to London in 1922, and on the first day of his arrival he was permitted to enter a dice game conducted by his friends at the Savoy Hotel . . . Lackey lost all his ready cash—$2,500 . . . Broke and disconsolate, he was fortunate enough to meet a Britisher to whom he once had been introduced. Lackey confessed his plight, and asked for a 50-pound loan . . . "Sorry, but I have only 40 pounds with me," the Britisher stated, delivering the money to Al. "So I'll owe you 10 pounds . . . Lackey didn't repay the loan, and finally saw the Britisher, years later, walking up Broadway . . . "Hello, there," Lackey greeted. "How long does a guy have to wait before you pay up a 10-pound debt?"

Star Buys Acres On 'Thrift' Basis

Irene Rich is rapidly becoming a rancher by what she calls her "thrift savings" plan.

Originally she purchased a few acres near Hollywood. Since then she has added to them, an acre at a time. Each time she visits the ranch it means a visit to the realtor's, because between visits she has saved enough money to add that other acre to her holdings.

Her house is on a hill overlooking a valley, and the actress, currently seen in "The Mortal Storm," plans to continue adding on until the whole hill is hers.

Candy Feast

For two full days Rita Quigley pulled and ate taffy for party scenes in "Susan and God." Then, the night of the second day, she was invited to a party at the home of one of her young girl friends. And the feature of the evening was a taffy pull.

Actress' Garden Hobby Prospers

Minna Gombell thinks her gardening hobby is in a fair way to becoming a business venture.

On the "Boom Town" set, she told the cast that the call to portray "Spanish Eva" in the picture came when she was building her first hothouse as part of her "flower industry." From a single gardenia plant, Miss Gombell added, she had expanded the garden to a solid half-acre of perfect gardenias. She also has an abundance of camellias.

'First' Picture

Although Director Frank Borzage and Frank Morgan have been friends for years, and fellow members in any number of Hollywood organizations, "The Mortal Storm" marks the first time that they have ever been associated in the production of a film.

Cinematic Brothers

Two offspring of famous acting fathers, Wallace Reid, jr., son of the silent star, and Victor Kilian, jr., son of the character actor of stage and screen, team as brothers in "Gold Rush Maisie."

Racing Expert

Paul E. MacPherson, member of the staff at the Santa Anita and Hollywood Park race tracks, served as technical adviser on racing sequences of "One Came Home."

Work In Russia

It is hard to realize that only a few years ago international conferences were being held for the purpose of securing universal reductions in hours of labor. The panacea most generally urged for unemployment was progressive reduction of the working week and working day. Indeed, American labor leaders still cling to that formula, although even Russia has arrived at the point of ordering abandonment of the five-day week and calling for a longer working day.

The lengthening of working hours which is now taking place under the compulsion of heavy rearmament programs shows the folly of assuming that the world is suffering from a chronic excess of man power. Advocates of greater leisure for workers through reasonable restrictions upon hours of work will rightly deplore the necessity of modifying the liberal standards that have come to prevail. But the situation in many countries permits of no choice. That is most strikingly shown by Moscow's announcement that the 48-hour week is again to become the standard.

The Russian worker, more than before, will become an enslaved employe of the state, subject to imprisonment if he quits work or shifts his job without permission. It has long been apparent that the Communist-controlled dictatorship, although supported by the industrial proletariat, has deprived the workers of liberty of action, making them cogs in a vast machine, just as in Germany and Italy.

If Russia is to have more airplanes, guns, and other paraphernalia, the fact that workers produce for the state instead of for a private employer does not obviate the need to work harder and longer to obtain these things. That is the gist of the explanatory statement issued to the Russian workers. Efforts are made to sweeten the bitter pill, however, by contrasting the Russian worker with the laborer who is forced by the "thumbscrew of capitalist exploitation" to toil ten, twelve or more hours daily.

The people are also asked to believe that their country, "true to its policy of peace," is arming only for purposes of defense. But to the world at large actions speak louder than words. Words cannot hide the fact that workers who once toiled feverishly to execute economic plans designed to raise living standards are now laboring to further the expansionist plans of a militant dictatorship.

Banning Prison Goods

The Ashurst-Sumners Act of 1935 prohibits the shipment of prison-made goods across State lines in violation of State laws. The Senate has recently passed another bill sponsored by Senator Ashurst which would ban all interstate commerce in prison-made goods, regardless of the willingness of the States to receive them. The Randolph bill passed by the House forbids, with minor exceptions, the sale within the District of goods manufactured by prisoners at the District Reformatory and Workhouse.

Legislation designed to prevent the products of prison labor from competing unfairly in the open market with goods produced by free labor is entirely justified. But sweeping prohibitions upon all sales of prison-made goods, which in effect doom prison populations to idleness, are cruel to the inmates and inimical to the public welfare. That fact is not changed by the common practice of sponsoring these anti-social measures in the name of labor as a protection against unfair competition.

Reasonable prison management requires that all prisoners be employed at useful work that makes their existence more endurable, reduces the danger of riots, and trains them to become self-supporting members of society. Multiplying legislative restrictions upon sale of prison goods have created serious problems for many State institutions. Idle men, who formerly would have been usefully employed helping to earn their keep, are embittered and demoralized by weeks or years of inactivity, often given over to study of criminal techniques.

That is why District officials are protesting against the Randolph bill and seeking to secure exemptions for the District under the Ashurst bill. If these two measures should pass, the District's rehabilitation program would be virtually wrecked. For sales outlets for the products of a prison brick plant, foundry, clothing mills, shoe factory and other plants would be cut off.

Would the few jobs for free labor created by closing these factories compensate for the damage that would be done by condemning prisoners at Lorton and Occoquan to idleness? Leaving humanitarian considerations entirely aside, no progressive community can afford to deny men behind bars an opportunity to learn habits of work that may convert lawless and dangerous individuals into self-sustaining free men.

Republican Platform

A key to the Republican platform is to be found in the "pledge of good faith" appended just before its conclusion. Nominees of the party will be bound, "as a matter of private honor and public faith . . . to be true to the principles and program herein set forth." When such a pledge is exacted, the platform itself must necessarily be general enough to give a potential Republican administration latitude in which to work out its policies.

For the most part the G. O. P. was content to denounce the New Deal and to state its own aims in terms of principle and desired objectives. Many groups within that party will be disappointed because various planks were not more forthright and positive. But everyone knows that vast political organizations, like the Republican and Democratic parties, must indulge in compromises and seek a middle ground on issues that are highly controversial within their own ranks.

The most significant compromise came in the drafting of the plank on foreign policy. A strong effort to make this plank completely isolationist was defeated. As it stands, it would leave a Republican administration ample latitude to work out reasonable and constructive measures for guidance of the United States through this critical period of world history.

Republicans who drafted the platform and approved it are primarily concerned with defense of the Western Hemisphere. For this purpose they favor the development of an invincible system of defense. At the same time they "firmly oppose involving this Nation in foreign war." There can be no reasonable dissent from these objectives. In dedicating the Republican Party to these basic points of foreign policy the Philadelphia convention faithfully reflected the wishes of a large majority of the people.

While the pledge of aid to "peoples fighting for liberty" is not specific, it would leave a Republican administration free to pursue any policy of assistance not in violation of international law or the requirements of our own defense. A regime committed to avoidance of foreign war could scarcely go further than that. And in drafting a platform to guide the Republican Party for the next four years, the convention certainly should not have limited its pledge of such aid against aggression to any one country.

The sensible and moderate tone of this plank was dropped, however, when the platform-makers pompously declared: "The Republican Party stands for Americanism, preparedness and peace." It is absurd for any party to claim a monopoly on Americanism, on interest in national defense or peace. Preparedness to meet any national emergency is not a partisan issue, as Congress has amply demonstrated in recent weeks. Any attempt to make political capital out of that issue will be properly resented by the thinking public.

In some respects the weakest plank in the platform is that dealing with agriculture. Production control by the Government would be abolished, but benefit payments would continue, especially to "family-type farms." Bounties are favored for some crops not now produced in sufficient volume to supply the American market. Except for the commendable demand for an independent cooperative farm credit system, this plank makes only one point clear: A large stream of subsidies would continue to flow farmward under a Republican regime.

Among the more positive planks, that favoring administration of relief by the States, through a system of Federal grants-in-aid, stands out. Extravagant promises to veterans were fortunately avoided, as was commitment to the unconstitutional antilynching bill before Congress. Tax revision to encourage industrial recovery and employment is promised, but the G. O. P. refuses to face the equally imperative issue of broadening the base of the income tax.

At several points unwarranted criticism is heaped upon the Roosevelt Administration. "Instead of leading us into more perfect union," says the platform in reverting to the preamble of the Constitution, "the Administration has deliberately fanned the flames of class hatred." Of course, the "more perfect union" referred to by the founding fathers was political and not social. The centralizing measures sponsored by the New Deal have unquestionably drawn the diverse parts of the country into closer unity whether or not that is regarded as desirable.

Particularly inaccurate is the reference to "one-man tariff making." Anyone familiar with the Hull reciprocal trade agreements knows that they were carefully negotiated by experts after hearings and extensive analyses of domestic industries affected. The cause of intelligent debate on vital issues would have been better served if the Resolutions Committee had concentrated its attention on clarification of its own position on tariffs and foreign trade.

Nevertheless, this platform is an improvement over many on which candidates for both major parties have stood in many campaigns of the past. It contains a large measure of sound political doctrine. It is generally liberal in tone. It presents a vigorous challenge to the Administration and an alternative trend of policy that will permit voters to make a clear-cut choice in November.

Balkan Grab Bag

For some years King Carol II of Rumania managed with considerable skill to trim his nation's sails to every prevailing wind of military power and diplomatic prestige that blew in Europe.

As long as it was possible for him to pursue such a policy safely, he was pro-Ally for, like Rumania, Great Britain and France wanted the status quo preserved. He veered to a pro-German line whenever, as in the days following the Munich Pact or, more recently, after the fall of Paris, Hitler appeared irresistible. During the first months of the present war he tried to keep an uneasy balance between the contenders.

At all times Carol's purpose was the dual one of keeping Rumania at peace while, at the same time, preserving intact the frontiers she had secured at the end of the World War. But the turn events have taken in Europe during the last weeks compelled the Balkan monarch to choose between the two aims.

Faced by a peremptory demand from Russia for the cession of Bessarabia and Bukovina and control over the Black Sea ports of Constanta and Tulcea, Carol decided to capitulate rather than to fight. His choice was determined, no doubt, by the circumstance that, without outside support, such a struggle on Rumania's part would have been hopeless. And with France destroyed, Great Britain fighting for her existence and Germany in no present mood to challenge the Soviet Union, Rumania would have had to fight Russia alone.

Extensive as these concessions to Russia are, they may not mark the end of the territorial disintegration of post-1918 Rumania. For there are other claimants to Rumanian territory. There is Bulgaria, which has long clamored for the return of southern Dobrudja. There is Hungary which has never abandoned her claims to Transylvania, ceded to Rumania after the last war.

Whether and to what extent Rumania will have to give way to these demands will wholly depend on the attitude of the three powers which now control the destinies of the Balkan states. It is reported that Hitler has assured Premier Teleki of Hungary that the territorial claims of the Magyars against Carol's kingdom will be met. Russia, for her part, may see to it that Bulgaria gets her long-desired slice of Rumanian territory that was once Bulgar. But any territorial gains by Hungary and Bulgaria at this time will be little more than Dead Sea fruit, like Poland's acquisition of Teschen after Munich.

The barriers are now down in the Balkans. Apparently with the acquiescence of Germany and Italy, Russia has gained a foothold in that region. How much further she will go will depend no doubt on the progress of the battle of Britain which, for the time being, is certain to absorb the energies of the Third Reich and Italy.

Russia's expansion in the Baltic and now in the Balkans reflects an inner uneasiness as to the effect of a Nazi victory on her fortunes. As against an ultimate day of reckoning with Hitler, Stalin is trying to build up strategic outposts. For should Hitler win his struggle with Great Britain there is more than a remote possibility, and Stalin knows it, that the Ukraine with its wheatfields and mines will lure the Fuehrer.

Home Rule—For Hawaii

As America's defense problem grows in magnitude, the significance of the Hawaiian Islands increases. They are our most important outpost in the Pacific and shelter our greatest naval base.

Under the circumstances it is not surprising that the Republican resolutions committee saw fit to include in the platform adopted at Philadelphia a plank declaring that Hawaii, which shares "the Nation's obligations with the several States, is entitled to the fullest measure of home rule; and to equality with the several States in the rights of her citizens and in the application of our national laws."

This plank is obviously a compromise between those who have been favoring statehood for Hawaii and those who believe the status quo in the islands should remain unchanged. The compromise points in the direction of something resembling dominion status for Hawaii. It is interesting, and for residents of Washington somewhat disheartening, that the praiseworthy action taken with reference to Hawaiian grievances was not paralleled by similar action regarding the District's claims for home rule.

Refugees At Greenbelt

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The news article which appeared in a local paper this week stating that 25 refugee children will be accepted at Uncle Sam's "Utopia" at Greenbelt, Md., is very interesting indeed.

It brings back to my memory about August, 1938, when I was trying desperately to find a place I could call home for my wife and five children—previously having weathered the depression of about three years under conditions which is now horrible in my memory to think of.

At the date mentioned I was happy in thinking that the position which I had just received would enable me to rehabilitate my family.

But my happiness was short lived. I applied for housing at Uncle Sam's "Utopia" and was told that my salary was sufficient to meet their requirements, but that I had one too many children.

I failed to understand that language of kindness that Mrs. Chasanow says exists there. The environment I had to accept because of five children did not rehabilitate us. Now I am unemployed.

Need For Deity

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am quoting from your editorial "Horror As Yet Unveiled," its last paragraph, addressed to the intelligence of man, which is, "if there is any real statesmanship left anywhere in the world this final assault on the inner substance of European civilization will be averted." Part of those same peoples of Europe have now changed that "substance" into the idea of communism, part to Naziism, both of which ideas are doomed to failure according to Miss Thompson's diagnosis, and the rest know it as "democracy," which also, according to this same political philosopher, is a still-born idea perhaps, a "corporation without soul." My answer to all these all-important questions is that we must look for the cornerstone of understanding, which is a more comprehensive concept and statement as to the nature of Deity, since that controls our subconscious reasonings, deliberations and outward acts.

Compulsory Military Training

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of the strongest arguments in support of a system of compulsory military training that I have seen appeared in a news item in The Post of June 22. This item stated that a convention of delegates of the Christian Endeavor declared nonresistance to be the best defense, and sang: "I don't want to march with the infantry, ride with the cavalry, shoot with the artillery. I don't want to fly over the enemy, I want to be friendly."

It is evident that these young people have somehow acquired the notion they can continue to enjoy the benefits and at the same time escape the responsibilities of maintaining our American way of life. I do not know to what extent this group speaks for the membership of the society, nor to what extent such sentiments are representative of the sentiments of a cross section of young America. We have also recently heard from the American Youth Congress. There must be a large section of the youth of this country that has not been heard from as yet. However, I suggest that it is time for a careful examination of the factors that seem to be weakening the stamina of the younger generation.

The question as to whether the ideas of young people can properly be conditioned under governmental control in a democracy brings the answer that, in default of such conditioning, they will be and are being conditioned by influences that contribute no strength or vigor to our democracy. A passive democracy cannot survive in a world of dynamic totalitarianism.

BYRON C. BIGGS.

Washington, June 24.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Has the compulsory military training bill been carefully and thoughtfully worked out or is it just a "brain child?" Is it conceivable that anyone, whether married or single, between 21 and 31, can take care of his obligations on $5 a month, even with the Government furnishing "room and board?" What of the possessions one has accumulated over a period of years—are they to be ruthlessly disregarded? What about a person's job? After training, what? Will legislation be enacted forcing employers to hold jobs open? If jobs are not held open what then? Another two or three million on relief? Do not all these things—compulsory training, disregard of the individual's possessions, forcing employers to hold jobs open—border on the totalitarian state?

I realize as well as the next one that America must be armed and prepared. I realize also that we must have money to carry out this huge armament program. Taxes will go up—and should. But why burden the Nation with additional taxes to cover the cost of feeding and housing millions who are training? Would not schools centrally located where training can be carried on systematically serve the same purpose?

MARGARET TUCKER.

Washington, June 25.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: From many radio broadcasts and newspapers we hear and read vituperative outbursts against President Roosevelt's idea of giving our American youth a period of military training.

I believe this is an excellent idea. The youth of America would be immeasurably benefited morally and physically by this program. Stooped, slouchy shoulders would be straightened up and dulled potentialities developed. It is axiomatic that most of our youth have grown up "soft."

America cannot depend upon the school, church or home to adequately instruct its youth with the proper spirit and attitude toward the country. The school program covers a prescribed book curriculum which does not embrace compulsory military training. The church has an opportunity once a week to teach spiritual truths, such as love of God and man, far removed from the idea of war, to those few who attend. Because propaganda is contagious, many homes are pervaded with adverse criticism toward the plan.

President Roosevelt, I feel confident, has no idea of emulating European dictators, but any wide-awake layman is forced to recognize what forced military training combined with imbued hate for all but their own country, has done for Hitler. Our methods would be quite different, but we must learn lessons from our hostile adversaries.

RUBY GRESH.

Washington, June 25.

Speak Softly And . . .

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Speak softly and carry a big stick." That was the profound advice of an earlier Roosevelt. It was good advice when given—it is good advice now.

The sooner and the bigger we cut our club, the better—especially the sooner. If we are not attacked within the next 12 months we stand a good chance of not being attacked at all—unless Germany conquers both England and the Soviet Union, in which case Hitler could in time outbuild us by a sufficient margin to make our successful invasion likely.

To prevent this we should give all possible aid short of war to England now, and if necessary to the Soviet Union later on.

To "speak softly" this time would mean to offer a new set of 14 points, including redistribution of colonies, equal access to raw materials, freer movement of emigrants and capital, and complete destruction of that crazy-quilt of high tariffs, quotas and currency manipulations which wrecked international commerce and helped bring Hitler into power.

Deplores Hatred

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In the terms imposed on the French there was a high degree of fair play; there was no effort to humiliate; there was absence of the vindictive spirit.

After we have been inoculated with venom of hatred for some years past we may feel some respect for the forbearance of the conquerors. Paris and many other cities were spared; and the advance of the German forces was not marked by cruelty or brutal disregard of humane principles.

It seems to me that it would be far better for the American people to observe what marks of clemency they may, rather than to listen to the tirades of hatred. We have to live in the same world with the Germans.

The Stassen Speech

To the Editor of the Post—Sir: It seems to me an unfortunate irony that Mr. Pegler's column on the "cruelly tricked G. O. P." came out in the same edition of The Post which carried the full text of Gov. Stassen's Republican keynote address. That speech was to me a perfect example of how forceful criticism of the New Deal's failure in domestic policies can yet be subordinated to the call for national unity in face of the world crisis. Such an attitude on the part of the Republicans, if consistently maintained in the process of writing a platform and naming a candidate (who I fervently hope will be Willkie) should not be called "mere recrimination and destructive and purely partisan politics in the presence of the common enemy."

The Post Impressionist

Mark Of Valor

There was perfectly wonderful arrangement in the school yard. A tall iron pole was set in the ground and from its top were suspended chains on which the children could swing in great circles. This "giant swing," as they called it, was unchallenged as the playground favorite—its popularity approached only by a nearby and forbidden freight yard. Just now it was afternoon recess, and the chains creaked under a capacity load of shrieking youngsters.

Some 30 feet to one side, two large blue eyes looked wistfully out from under a thatch of hair so blond as to be almost colorless. Whitey heaved as large a sigh as a very small frame would permit, and scrunched back further against the school yard fence.

It was his first year at the public school, and it had been a year of unending terror. The school itself was huge and awesome. His teacher could be described the same way. But the school yard and the hundreds of noisy persons who filled it during the recess periods were so terrifying as to make the classroom a haven. Whitey had never seen so many children in his life; their numbers had overwhelmed him, had frozen him within himself. And he was a stranger, an alien. No one knew him nor made any effort to.

The other children didn't even pick on him much any more. They had at first, but Whitey wasn't even a good victim—too scared to fight back, too diffident even to cry audibly. If he stayed out of their way they no longer bothered him. But it was a very lonely and very unhappy little boy who crouched against the fence during recess and gazed longingly at the swing.

Several months of school had passed, and while he was still a stranger, he knew the names of many of his classmates. Especially he knew the names of a few—a few who were the noisiest, who could swing the highest. He knew the ones who had nearly beaten him to a jelly. They terrified him, but they were what he longed to be, and he held them in almost worshipful respect. He lived in fear that they would catch him away from school, and in hope that one might speak to him.

Where other small boys dreamed of being firemen and locomotive engineers, Whitey dreamed of short, straight black hair, of powerful vocal cords and of knickers—dirty, smelly knickers with patches galore.

But as Whitey crouched numbly against his fence there was not much of this in his mind. His mind, during school recess, acted only insofar as it strained toward the time when school finished for the day.

This particular recess, interminable as all the rest, finally spent itself. And like the recess period, the day's session of school dragged on to its eagerly awaited end. Whitey slid quietly out of the building and set out to run the gantlet that was his only route homeward.

This route demanded but two really hazardous passages, the remainder of the trip being through relatively innocuous residential blocks. The entire length of the school ground must be traversed, though, and the terrors of the freight yard skirted.

On this afternoon, Whitey found the route unusually clear, and had nearly passed the freight yard when wild, excited cheering from behind a coal car showed him to what he owed his untroubled passage. Encircled by shouting boys, one of his adopted heroes was fighting grade 2-B's acknowledged champion.

An intense loyalty drew Whitey, pale and trembling, into the watching crowd. Tense, drawn as if by a magnet, and hardly aware of anything outside the actual struggle, he pressed forward until he stood in the very first row of spectators. Little choked noises stirring in his throat, his little fists clenched, he held his place. And so entranced was he that when the struggling pair surged toward him he failed to fall back with the rest, and a wildly flailing fist abruptly ended his career as a fight fan.

Whitey was rather late in returning home that day. When he did arrive his mother had been a bit worried and called him to her. As he trudged up she opened her mouth to ask where he had been, shut it, opened it again, then gasped. "Why Whitey, where did you get that black eye?"

Whitey's hand flew to his face, he swallowed once, then asked, "Is it really black?"

"Why it looks terrible! How on earth did it happen?"

There was no answer. Whitey had disappeared. His mother finally located him gazing earnestly into a mirror. He looked up at her. "It really is black, isn't it?"

"It certainly is. Now are you going to tell me how you got it or . . ."

Two small shoulders strained backward, a small chest was expanded. A small voice became a little bigger. "Oh, this? I must have got it in a fight."

Sympathy And Action

By Dorothy Thompson

Suffer Little Children

Philadelphia, June 27.

IN THIS heartbreaking world millions of Americans are wondering what they can do to uphold the banner of freedom, democracy and humanity. These people include those who think we should give more material aid to Great Britain, whether for ideological reasons, humanitarian reasons or plain reasons of self-interest. But they also include millions who want us to have no part of the war going on in Europe.

IT IS VERY dangerous for the human soul to have a sympathy that does not express itself in action. We have to express in behavior the things we believe; otherwise, by and by we cease to believe them. To observe human suffering and do nothing about it results eventually in becoming humanly callous. And if the people of this country become humanly callous, by and by that callousness will express itself in all our relations toward one another; and then we shall be in a very bad way.

Now, there is one thing we could do immediately, and if we did it with sufficient drama and grandeur it would be by itself a comment on what is happening in Europe. In this world of loot-and-grab it is very necessary that a great democracy like our own, that stands for human rights, if it stands for anything, that stands for the superiority of men over machines, if it stands for anything, should make a gesture that represents giving rather than taking. And we could make that gesture.

MR. GALLUP'S last poll, which was published in the Wednesday newspapers, shows us what we can do. A survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion indicates that 5,000,000 American families might be disposed to take British and French refugee children into their homes and care for them until the war—and the worst results of the war—is over.

Fifty-eight per cent of those polled thought that we should let the children come in, and a quarter of those polled said they would be willing to take one or more of the children, while 21 per cent more said that they would consider it. That means that there are something like 5,000,000 homes available in this country; even if you cut that number radically, it still adds up to a great many homes.

There is every possible reason, including the most hard-boiled ones, why we should do this. This column has pointed out before, and does so again, that there is an actual shortage of children in the United States at this moment. We are becoming an old people. Ask any eugenist, ask anyone concerned with vital statistics, whether or not this is true, and he will support my statement. This means that if all of these children never went back to Europe it would be an unmitigated godsend to the United States.

Now, what is holding this up? The first thing that is holding it up is the usual red tape. Each of these children has to have a passport and an affidavit. This business of making out affidavits is difficult and complicated. After all, if a person is willing to take a child in his home, that ought to constitute a good enough affidavit, and it would not be difficult at all to get a huge sum of money posted as a blanket bond that these children would not be thrown back on the Government.

Then, if we're using our intelligence instead of a lot of legalisms, we would have set up in France and Britain, and quickly—and by quickly, I mean in a matter of days, not months—medical boards which would give quick examinations to the children, to see that we get the best and not the worst. It is essential that we try to save the brightest and the healthiest.

The quota system doesn't need to bother us, for the time being, because these children can come in under students' visas which are outside the quota. This is a form of visitor-visa. It doesn't let them in permanently but we can deal with the rest of the problem later. In any case, this country must revise the quota system of immigration and must make a selective system. All that needs to be done is to make every public school in this country an educational institution, and call these children students. And I greatly hope we can make the democratic ideal something real, in human terms.

THE SECOND thing that is holding it up is transportation, and there we run up against the neutrality law that says that we can't send our ships into the war zone. The theory behind that is that our ships if they go into the war zones, may be torpedoed and American lives lost, and that that will drag us into war.

But if we take our merchant ships and all the other merchant ships that we can lay our hands upon, cover them over with Red Cross flags and announce that we are sending a relief expedition for children, no one is going to torpedo those ships. There are limits to what human beings will do, and that's one of the limits.

We ought to send a relief fleet, flying the Red Cross flag and the American Flag. We ought to announce on all radios and in all languages of the world that we are doing it. And if we do, that fleet will be safe. And it will not only be safe but its arrival in Europe will bring a new idea into Europe, and a lift to millions of broken hearts, and a hope and faith that human decency is not yet dead on this globe.

We women of America can accomplish it quickly, if we really want to do so. We can accomplish it by besieging Congress with telegrams demanding that it be done. We can do it by mobilizing our own organizations—our Federation of Women's Clubs and our churches. We can set up, right away, in every village and community and city, committees that will canvass everybody with an income of more than $3,000 a year, and thus find the homes. We can find them through the radio, providing there are local committees to which to report.

We should try to avoid placing any considerable number of these children in the City of New York, which is too big already. But we should make an appeal to people with country homes unused for more than three or four months of the year, to country clubs which are closed in winter. We shall need funds for nurses and social workers and volunteer workers who can look after children when they are placed in large groups. We can put some of the children into boarding schools.

I made a suggestion like this on the air a few weeks ago, speaking for the Red Cross, and a great many letters and telegrams came into my office immediately from people offering to take children. I will take four for my own home immediately, and I can make a place for more.

There is such a wealth of good will in this country, of warm emotional energy, that could be used. Why does it stand idle? Let's put it to work in a big way for suffering Europe and for the sake of our own future.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Homespun Willkie

IF I WERE HANDLING the bucket in President Roosevelt's corner in this campaign, assuming that Mr. Roosevelt and Wendell Willkie are to be the nominees, I would lay off that propaganda about Willkie's home address and his business address in New York and his being an apostate Hoosier. I would be afraid that Willkie would tear my man's ears off in that kind of fighting.

Willkie's home address is 1010 Fifth avenue, which is just 264 numbers to the south of that humble friend of the people, Fiorello H. LaGuardia, who lives on the same street, and not more than a dime's worth of cab mileage from the Communist district represented by Representative Vito Marcantonio, who claims to be no Communist but constantly runs with them, and, by coincidence at best, votes and speaks as they would have him vote and speak. Willkie's home address is a lot closer to the poverty of Harlem than the town address of Mr. Roosevelt, and, moreover, he pays his own rent and bought his own kettles and blankets, whereas Mr. Roosevelt's home was given to him by his mother, completely furnished.

HIS BUSINESS address is 20 Pine street, down in the financial district, and 20 Pine is the Chase National Bank Building. I can't make anything out of that but innuendo, meant to suggest that Willkie, somehow, was mixed up in the Chase National when Al Wiggin was running the bank.

But I wouldn't monkey around with innuendo if I were handling Mr. Roosevelt's bucket, because once you start using that sort of material you invite the other fellow to do it, and I couldn't want to expose my man to innuendo. Not my man, Mr. Big. Ordinarily, a man accepting a job with a business firm, as Willkie did, doesn't ask his new boss who owns the building and refuse the opportunity if he doesn't like the landlord's morals.

But, just as straight counter-punching, Willkie could point out that when President Roosevelt was practicing law, back in the wickedest era of big business and all such as that, his office was at 120 Broadway, which is just as close to the Stock Exchange as 20 Pine. To make it hurt, Willkie might point out that my man was a partner, and to that extent his own boss, rather than an employe in the law business, and settled at 120 Broadway for choice. He might even dig up the identity of the owner of 120 Broadway at that time on the off chance that landlord was even worse than the Chase under Wiggin, for purposes of innuendo.

I WOULDN'T GET fresh about the kind of corporations that Willkie has served as a lawyer and executive or his association with the cause of private capital and wealth, either. Because Willkie might recall some of the goofy company promotions with which my man was identified as a front man, his record as a lawyer—which certainly wasn't hot—and the fact that my man lived on inherited wealth and allowances from his mother until long after he was married. For extra zing Willkie might recall that the family interest included some coal lands in bloody Harlan County, Kentucky.

Those are dangerous topics to fool with in a scrap with a man of Willkie's type. I would realize that this is no Alf Landon but a terrific body-puncher who likes to stand on the flat of his feet, sink his head against your wishbone and belt away until something breaks.

I certainly wouldn't go cracking about his Hoosierism. In the first place, those Hoosiers never do get un-Hoosierized or de-Hoosierized, or whatever you would say. That is one thing I don't like about them. They come down to New York and make a lot of dough, but they never get really naturalized, and whenever they get a little bit tight you hear them yowling about the moonlight bright tonight along the Wabash.

LIKE SOME FOREIGN immigrants they are always dropping their Hoosier cousins and fraternity brothers into New York jobs and sending their kids back to Indiana to college for fear that they will grow attached to the section in which they were born and where their parents found opportunities and prosperity that didn't exist in Indiana.

Willkie is still a Hoosier all right, and, moreover, by raising that issue I would give him an opportunity to get homespun and point out that while my man was growing up with governesses and servants, going to private schools, traveling abroad and sailing yachts which Mama bought him, this Hoosier was slinging hash, following the harvest out West and teaching school for the little money that it took a Hoosier to nickle his way through college.

No, sir, if I were handling Mr. Roosevelt against Mr. Willkie I would not mess with that kind of controversy. I would keep my punches well up, use the ring all the time, avoid the clinches and try to box him fancy on lofty issues of the day.

REPRESENTATIVE MARTIN

Four Acts—Four Flops

By Ernest K. Lindley

The Philadelphia Show

Philadelphia, June 27.

THE FIRST FOUR ACTS of the Philadelphia show were flops—complete flops. Such utter flops that only a narrowly partisan Democrat could derive any satisfaction whatsoever from them.

Act I was the keynote speech by Gov. Stassen. Since his election to the governorship of Minnesota in 1938, Stassen has been one of the brightest spots in the Republican Party—a young and intelligent man of broad sympathies who, if he had reached the constitutional age requirements, would have been a serious contender for the Presidential nomination this year. Stassen's keynote speech measured up to the average. But it did not measure up to the requirements of June, 1940, when the United States stands at the threshold of a new world era.

It was a routine piece of political jargon, uninspired and aimless.

Act II was the address of Permanent Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr. Mr. Martin is an able and extremely likeable party leader in Congress. In a poll of Washington correspondents taken within a year, he was voted the ablest member of the House of Representatives. His address to the Republican National Convention was as insipid and meaningless as any this columnist has ever had to read or listen to in some years of writing about politicians.

ACT III WAS Mr. Hoover's speech. This was the speech which some of his friends predicted would stampede the convention, reestablishing his leadership of the Republican Party and perhaps even compelling his nomination for the Presidency. Technically it was a superb document. It was well-written, sprinkled with punch-lines and whimsicalities, but generally keyed to a high note. It contained what the 100 per cent Republican New York Herald Tribune described as disappointing "contradictions." Nonsense would be a better world. But it contained some good sense, also.

As Hoover delivered his masterpiece, however, it became dull drivel. The loud-speaking apparatus in the auditorium was not tuned up to his voice. A large part of his immediate audience heard only snatches of his speech. He spoke in flat tones. It was Hoover as he used to be before he learned how to speak. Or maybe it was Hoover grown-old, a man harboring bitter memories, and yearning for vindication. But neither in his voice nor in his bearing were the attributes of leadership to be seen. The close of his speech was pathetic. He stood there, with the trace of a smile, awaiting the great ovation which did not come. Instead came a whimper of applause, which gradually spread as more members of the audience realized that he had finished and that they ought to do the right thing by the former leader of their party. I felt sorry for him and for the newspapermen who felt compelled, by the policies of their publishers to write that Hoover received a grand ovation. He received a brief but spirited welcome before he spoke, but at the end he received less than would have been accorded by that audience to a complete nonentity who said three sentences and said them well.

Act IV was the party platform. Party platforms seldom have anything to brag about. They usually contain many compromises and assorted tricky paragraphs to conceal divergencies of viewpoint which cannot be reconciled.

THE REPUBLICAN platform of 1940, must be as wretched a piece of work as any major party platform in several generations. It is filled with contradictions and meaningless sentences.

"We favor the extension of necessary old age benefits on an earmarked pay-as-you-go basis to the extent that the revenues raised for this purpose will permit." What does that mean? What does "extension" mean? What are "necessary" old age benefits. What revenue does the Republican Party propose to raise for this purpose?

There are not many planks in the platform which are any clearer.

From beginning to end there is hardly an inspiring sentence. There is nothing to indicate that the Republican Party realizes that the moment has arrived for heroic measures—and when there is ample reason to believe that an overwhelming majority of the American people are eager for courageous leadership.

The platform was received by the convention with an apathy which at least indicated that the delegates knew it was ham.

When the first three acts had been performed and the plot for the fourth was already known, the Republican Herald Tribune published a mournful editorial under the title "A Battle Half Lost." It urged "every courageous delegate to go to his leader forthwith, state his conviction in no uncertain words and dreamed a candidate who can, despite a blundering platform, win."

If the leading Republican paper of the East felt that way about it, we know that the convention up to then, had indeed been a dismal flop. It is profoundly despairing to witness the floundering ineptitudes of one of our two great major parties—the party on which we must rely, if not for leadership, at least for the intelligent opposition without which the democratic form of government cannot successfully function.

The Willkie Movement

By Mark Sullivan

Delegates Irked

Philadelphia June 27.

AS THIS is written the balloting is beginning. Before that, the situation took a definite form. It has permanent importance and it leads itself to analysis, partial at least.

The situation became a feud between the delegates and the gallery crowd—the gallery for Mr. Willkie, the delegates not. Some are translating this into "the people for Willkie, the politicians not." But that does not follow.

To begin: The speech putting Mr. Willkie in nomination was truculent. Made by Congressman Halleck, of Indiana, it had an air of saying to the delegates, "You better nominate Willkie, or else——"

That the delegates did not like. From them came derisive shouts. When a Willkie speaker implied that the Willkie movement had had little or no campaign funds, some delegates booed. So that the delegates may be said to have started the row. Quickly the crowd in the galleries began to demonstrate for Mr. Willkie. For an hour or so it was case of the galleries for Mr. Willkie, the delegates sullenly resistant.

This was strange, for most of those in the galleries had got their seats from delegates or other politicians. Each delegate had been given a quota of gallery seats, and also each alternate and each member of the Republican National Committee. In short, fully half the galleries must have been the same sort of persons as the delegates. It was no Louis XIV case of the people in the galleries, the aristocrats on the floor.

YET CLEARLY there was, in the galleries, and in Philadelphia, and throughout the country, a "We want Willkie" spirit. This sentiment, observers say, came not only from business and professional men, but from every walk of life.

How did this sentiment arise? It will be important to find out, for these were persons who said that if this Republican Convention failed to heed the demand of the people, there will be serious consequences. They said that the people are fed up with politics, politicians, both political parties, and all political symbols and forms, including even Congress. These persons said that failure of a political party to nominate an outsider, a businessman, would feed a mood of the people which is tired of the forms of democratic government.

This Willkie movement could only reach the people by the usual channels. Some of these channels were, for deeply patriotic reasons, strong for Mr. Willkie. Magazines, deeply impressed by Mr. Willkie's personality and ability, had given much space to him. Newspapers and newspaper chains had indorsed him. Two well-known columnists, spokesmen of the intelligentsia, felt that nomination of Mr. Willkie was imperative—Mr. Walter Lippmann earnestly intoned for him, Miss Dorothy Thompson almost shrieked for him. They felt that the state of the world constitutes a crisis, and that Mr. Willkie was needed to meet it. After inspiration from such sources, there was perhaps some formal promotion by business interests. There were tens of thousands of telegrams. But the Willkie movement was genuinely spontaneous.

THE EXCITED URGENCY of all this led some delegates and leaders to feel that there was an effort to push them into something they did not fully understand, before they had time to arrive at judgment about it. Besides, man delegates and leaders felt they were the responsible custodians of the ideal of government by orderly forms, by laws and precedents and institutions. To this the more intellectual among the Willkie demanders said in effect: "The way for you to preserve the forms of democracy is to nominate this popular man, who also believes in the forms, and will help preserve them. If you don't nominate Willkie, the whole two-party system may be endangered."

They recommended Mr. Willkie as one who, because of personality, meets the demand of the people for a popular figure, what used to be called "a man on horseback." But, they added, truthfully, while Mr. Willkie is the "leader" type, he most earnestly believes in constitutional government, and would never use his popularity to reduce its vitality. Some of the more intellectual, and also more excitable Willkie desirers actually talked as if this convention of an opposition political party, held at Philadelphia in June, 1940, were the Verdun, or Gettysburg, of democratic government in America—lost if Willkie lost, won if Willkie won. They cried "fire," and said Mr. Willkie is the only well-equipped fireman.

For myself, I just don't know. There are doom-ridden forces loose in the world. Also there are correspondingly excited fears.

The Other War

By Barnet Nover

China Fights On

IN LESS THAN a fortnight it will be three years since the Lukuchiao incident which marked the beginning of the undeclared Sino-Japanese struggle.

Since that day in 1937 the face of the world has been violently altered. In Europe appeasement was followed by Munich and Munich by war. During those years no fewer than 12 European nations have lost their freedom. Some were overrun without a struggle. Others fought valiantly to stem the tide of invasion, but fought in vain. All 12 succumbed.

China fights on. Her ports, the bulk of her railroads, and practically all of her industrial centers fell into the hands of the enemy long ago. Her government was moved from Nanking to Hankow to Chungking, but even that remote spot is not secure against devastating attacks from the air. The toll of Chinese casualties, military and civilian, runs into the millions. But at no time has Chiang Kai-shek shown the slightest readiness to throw in the sponge. And the Chinese have inflicted heavy damage on the enemy.

IT IS IMPORTANT not to forget this other war nor China's role in it. For in resisting Japan China has not only managed to preserve her independence; she has also fought the battle against aggression.

The best proof of this fact is to be seen in the contrast between the vigorous policy pursued by Japan during the early stages of the World War and the cautious policy which she followed during the early stages of the present European conflict.

During the World War Japan took advantage of the conflict to oust Germany from Kiao-Chow and Shantung Province, and also by means of the 21 demands, to extend her hegemony over the rest of China. From the outbreak of hostilities in Europe last September until this week, on the other hand, Japan remained quiescent.

The contrast is striking. The reason for it is that whereas between 1914 and 1918 Japan had her hands free, this time her hands were tied.

IN VIEW of Chinese resistance, Japan could not afford to take real risks in remote areas. It was only when France collapsed and Great Britain was placed in a desperate position that the chronic Japanese urge for expansion suddenly revived. Now, weak and vulnerable as she is after three years of expensive efforts to conquer China, her spokesmen are beginning to talk big once again and her soldiers are beginning to act big.

It is said that before very long Japan will announce an "Asiatic Monroe Doctrine" warning all third powers to stay out of Eastern Asia. This, it is assumed, may be the prelude to the extension of Japanese hegemony over Hongkong, French Indo-China, the Dutch East Indies and other Far Eastern regions — including the Philippines—now controlled by foreign powers.

The only thing that has prevented such a program from being carried out earlier is the war in China, and as long as China fights on Japan is in no position to make far-reaching commitments elsewhere. That is why the first moves made by the island empire in the direction of overthrowing the colonial status quo in the Far East have clearly been motivated by the desire to end the Chinese war.

FIRST, pressure was put on the French authorities in Indo-China to stop all shipments of arms and supplies over the Indo-Chinese railway which runs to Yunnan province. This was followed by the dispatch of a Japanese naval squadron to Haiphong. At the same time considerable pressure has been put on Great Britain to close the entrance to the famous Burma road.

The attempt is obviously designed to complete the Japanese blockade of China so that, deprived of all outside supplies, Chiang Kai-shek and his government will be forced to capitulate. Whether the objective will be achieved is not at all certain even if the British, like the French colonial authorities, give way to Japanese pressure. But if China manages to fight on, anyway, Japan's expansion to the southeast will be made difficult and costly and even ruinous.

THE SPIRIT of appeasement is not dead; it has merely shifted its habitation. It is being urged that the United States come to terms with Japan in order that our fleet might be free for any eventualities that might occur on this side of the hemisphere. It may be that, faced by threats from both Asia and Europe, we shall have to abandon Asia and concentrate our force to resist incursions from the other side of the Atlantic.

But let us be under no illusions as to what that would mean; it would be a capitulation to Japan and a capitulation which, in no sense, would add to our security.

At the moment when she is still very vulnerable we would be permitting Japan to become invulnerable; at the moment when Japan is still at our mercy we would, by a policy of appeasement toward her, be placing ourselves at Japan's mercy. And at no time can we for a moment forget that the German threat from the East is paralleled by the Japanese threat from the West.

As long as Great Britain fights on, the Nazi danger to us is limited; as long as China fights on, we have relatively little to fear from Japan. But China, like Great Britain, is fighting our battles which is why out of selfishness no less than out of sentimental considerations, we must give whatever aid we can to both and desert neither.

It is always the counsel of wisdom when facing grave emergencies to limit one's risks; but nothing is gained and much is lost when, in an attempt to limit risks, we stand a real chance of multiplying them.

County Defense Council Formed

Hagerstown, Md., June 27.—Washington County's Preparedness Council was formally organized last night at a mass meeting at the American Legion Home, which was attended by 200 representatives of religious, patriotic, civic, social and fraternal organizations.

Col. John Carmichael, World War veteran was elected permanent chairman and the following other officers named: vice chairman, T. Frank Lynch; secretary, Dr. W. Ross Cameron; treasurer, Max Greenwald; executive committee, Maj. Joseph W. Byron; Charles W. Sullivan, J. Forney Young, Mrs. James S. Webb, Dr. Perry F. Prather and Miss Anna Garlock.

Va. Job Placements Increase This Year

Richmond, Va., June 27 (AP).—The employment service division of the Virginia unemployment compensation commission, is ending obs for an average of 1,700 persons each week, of which about 75 per cent are placed in private industry, Director Frank Cavedo said. This number is a gain of about 200 a week over the rate of placement last year, he added.

Voters Oppose City Power Plant

Onancock, Va., June 27 (AP).—Voters of this Eastern Shore community voted down, 132 to 55, a proposal that a municipal electric plant be constructed here by the Fairbanks Morse Co.

Two Diesel-powered generators and a switchboard would have been placed in the building, and a distribution system erected.

The Electrical Equipment Co. had submitted a plan whereby the debt would have been retired in 15 years by payment of "revenue certificates."

The municipal plant would have replaced electrical service now being provided by the Eastern Shore Public Service Co.

State Anticipates Rail Tax Increase

Richmond, Va., June 27 (AP).—The State tax bill of Virginia railways will be up approximately $281,000 in 1940, it was revealed today at a hearing before the State Corporation Commission on tentative assessments for the year.

Last year the railways paid in State taxes $2,608,972. This year, mainly because of new purchases of equipment, the tax assessments indicate a payment of $2,889,972.

The Norfolk & Western's tax will go up $166,262; the C. & O.'s $31,607; Southern, $21,460; R. F. & P., $14,924 and the Seaboard, $4,852.

G. O. P. Nominee's Wife Poised, Personable

By Hope Ridings Miller.

If the Nation choses Wendell L. Willkie as its next President, the White House will be graced in January by one of its most personable First Ladies since Dolly Madison.

The G. O. P. choice to succeed Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt is as slim as a debutante, and as vivacious. Her son and husband sometimes refer playfully to her as "a bit of fluff." Graying hair swirls softly around a youngish face, and she smiles easily.

At Philadelphia, Mrs. Edith Willkie was a great help to her extraordinary husband. Willkie's backers were glad they thought of having her put in an appearance on the opening day rather than nearer the end of the week, as planned originally.

In her first interview, given to The Washington Post last April, Mrs. Willkie seemed both puzzled and amused that anyone should be interested in her as a possible public figure.

"Any success my husband has had thus far should be credited entirely to him," she said. "If I did anything to help, it was to stay out of his career and let him follow his own inclinations."

She was frank to admit that if the role of First Lady ever fell to her, she had no idea what she would do about it.

"Why, that problem has never entered my mind," she exclaimed.

THE NEXT FIRST LADY?

Her major interests, she said, are her home, her husband and the son who was to have graduated from Princeton this month, but who failed to complete the required work. Housewifely absorptions, however, have far from submerged the one-time Elwood (Ind.) librarian. She is unquestionably well informed and can discuss the complexities of international politics much better than the average man.

Mrs. Willkie was born in Tennessee, but grew up in Indiana and attended the State university at the same time that Paul McNutt and her future husband were students and Beta Theta Pi fraternity brothers there. She knew McNutt but not Willkie, who was "much more the studious type than I, so our paths didn't cross until later." She is a member of Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority.

Edith Wilk and Wendell L. Willkie first met as attendants at a wedding when they discovered the amusing similarity of their names. Their romance blossomed in Elwood, where Willkie began his practice. They were married in January, 1917.

While Willkie was serving overseas as a soldier, his wife came to Washington to stay with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Miller Hamilton. After the war the Willkies went to live in Akron and, a few years later, moved to New York.

In an apartment at 1010 Fifth avenue, Edith Willkie, with the aid of a housekeeper who has been in the family for years, keeps her home running smoothly and has proved herself a hostess with charm that would be a credit to the White House.

American Cruisers Not Welcome in Her Ports, Diplomats Hear

Reports that Argentina has politely but firmly informed the United States Government that it does not desire the visits of further American warships at this time circulated yesterday in usually well informed diplomatic quarters here.

Argentine officials have made this stand clear to the American Embassy in Buenos Aires, according to these reports. This Government has made known its intention of giving armed aid to American governments desiring protection from European-induced pressures against them, and American cruisers have been sent to Uruguay, Chile and Brazil.

If more American warships are not welcome in Argentine ports now, it may cause operation difficulties with regard to the American fleet's part in enforcing the Monroe Doctrine and certainly would be a blow to continental solidarity at a crucial moment, diplomatic quarters said.

While these reports were denied at the State Department as absolutely untrue, Navy officials confined themselves to saying that no plans exist for sending American cruisers to Argentine ports.

Permission is always obtained from foreign governments for courtesy visits of American warships to their ports, but it is most exceptional for such permission to be refused, officials said.

Cuba has proposed that the 21 American republics establish a joint protectorate over European possessions in the Western Hemisphere as a means of solving difficulties created by changes of sovereignty and developments in Europe, it was learned today in diplomatic quarters.

A circular to this effect has been sent to the State Department and to the foreign offices of the other American republics by Cuba, which offered it as a suggestion for the agenda of the Pan American conference, tentatively scheduled for Havana July 17.

Concurrently, Cuba proposed formation of an American League of Nations, suggesting that, in view of the international emergency now existing, such a league could be formed "either permanently or temporarily." The Cuban memorandum recalled that Colombia and the Dominican Republic proposed such a step at the Buenos Aires conference in 1936.

In well-informed circles it was believed thoroughly possible that the suggestion about colonies would obtain serious consideration from the delegates, particularly if Britain's position should be changed before the conference meets.

Observers Here Doubt Success Of Peace Moves

Diplomatic circles in Washington yesterday were convinced on the basis of confidential advices that soundings are being made in Europe looking to a negotiated peace between Great Britain and Germany, but they were far from certain that the effort has any chance of succeeding.

The conviction that feelers have been put out in the direction of a possible peace negotiation between the two major belligerents persisted in the face of denials from British government spokesmen that such a move was in the wind and claims in London that the reports were nothing more than German propaganda.

The reports have been circulated in Berlin and have appeared in Italian official circles.

The State Department said it had no information of its own, other than dispatches which mentioned the current reports in European capitals. Department officials were disposed to accept at full face value British declarations of dogged determination to continue the war to victory. There was said to be no information on vague rumors and surmises that, if peace should be seriously attempted, the Duke of Windsor might figure in the picture in some way.

F. A. Palmer, Auto Sales Executive, War Veteran, Dies

Frederick Aker Palmer, resident of Washington for more than 40 years and well known in local automobile circles, died yesterday in Doctors Hospital after an illness of several weeks.

Mr. Palmer was sales manager for Hill & Tibbitts, Inc., and had been connected previously with several other automobile concerns.

During the World War he served as a second lieutenant in the Motor Transport Corps of the Army in France. He was a member of New Jerusalem Lodge of the Masonic Order.

Surviving is his wife, Mrs. Ethel H. Palmer, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fredeerick A. Aker, all of this city.

Services, with military and Masonic honors, have been set tentatively for tomorrow morning at Fort Myer Chapel. Burial will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

French Staff Here Remains Loyal to Petain

DeGaulle's Committee Has No Standing, Diplomats Believe

Though cessation of hostilities in Western Europe has left continental France with only a fragment of her territory, the French government exists solely on French soil and Gen. Charles de Gaulle's French National Committee in London has no official standing.

This, it was learned yesterday, is the official view of France's diplomatic representatives in Washington of the results of their nation's armistice with Germany and Italy.

Furthermore, there can be no change in the diplomatic channels running between France and the United States or, necessarily, in the official family of Count Rene de Saint-Quentin, the French ambassador, unless the State Department chooses to recognize a government other than that headed by the aging Gen. Henri Petain.

The ambassador, an embassy official disclosed yesterday, plans to set forth the official viewpoint in a statement he expects to issue within the next 24 hours.

The London committee, it was pointed out, has not yet acquired any of the functions of government. "It is," an official said, "not even organized, and while there have been rumors that Herriot, Blum and Boncour are in London we do not know that this is so."

Count de Saint-Quentin, 56-year-old veteran of the Marne, first set foot in the United States when he succeeded Georges Bonnet in February, 1938. He was the youngest ambassador on the French list when he moved into the embassy, the former John Hays Hammond home at 2221 Kalorama road northwest.

Old Design Urged for New RecorderHome

Planners Favor Lines of Building It Will Replace

Erection of a new home for the recorder of deeds moved another step forward yesterday when the National Capital Park and Planning Commission recommended that the structure's building lines be the same as those of the old building which it will replace.

A bill authorizing a $500,000 PWA allotment for the project is awaiting House approval of Senate amendments. The site chosen is at 515 D street northwest, former home of District Police Court and now occupied by other municipal agencies.

Opening its regular monthly meeting, the planning commission approved a condemnation award to acquire an important section of Fort drive, between Forts Mahan and Dupont in northeast Washington.

Norman C. Brown, staff appraiser, also reported further land acquisitions toward completion of Fort Reno Recreation Center; for the Midcity Playground, near Fifth street and New Jersey avenue northwest, and in the Watts Branch Parkway in the far northeast section.

The newly added Fort Reno property was inspected yesterday afternoon when the planners made a field trip. They also viewed working operations on the new Massachusetts avenue bridge over Rock Creek, proposed additions to Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway and prospective sites for a new central heating plant.

A resolution was adopted expressing appreciation of the seven years' service given to the commission by Arno B. Cammerer, recently resigned as director of the National Park Service. He had been vice chairman and executive officer of the planning body since 1933, duties which automatically ended with his resignation as parks head.

Legionnaires Ask Return of Orme

A resolution demanding that Police Chief Orme, of Montgomery County, Md., and two county policemen suspended for failure to protect headquarters of Jehovah's Witnesses at Rockville from destruction by a mob, be restored to duty was adopted last night by My Maryland Post, No. 126, American Legion, of Benning, D. C.

They were guided, the resolution said, "by a patriotic spirit that will keep America for Americans."

Japan May Revoke Pledge To Respect Dutch Indies Status

By H. O. Thompson

United Press Staff Writer

Tokyo (Friday), June 28.—Japan's new foreign policy, to be based on an Asiatic "Monroe Doctrine," will be announced tomorrow and will include revision of Japan's previous position supporting the status quo of the Dutch East Indies, the newspaper Yomiuri said today.

Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita who made the previous declaration supporting maintenance of a status quo in the southwestern Pacific, was expected to make the official announcement of the new policy.

The Yomiuri said the situation now was "vastly changed" from when the status quo declaration was made just a few weeks ago. At that time, Anglo-American influence was feared, the newspaper said.

Can't Tolerate Interference

It continued that "owing to the proximity of the southwestern Pacific, its affairs are inseparable from a China settlement, wherefore Japan, as the stabilizing factor in east Asia, must act independently toward the construction of a new order in east Asia."

Japan, the newspaper declared, cannot tolerate interference by third powers.

The government's statement of new policy, this source said, will support the German-Italian view that unfair distribution of territory and natural resources must be corrected.

Chungking Bombed

Nazi Embassy in Rio de Janeiro Supervises All Germans in Brazil, Directs 5th Column

Von Cossel Holds Staff Under Power Of Secret Police

Buenos Aires, Argentine, June 27 (AP).—The German Embassy in Rio de Janeiro controls and supervises all Germans in Brazil and is the headquarters of the Brazilian fifth column, except for Southern Brazil, where the German consuls in the large German colonies receive orders from the embassy in Montevideo, which is the Nazi center for Uruguay, Argentina and Southern Brazil.

The German ambassador in Rio, Kurt Pruefer, an experienced diplomat, keeps clear of fifth column publicity, in contrast with his predecessor, Karl Ritter, whose bulldozing tactics toward Foreign Minister Aranha and whose suspected integralist and anti-Vargas plotting caused his recall in 1938 at Brazil's request.

Officially ensconsed in the embassy, however, is Hans Henning Von Cossel, one of the best organizers in the Nazi Ausland foreign service. Reportedly Fuehrer Hitler's personal representative and chief of the Ausland Gestapo in Brazil, Von Cossel directs fifth column strategy and operations from the embassy and holds the entire German community, and even the embassy staff, under the dread power of the Nazi secret police.

Organized Brazilians

Von Cossel came to Brazil early in the Nazi regime as a party leader to organize and supervise 1,000,000 Brazilians of German blood in Southern Brazil.

With the title of cultural attache of the embassy, Von Cossel made his headquarters in the city and state of Sao Paulo in Southern Brazil, which has many Germans and is near large German colonies in the states of Rio Grande do Sul and Santa Catharina. He organized the military Storm Troopers, Order Guards, Hitler Youth and women's auxiliaries. Under his orders German consuls conducted German clubs as Nazi centers and World War officers trained Nazi youth.

Also living in Sao Paulo then was Plinio Salgado, who led the futile 1938 Integralist attempt to overthrow President Vargas and establish a Nazi regime with Brazilian youth, many of German descent, wearing green shirts. Salgado, an exile from Portugal, Brazil's motherland, and Von Cossel, were accused of financing the coup and recalled to Germany at Brazil's request.

President Vargas decreed the outlawing of all political organizations, foreign flags, colored shirts, armbands and such trappings, so neither the Nazis, the Fascists nor the Integralists can operate publicly now. However, the Nazi reorganized licensed sporting and cultural societies some allegedly covering up secret politcal and military functions.

Staff Increased

Von Cossel, allowed to return to Brazil a year ago, now is listed as embassy counselor and descibed as a press attache.

Besides the embassy staff, several hundred persons, including more than 100 new propaganda employes, have been added since the European war began. Von Cossel has funds estimated in Brazilian financial circles at between $1,000,000 and $2,000,000 for espionage, propaganda and other fifth-column uses. The money represents Brazilian payments for long-term prewar contracts for the purchase of German merchandise under the compensation marks agreement.

It is reported in financial circles that the German Embassy is selling exchange bills at the rate of $50,000 monthly, besides $10,000 monthly received by the German consulate at Porto Alegre in the state of Rio Grande do Sul from the embassy in Montevideo.

Before the war remittances from Berlin were received from Nazi espionage, which the Italian transatlantic airline carried until Italy entered the war. Most of the funds collected from Germans in Brazil for winter help in Gemany, it is reported, stays in Brazil to pay Nazi agents.

Nazi spies began arriving in Brazil in 1932 even before Hitler assumed power. They immediately began sending reports home concerning German-Brazilian business concerns and individuals. They reported whether individuals represented themselves as Germans or Brazilians, their family and financial status, their attitude toward the United States and their position on nazism. Thousands of reports were sent to Germany with annual revisions, as shown by photostat copies made by the Brazilian police in raids on Nazi headquarters.

Police records prove the existence of Nazi blacklists of firms and individuals refusing to subscribe publicly to nazism, to contribute to Nazi collections or to buy German goods. Many old German anti-Nazi families, Brazilians for generations, complain that they have to pretend to nazism under threats of business ruin. Sometimes physical beatings and concentration camp threats against relatives in Germany are used.

Mapped Everything

Nazi spies have mapped and photographed everything of military value in the country, using German airlines in Brazil, among other means. Airplanes also are used to spot the locations of British cruisers and notify German ships, which suddenly dash to sea if the coast is clear. Planes and amateur radio stations are used to flash the messages of German spies.

Since the war began Nazi propaganda in Rio de Janeiro has been concentrated in the Transocean News Service and the foreign branch D. N. B. headquarters in the German embassy.

These supply handouts openly to Nazi German-language papers and subsidized Brazilian papers, paying them to publish material.

Two Rio de Janeiro papers are known to be subsidized and three are suspected, representing all told one-tenth of the Rio de Janeiro circulation. Two publishers told the writer of offers of large subsidies and German merchants withdrew their advertising when the proposals were rejected. One said the offer equaled 20 per cent of his paper's revenues.

Recently the propaganda has been increasingly anti-American.

British Spirit of Resistance Strengthening

By Augur
Copyright by New York Times

London, June 27.—The British nation takes the Bordeaux surrender more in sadness than in anger.

The Bordeaux defection, instead of causing depression, acted as a tonic. The spirit of active resistance was never higher than at the present time, with a prospect of further strengthening as the menace grows.

The military situation, judged objectively, offers several items in Britain's favor. From the point of view of strategy the British have an advantage now in the possibility of concentrating their whole force in their own defense, unhampered by the constant need to take into account the needs of an ally.

As long as Fuehrer Hitler has not organized the resources of conquered France—a task necessitating time—the British central position is stronger than before, irrespective of events in the secondary theaters of war. The German air force was unable to deal the Royal Air Force a knockout blow. That inevitably holds up any existing plan of Nazi invasion.

After all, if we take the broadest view of the strategical situation, without letting ourselves be impressed by spectacular successes, it is revealed that Hitler missed three occasions on which to deal a deathblow to Britain.

The first was in 1938, when instead of going to war he agreed at Munich. Now it is clear that Britain and France were quite unprepared and would have been knocked out promptly.

The second occasion came when, instead of attacking France in the fall of 1939, Hitler went into Poland. Recent events prove how easy it would have been to break through the Belgian sector. Gen. Gamelin in September was prepared even less than in May, 1940. Germany would have been in the Channel ports nine months earlier.

The third occasion occurred when the German armored divisions poured through the breach at Sedan. If, instead of pointing toward Paris and then northwestward, they had immediately turned south, Lyons would have been in their power in a few days; later the whole Maginot Line would have fallen and the French armies prevented from concentrating altogether. Resistance on the Somme-Aisne line would have been impossible.

Gen. Weygand's resistance could not have lasted more than a week, while the British Expeditionary Force, instead of escaping from Dunkerque, would have remained chained to the French situation with the prospect of total extinction. The R. A. F. in France, instead of withdrawing the best part of its force homeward, would have been obliged to increase its efforts in France still further.

Of course a grave danger is represented by the subservience of the Bordeaux government to the orders of Hitler. Clearly the Germans have only to ask what they want in order to obtain it immediately.

Londoners Jam U. S. Embassy Seeking Refuge for Young

Copyright by New York Times

London, June 27.—The stately corrodiors of the American Embassy in dignified Grosvenor Square are beginning to look like a nursery nowadays as British mothers bring their youngsters in hopes of taking advantage of invitations from America to give asylum against the expected German offensive.

The children sit with their mothers, row on row, on benches in the consular department where aliens usually await their visas. Nurses push others up and down the corridors and the embassy steps outside almost always are decorated with bassinets containing very young babies waving their bare feet in the summer sunshine in upside down version of the Hitlerian salute. Some fidget and cry, but mostly they keep peace.

The matter of sending these children to America is meeting with some complications, though already 500 have been dispatched. The English quota under which they will emigrate to American allows about 650 entrants monthly. There has been some delay in issuance of birth certificates and exit permits by British authorities, possibly because the British government has not yet been officially informed of the provisions being made in America. Better coordination is foreseen, however, in an announcement to Paliament by Geoffrey Shakespeare, M. P., chairman of the overseas reception board, of appointment of an advisory committee composed of experts in all branches of welfare work.

A different kind of refugee also has been haunting the American Embassy. These are Americans who are still stranded here because of the war. Many of these have arrived from the Continent as a result of the Germans overruning France. Others had business to do here which prevented them from catching earlier refugee ships, but which they have now finished.

Until it was announced that the United States ships Washington and Manhattan will be sent to repatriate Americans still in Europe who want to return home these citizens have been in the peculiar position of being prisoners of the neutrality law. This law and State Department regulations issued under it forbid Americans to travel in ships of a belligerent power or in any ship in a combat zone.

Stunned French Refugees Pour Into Portugal

Shortage of Food, Medical Supplies Bode Of Desperate Days

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Caldos da Rainha, Portugal, June 27.—I arrived today in this little Portuguese town after a 17-day harrowing journey through France, Spain and Portugal. The influx of refugees from France into Portugal has been so great that Lisbon, which is sixty miles south of Caldos, has been barred to newcomers.

Last Saturday night I crossed the French frontier on foot amidst a dense and desperate international crowd of people fleeing from France.

I left behind me a land whose misery, devastation and distress could not be imagined or adequately described. Six weeks of blitzkrieg has transformed France into a waste, where bread could no more be found to feed the exiles from the north. But greater than the physical misery of the French, was their despair before a dark and cruel future.

Like Barbarian Times

France seems to have gone back into a time of barbarians. All communications between towns have been severed. Her people are dispersed. A great many homes are in ruins. Several million people sleep in sheds, storehouses, railway stations and in the streets or fields.

Women don't know the fate of their husbands and sons who fought in the army. Many thousands of parents will never find their infants lost in the hurricane. Hospitals are overfilled with wounded. There is a lack of medical supplies, of beds and blankets. There will soon be a shortage of food.

The armistice has come to the French as a terrific shock. The army knew that the situation was desperate, but many people in the rear ignored the hopelessness of the situation and held the belief that they would be saved as they were on the Marne and at Verdun.

They may have at last begun to realize the gravity of the setback when Paris was evacuated and the panicky flight to the south started.

People Hopelessly Resigned

When Henri Petain announced that he had asked from a truce, the French people were stunned. I witnessed in Bordeaux a hopeless resignation before the cruelty of fate. Some people said, however, "We shall never accept their terms." Some others spoke of suicide or of flight to England. But Petain was too highly respected to permit any gesture of rebellion. No other man could probably have imposed the armistice as easily as the marshal.

It was not known in the country that Reynaud had warned Churchill already at the end of May that France might ask for a separate peace. It was not known either that Churchill offered the French premier on June 16 to abandon the fight in France and form a joint Franco-British government in London, to continue the war from Britain and the French colonies.

The question was debated in the Council of Ministers, which met in the Bordeaux Theater and at which Ronald Campbell was present. Ten French ministers favored the British offer. Fourteen were against it. Among the latter was Petain, whose viewpoint was shared by Weygand. The military men considered that the battle had been lost and that further bloodshed was useless.

Carol Cedes Bessarabia

Control of Rumania's big Black Sea port, Constanta, as a Red naval base.

Supervision of Galati and Braila, two Rumanian ports controlling all navigation on the Danube, one of Germany's principal lifelines, and railway bases at certain Rumanian ports along with certain other incidental concessions.

(Reports to Berlin said "control" of Tulcea, another Danube port, also was demanded.)

Apparently Germany and Italy gave their consent to Russia's latest coup. Axis ministers were in long and earnest consultation with King Carol in his hours of deliberation and decision.

Rumania, rich in oil and grain, but poor in strategic location and useful alliances, decided she must give in to Russia—that no calling into force of her months of military preparations could alter the final result.

Hence she yielded just short of a 10 p. m. (3 p. m. E. S. T.) deadline for her peaceful assent and agreed to discuss details later.

She had invoked a virtually general mobilization while the Grand Council considered Russia's demands, first accepted them in principle and pleaded unavailingly for time to dicker and finally capitulated.

Tonight's decision disposes only of Russia's claims. Now will come Hungary, with the reported backing of Adolf Hitler, to ask for Transylvania. Bulgaria, a friend of Russia, may seek the return of southern Dobruja.

All told, Rumania stands to lose nearly half of her 113,884 square miles and return to Balkan obscurity—a satellite wavering between the gravitational pulls of the Axis powers in the west and the Red Empire in the east.

While Rumania still pleaded for time to dicker, gendarmes went from house to house, farm to farm and factory to factory calling up Rumanian reservists; planes patrolled the Bucharest airport, and antiaircraft guns were mounted on the capital's tall buildings.

But, so far as Russia was concerned, this was only a precautionary gesture.

Unrelenting on her ultimatum, Russia won Rumanian concessions apparently without firing a shot.

As regards Hungary and her demands for 24,020-square-mile Transylvania, there was a show of resistance. It was learned officially that Rumanian troops are being concentrated in Transylvania near the Hungarian frontier.

Official quarters expressed belief that King Carol had decided to grant all Russia's requests in order to be able to throw all his armed men against the expected Hungarian attempt to regain Transylvania, lost by Hungary in the World War settlements.

Bulgaria's claim on the southern part of 8,979-square-mile Dobruja remained a more undetermined factor in Rumania's future. There was no sign of extraordinary military activity in Bulgaria—or Hungary, for that matter—but foreign observers pointed out that both have strong forces on their borders with Rumania.

Responsible Bulgarian sources at Sofia expressed belief that Russia's success was the long-awaietd opening wedge for remaking the Balkan map.

Russian Mother's Own Story Wins $10,000 Book Prize

Boston, June 27 (AP).—A story plucked from the chapter of her own life—the tale of an exiled White Russian family set against the background of Tientsin, China—brought the 1940 Atlantic Novel Prize of $10,000 tonight to Mrs. Antonina Riasanovsky, of Eugene, Oreg., mother of two young sons.

Judges announced that her novel, "The Family," just got under the wire; that it was one of the last manuscripts received, while four serious contenders for the prize had turned up long before. It is her first novel, and will be brought out by Little, Brown & Co. next September under the pen name "Nina Fedorova."

Like the members of "The Family," Mrs. Riasanovsky is a White Russian who lived in Tientsin after she was forced to leave her native country. She has been living in the United States since 1938.

Youth Groups Give Health Pageant For Benefit of Blind

Youth danced and drilled for the benefit of the blind last night at the National Youth Health pageant held at Riverside Stadium to aid the Columbia Polytechnic Institute for the Blind. Nearly 500 attended.

A group of 28 young women of the Dennis Landers studio and the Baltimore Y. W. C. A. opened the program with calisthenics and wand drills. Acrobatics, tumbling and pyramiding were featured by the eight Wiegand Sisters, of Washington.

In brightly colored period costumes, 16 boys and 16 girls of the Marian Chace Dancers presented Der Rosenkavalier waltzes, by Richard Strauss. Performances on the parallel bars and mats were given by six members of the Y. M. C. A. senior gymnastic and tumbling team, which placed second in the National Y. M. C. A. meet in Newark last spring.

Winding up the first phase of the program was the Junior Drum and Bugle Corps of Post 284 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, under the direction of Jack Halliday. Al Donahue and his orchestra presented music for dancing.

Hugo Hesselbach, Architect, Dies; Burial Tomorrow

Funeral services for Hugo Hesselbach, 74, of 1415 Twentieth street northwest, will be held tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. from Gawler's funeral chapel.

Mr. Hesselbach retired two years ago from the Southern Railway, where he was architect. He had been with the Southern Railway 43 years. He died early yesterday at Garfield Hospital, where he had been a patient since June 15.

Born in Washington, Mr. Hesselbach began practice as an architect in early youth. Before joining the railway he was associated with W. M. Poindexter.

He leaves his wife, Alice Burgage Hesselbach; two sisters, Mrs. Fanny Schmitt and Mrs. William C. Vierbuchen, of Chicago; three nephews, Dr. Waldo Schmitt, curator of the National Museum; Edwin Schmitt, a civil engineer, and La Salle Spier, pianist and composer, and a niece, Miss Thelma Schmitt.

Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Tea, Given Dignity by British, Now America's 'Zip' Beverage

DAISY AND SHIP MOTIF—Whiffs of the salty surf and accents by perky daisies set the tempo for the Sunday night supper given recently by Mrs. Herbert Whiting Gardner (insert) as shown in this lovely table setting. The colorful canary yellow pottery accented with turquoise blue, the daisy centerpiece, and tricky teamaster with its dual personality, all blended to make an arresting service for the flavorsome foods served by the hostess

20,000,000,000 Cups Are Drunk on This Continent Each Year

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

CONSERVATIVE Britishers gave tea-drinking dignity, but Americans today are giving it all the zip and spiciness of syncopated swing.

Martha Ellyn

Teapots are bubbling merrily now because iced tea—America's invention and favorite hot weather cooler—is taking its place at beach parties, after-tennis snacks, and Sunday night suppers and dances as well as at "regular" meals.

This country is the world's second largest importer of tea. It is estimated that 20,000,000,000 cups of it are consumed annually. That's a lot of tea, but there are so many interesting ways of serving the beverage, that it can never become monotonous. It is the manner in which tea is served that gives it character.

A Sunday night supper I attended recently inspired me to the possibilities of tea. The hostess has native talent for decoration—having won a national interior decoration contest when we were pals back in our home town. The theme was nautical. A cargo of daisies was anchored between two huricane lamps that also served as containers for flowers from the garden. The dishes were pottery in color contrasts—canary yellow accented with turquoise blue. Even the frosted pattern on the iced tea glasses carried the sea note. The place mats were of natural tone cork. Altogether the effect was delightfully refreshing.

The conversation piece was the tricky tea pot. It had two spouts, one pouring tea from a compartment with a larger opening especially designed to hold tea, and marked by the ring on the handle, and the other pouring hot water. It was not only tricky but convenient, for this two-in-one pot eliminates at least one of the gadgets that clutter up the tea service—the hot water container.

This is an easy way to please all guests, for some like their tea hot and some like it cold. With this pot both services are possible. Iced tea is at its fragrant best when the beverage, bubbling hot, is poured directly over the ice cubes from the pot in which it is brewed. Iced tea that stands too long loses its tang.

Jellied Consomme Madrilene with Roquefort stuffed with celery gave the supper a zestful start. That most delicious of supper dishes—Crabmeat a la King, was served next by the hostess' capable "Sally." When I followed her to the kitchen, after supper, she gave me her recipe which follows:

Combine 1 cupful crabmeat with 3 hard-cooked diced eggs and 1 pimiento chopped. Saute

Favorite Hot Weather Drink at Dances And Beach Parties

½ cupful chopped mushrooms and add to first mixture. Cook until tender, in boiling salted water, ¼ cup chopped green peppers. Drain and add to mixture. Melt 3 tablespoons butter and stir in 3 tablespoons flour until well blended. Stir in gradually 2 cups milk. Add ½ teaspoon salt and ¼ teaspoon paprika. When the sauce is smooth and boiling add the other mixture. Season with 2 tablespoons sherry. Serve on hot rusks.

Another surprise of the supper was tiny cream biscuits made with the new fortified flour. That is the flour being made with the addition of B1 and other vitamins and minerals. "Sally" says that this self-rising variety of flour makes biscuit-making as easy as "nothing." Here are her directions:

Cream Biscuits

Sift flour and measure 2 cups level without packing. Add enough cream to make a soft dough—one that is as soft as can be made and still thick enough to work with the hands. Knead gently for about ½ minute, roll about ⅜ inch thick and cut with tiny biscuit cutter. Put into hot oven, 425 degrees, and bake until crust is brown, about 12 minutes.

Daisy bouquet ice cream molds with petits fours and tea, either hot or iced, completed the "daisy" supper.

"TO MARKET, TO MARKET," by Margaret Gamble and Margaret Chandler Porter, is a complete practical guide to the selection of staples, meat, poultry, eggs, dairy products, fresh fruit and vegetables and canned food. It is designed expressly for the use of the American housewife.

The purchase of food is the daily problem of every housekeeper, whether or not she herself cooks what she buys. This book is not a discussion of the nutritive value of food, nor does it attempt to tell you what to eat. Its helpfulness lies in its showing you how to buy food, and how to get full value for what you pay. The bride will find it a very helpful book. This manual is written in conversational style and pointed up with the experiences of a cast of characters who personify frequently encountered types of buyers. Publishers, Little, Brown & Co. Price, $1.75.

"TABLE SERVICE," by Lucy G. Allen is a book that is a guide to delightful living. It answers the needs of almost any household for almost any occasion, by pointing the way to comfortable simplicity and not elaborate ritual. There are detailed directions on the duties of the waitress, including care of dining room and dishes, silver and brass, removal of stains, directions for laying the table, serving, notes on carving, suggestions for menus and discussions of buffet spreads and informal suppers. Publishers, Bobbs Merrill. Price, $2.

Gentility Is Keynote of New Fall Shoes; They Accompany Ladylike Clothes

Naturally you aren't expected to rush out and buy either the sheer blue wool suit or the glove-fitting shoes pictured above. They are shown as a forecast of things to come. The slippers are of fine brown Norwegian suede, elasticized to hug the instep and give a graceful assurance to advance fall clothes

Footwear Gives Cinderella Effect, Classic Influence in Design

By Marshall Adams
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE SHOE you'll wear this fall will probably be the most genteel thing you ever slipped your foot into.

MARSHALL ADAMS

It will probably be a shoe not noted as being "different," but rather one that quietly flatters the foot, makes it look inches smaller and gives a ladylike assurance to the rest of your costume.

And the wedge? It doesn't seem to enter the fall picture at all except as a purely collegiate or country sports shoe. That, at least, seems the status after a glimpse of early fall shoes just previewed in Washington. Although these shoes, designed by an outstanding booter, Newton Elkin, are all luxury priced shoes, they are among the best selling shoes in the world and favorites among well-groomed Washingtonians.

Classics Hold Forth

What about the materials and lines featured in these fall advances? Both materials and silhouette stem from the classics—the sandal, the pump, the Mary Jane with lowered heel, the corset tied shoe, and the neat tie and oxford, with 3-inch heel. In fact the heel is anything but the Achilles catch in fall footwear, with an occasional exception of the modified tear drop heel. There is no trickery about heels, just a 2½ or 3-inch heel for the dressier shoe and a 2¼-inch one for the oxford or business tie. Fabrics are classic too, calf, suede and the new caracul kid, a wavy surfaced satiny leather. Box cloth from England is used too, but this will probably be the last of the deep-piled fabric to reach these shores.

Lustrous Norwegian suede is the most beautiful of Mr. Elkins' fall proposals. From hardy Norse calf comes this costly leather. Due to intense cold, the hide is hardened by nature, which means it is durable once it reaches the footwear stage. And due to close shaving of the hide, there is no "flakiness" so often found in "skivers" (cheap, grainy leathers). A premium is also paid for the finest "upper stock" among hides which are then tested and graded by a tell-tale magnifying glass. All this precaution results in clean, scuffless leathers with lasts which won't crack or split, and shanks which can't wrinkle because of flexibility and sturdiness of leather.

As for the fall footwear colors to watch, the astute Mr. Elkins has them at his fingertips. They are—65 per cent black, 26 per cent brown, 6 per cent navy (although Washington, being "a blue city" might vary this figure), 2 per cent wine and 1 per cent gray and green together. Lady-like trimming will include faille or taffeta pleatings, pinwheel bows, George Washington perukes and tailored sabot straps.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

For Smooth Elbows

SHORT SLEEVED dresses, sleeveless swim and play suits bring the elbows out into the open. Smooth immaculately clean and bedimpled elbows are a beauty asset. But rough, scaly and grimy, they merely attract unfavorable attention.

Slap-dash washing of the elbows will not remove the dirt; they require more vigorous and thorough scrubbing. Scrub the elbows with tepid water, soap and a fairly stiff brush. Do this at least twice a day and more often if necessary. Dirt has a way of accumulating in the inside and outside bend of the elbows. This makes them look drab and dingy unless removed. The brush not only keeps the elbows clean but makes them firm by whipping up circulation, which in turn wards off wrinkles in that area.

Often the elbows look coarse and scaly despite faithful scrubbing. If so, remove the rough, flaky part with a pumice stone saturated with olive oil. At night apply almond oil or olive oil to the elbows and leave it on until the next morning. There is an excellent elbow cream on the market here, which smooths and satinizes the skin. It also has a mild bleaching quality that whitens the skin.

Be sure to apply the same foundation cream and powder to your elbows that you use on your face and neck so they will be the same color as your arms and face.

Unique Purse

Joan Crawford carries a unique purse for her role in "Susan and God." To complement a tailored white, wool suit, designed by Adrian, she carries a real hobo-stick over her shoulder, with a tiny plaid kerchief tied to hold her valuables. The plaid in the kerchief is the same that is found in the blouse of the suit.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman, 30, Loves Divorced Man of 50; They Talk Of Marriage, but Her Friends Distrust Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Recently I met a man who has come to mean a great deal to me. In fact, my future happiness depends upon a decision I must make, concerning him. I am 30, but the responsibility of taking care of my mother has aged me, until I am as old as most women of 35 or more. This man is 50, but unusually young for his age. He could pass for 40 in both looks and actions. Is this difference in ages too much to permit of married happiness?

He is a real gentleman; doesn't smoke or drink; and is the gentlest, kindest and most thoughtful person I have ever known. He is continually doing things for others. And he is also quite truthful. He has told me much about himself, and each time I see him, my admiration, respect and love for him increases.

While the man has been divorced, he has told me the circumstances of the case, and I could dismiss it as being no bar to our happiness, if we are big enough and if we love each other enough. Yet friends of mine tell me that because he deserted one wife, he would do the same to me. I consider this ridiculous, because I know how we feel about each other. But just to make sure, I would like your opinion as to whether we could make a go of marriage—in view of the age difference and his divorce. Your early reply will be greatly appreciated.

ANXIOUS.

Let Feeling, Facts And Intelligence Guide

DEAR ANXIOUS: If you are expecting me to argue you into this marriage, I am sorry to say that I must disappoint you. You are old enough to make your own decision; and that is what you must do—letting your feeling plus your intelligence direct you in analyzing the true facts in search of the right answer.

Twenty years' difference in ages is a lot of difference, of course; but not an insurmountable difference—if the man and woman considering marriage are congenial, complementary, co-equal in psychological maturity and genuinely enthused over a community of common interests. It may be said, I think, that the mental, physical and emotional disparity between a woman of 30 and a man of 50 isn't so great as it would be if the one were 20 and the other 40; or as it will be perhaps, when the woman is 50 and the man 70.

Whether to marry a man 20 years older, where the attraction is great and the aspects favorable, and where the age-angle alone is (for conventional reasons) giving anxiety—that is a question to be decided on a personal-preference basis. In brief, one must decide whether one is willing to take a chance on being happy for a while, even at the risk of being not-so-happy later—as against the chance of never knowing any happiness at all. (Providing, I mean, that the man represents one's lone, lorn chance at either happiness or marriage—which seems to be the fact in your case.)

About the man's divorce—in fairness to him, you must bear in mind that because a man has been divorced, it by no means follows that he is a blackguard. But in fairness to yourself, you have an inescapable obligation to inquire into the circumstances of the divorce, in order to learn whether he conducted himself in a fundamentally decent, trustworthy way in his marital and divorce dealings with his wife. The fact that he couldn't live with her; that he may, indeed, have been driven to the point of deserting her, isn't so important as WHY he abandoned the contract, and the manner in which he did it.

If evidence indicates that he gave her "a raw deal," as the crude saying goes, then you may anticipate much the same treatment, should you become his wife. But if it were a case of hopeless incompatibility from the first, in which he did his best to no avail, and then gave up the ghost to serve the long term welfare of both, you would be justified in considering him as meritorious a matrimonial risk as any bachelor or widower.

You are making a mistake in tossing the question to fair weather friends to decide. They are the most ill-equipped of advisers. Usually, they don't know the facts, are little concerned with the outcome, incline to be jealous or skeptical of another's promising opportunities, and shoot off their mouths with reckless and random spontaneity, just for the sake of authoring an opinion. So, once again, I say that your own feeling, intelligence and fact-finding abilities must be brought into operation in framing this decision upon which your "future happiness depends."

'Huffing and Puffing' Calisthenics Likely To Defeat Purpose

By Ida Jean Kain

OF ALL the diets to come out of Hollywood, the raw food fad received the most publicity. But women are quite eager to follow it or any other fad that originates in that land of promised glamor.

So the latest requests are for the Garbo diet, which, according to all the reports we can track down, is made up of raw vegetables and vegetable juices. They say she even carries her lunch to work so she won't miss her carrots, beets and turnips—all raw!

Now, raw vegetables and vegetable juices are excellent sources of vitamins and minerals and I would go so far as to say that it would be better if we took more of them in our menus. But to be well-balanced, the diet also must contain enough protein in the form of eggs, milk, cheese and lean meat, as well as whole grains and butter, in addition to vegetables and fruits. A diet made up exclusively of raw vegetables and fruits is not only inadequate but is very likely to do considerable harm. It might easily lead to colitis.

It's Not a Working Diet

As a matter of fact, Miss Garbo does not stay on this type of diet, for she visits Swedish, Russian and Italian restaurants several times a week. But the fanfare about the fad might be enough to induce other women to try subsisting solely on raw vegetables.

The wall bicycle exercise is a favorite with physical educators

What might work out all right for Miss Garbo would not begin to meet your requirements. She spends very little energy outside of acting and even saves herself then. There is a buzzer in her dressing room on the lot and not until camera angles and lighting are perfected and the performance has been rehearsed by the stand-in is she summoned to the set. She is shy and avoids people, and that saves her a lot of wear and tear.

She only makes about one picture a year. Her greatest relaxations are sun bathing and walking on the beach.

On the diet which Miss Garbo is reported to follow she could no more stand up to the work which the average woman has to do every day than the average woman could stand up under such a diet. That is why it is so utterly foolish for anyone to ask for the Garbo diet.

Lying on Floor Gives Freedom Of Movement

A Little Does Very Well

Miss Garbo is a legend. She is so mysterious about what she does that anything about her, whether it's a long hair bob or a diet of raw vegetables, is of immediate interest. If you want to drink a lass of carrot juice in place of a Martini, fine! Or eat a few raw beets or berries in place of a starchy dessert—excellent. But don't attempt to subsist on nothing but raw vegetables and juices. It will neither improve your health nor enhance your beauty!

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes.

New York.

WITH THE famous musical comedy "Irene" now so prettily danced and sung on the screen by Anna Neagle, heretofore such people as Good Queen Vic and heroic Nurse Cavell, its press agents have been frantically engaged in digging up dope on its original stage production, especially the names of the girls who played the famous role during its theatrical life.

ALICE HUGHES

Today's kids have no notion of the fame and popularity of that Cinderella story of two decades back. To call it prodigious is rank understatement. Tierney filled it with more song hits than plums in a holiday pudding. "Alice Blue Gown" is always revived today, and the "Castle of Dreams" waltz, the most forthright burglary from Chopin ever committed by Tin Pan Alley, is still a heart warmer. And the show played every whistle stop and gravel port in the country. Naturally, the Irenes were almost countless.

Edith Day created the lead, then went to England, clicked, and stayed. Others were Patti Harold, daughter of a Met tenor; Adele Rowland, married to the late Conway Tearle; Irene Dunne, Jeanette MacDonald, Helen Shipman, Dale Winter, and many more. But Sniffing Spouse Hall, conning the list, sneered and snorted.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—As you may have heard, the dumbest idea of 1940 was the quickest floppo. For only two days, out at the Fair, its myriad loud speakers blasted war news. Is there no limit to human stupidity. Here we all were, trying to forget a bit by gazing at prize cows, fancy fashions, flower beds and pretty girls, and they pulled that. But it died quickly, and earnest simple fun reigned unbothered.

Diana Barrymore, daughter of Mike Strange and old John, gets prettier every day, and looking more like her mamma, a reigning beauty of the time. The kid plays the better night clubs, and is fuller of tricks than a Frank Buck monkey. That she gets from Pop—and from Mom too, who used to give dumb old Newport many a dithering moment with unconventionalities of 20 years back.

Leave it to Ethel Merman, the song shouter, to be American to some unhorsed nobility. Always American, is that Ethel. The other night, at a swell joint, one of the former Hapsburg princesses came over and asked Merman to join her party. "Can't, honey! I got to go to a birthday party!" That's telling her, Sis!

Added to local sights is Senora Contreraz, wife of the current Venezuelan president. The gang of men with her are not boy friends or dancing gigolos, just bodyguards. What a place that is! So rotten oil-rich that these days they laugh at the American dollar. Well, who knows? In a few years current money of any kind may be just plasters with pictures, and we'll be trading each other for things. No one has yet even dreamed what the current world upheaval will mean to money and trade.

Women Find Time for Social Activities Despite Press of Convention Rush

Luncheon and Dinner Schedules Crowded

Party on Guggenheim Yacht Postponed, However, Because Vandenberg Candidacy Keeps Host At Convention Hall; D. C. Residents on Scene

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Philadelphia, June 27.—Purely social is the woman's angle of this convention, so far as I can see.

It's merely a matter of smart dressing, ubiquitous badge wearing, and a flair for tossing off such stock comments as "I want Willkie; but I'll take Taft if the Wall Street Wonder-boy can't make the grade."

HOPE R. MILLER

It also has a lot to do with entertaining and being entertained. In fact, it's partying with a vengeance and politicking with such a light touch that it can, and does, pass unnoticed in a crowd.

As remote from the real business of the convention as if they were in the middle of a Kansas cornfield rather than on this scene of action, the ladies nevertheless are all over the place.

They shuttle from one candidate's headquarters to another and collect in earnest groups to talk it over, as if the business of balloting were theirs and theirs only. They pass out badges, sing songs, whirl like dervishes from party to party and feel they have a finger in every political pie that's being served up.

They keep their powder dry by changing it as often as their snappy hats. They discuss "our candidate" with anybody who will listen, and they spend half their time trying to persuade somebody else to change his mind. Whatever can be said about them, nobody can deny the ladies are enthusiastic with a capital "E," but with the exception of the women delegates and a very few others, this convention would have moved along very much as it has, if the feminine contingent had turned up missing.

Dinner Parties Are Short and Sweet

A number of gala dinner parties, which were short and sweet so that everybody could get back to Convention Hall for the evening session, accented this evening's social calendar. Luncheons, large and small, formal and collected on the spur of the moment, filled the dining rooms at leading hotels all over town today.

One of the swankiest events scheduled for noon today, however, failed to go off as planned. Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, whose yacht, Firenze, has been the scene of a gay whirl ever since the convention began, was to have been the setting for a large luncheon. Shortly before time for it, however, the party was postponed.

Col. Guggenheim, an enthusiastic Vandenberg supporter, declined to tear himself away from Convention Hall just when his candidate was being placed in nomination. So most of the guests who were to have luncheon on the yacht assembled in the popular Hunt Room of the Bellevue-Stratford and had a party of their own. In the group I spotted Dr. and Mrs. John Oliver La Gorce, who came over from Washington this morning to be house guests of Mrs. Allen Reed, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kudner, of New York, Porter Oglesby, Charles Beck and one or two others.

This evening Mrs. Reed is entertaining at an after-the-session party for Dr. and Mrs. La Gorce and Mr. and Mrs. Gene Tunney.

Mrs. Ruth Baker Pratt Joins Luncheon Group

Lunching at the Bellevue-Stratford today I saw familiar faces every time I turned around. Clarence Hewes stopped in the Planet Room before going on to Convention Hall. Mrs. Ruth Baker Pratt, soignee as a Paris model in a trim black and white outfit, joined a large luncheon group at a nearby table.

Mr. and Mrs. Jock McLean waited "at the ropes" for a table, and finally had to go across the lobby to the Hunt Room to be served. Mrs. Henry D. Flood and her daughter, Miss Eleanor Flood, who are staying at the Drake until Saturday, collected quite a group of friends around them as they lunched in the Hunt Room. Senator Warren Austin was in a large group not far away, and in still another party, Brock Perberton was the center of attention.

"Pardon me, but I do want to shake hands with you," gushed a Taft be-badged woman as she bustled up to Mrs. Ollie James in the lobby of the Bellevue-Stratford. Gracious, but a bit puzzled, Mrs. James smiled and extended her hand to the stranger. "We're pulling hard for the Senator," the woman went on. "We're doing it, I may say, because we admire you so much."

Then, she added in a tone of uncertainty, "You are Mrs. Taft, aren't you?"

"And that's the first time anybody ever made a mistake like that," chuckled Mrs. James. Truth is, though, there is a resemblance between the two.

Willkie Popular With G. O. P. Women

Almost mobbed by the feminine contingent was Wendell Willkie when he strode through Republican Committee Headquarters a few minutes before the afternoon session opened at Convention Hall. A bevy of pretty girls clustered around him, singing that song I heard on all sides:

Hi-ho, hi-ho
With Wendell Willkie leading us
The jobs will grow, Hi-ho."

Smiling a broad, campaign smile, Willkie waved to the crowd, threw a couple of swift kisses in a direction no woman could be sure was her own, worse luck, and then disappeared down the steps.

"I'd give anything to see that man in the White House," said a dowager, dripping with sables and orchids, to say nothing of a delegate's badge. It was plain to see she was more than regretful that she had but one vote to give for the candidate of her choice.

Rumors Run Rampant In Convention City

Either out at Convention Hall or in any hotel lobby, you can stand for a very few minutes and pick up enough rumors to last you until the last gavel falls. I tried it out this morning at the Benjamin Franklin Hotel and in less than a quarter of an hour I heard that:

Martha Taft hasn't had a runner in her hose all week because she's wearing a new brand now. (Not Nylon, either.)

Women have practically deserted the Dewey headquarters now. They've lined up with Willkie by the hundreds. Yet, placards at vantage points all over Convention Hall said:

"Dewey want Dewey? We do."

Mrs. Worthington Scranton, the convention's official hostess, has been feted so high, wide, and handsome and has been working so hard for Gov. James all week, she has had to turn over most of her greeting duties to lesser lights. "She's harder to see than Herbert Hoover," one woman observed.

Mrs. Willkie is worried because nobody puts that middle initial, "L," in her husband's name. She likes it Wendell L. Willkie.

While women as a whole take a back seat, and no mistake, at the convention, a favored few center the spotlight with no effort at all. Alice Longworth, flashing one of the world's broadest smiles almost continuously, gets almost as much fanfare as Chairman Joe Martin.

Other well-known Washingtonians, who are proving woman's place can be in a convention seat or a smoke-filled campaign lobby are Mrs. Warren Austin and Mrs. Dwight Davis, both of whom seem to be everywhere at once; Mrs. Truxtun Beale, whose purple and white print suit and purple turban struck a new high in smartness on the convention floor this morning; and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, who was paged 12 different times by that many persons in the Bellevue-Stratford early this afternoon.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

A FEW FRIENDS gathered informally the other afternoon to say good-by to the Naval Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Curzon-Howe, who are leaving Washington the end of this week. Capt. Curzon-Howe will return to duty with the British fleet while Mrs. Curzon-Howe and their daughter, Anne, will go to Canada to spend the summer with Mrs. Curzon-Howe's mother.

The new British Naval Attache, Admiral Herbert Pott, was on hand to wish his colleague Godspeed as was the Naval Attache of the French Embassy, Capt. Pierre Benech. Madame Benech, whose black straw hat had a touch of white, was breathing a sigh of relief after sending her children off to summer camp, while Countess van Rechteren, hatless and wearing a yellow sports dress, said that she is still up to her ears in the job of sewing name tapes on her boy's camp outfit.

IN ONE CORNER of the room a sort of Allied huddle seemed to be taking place with Jacques Truelle, Jacques Dumaine, Christopher Bramwell, Captian Curzon-Howe, and John Foster in the middle of it.

Mrs. Casey joined the group and was complimented on her very smart frock of yellow and white print on a black ground. Another print to turn one green with envy was the pink and black one worn by Mrs. W. A. Heard, who said hat she had acquired it right here in Washington. Mrs. Heard has her summer work all planned. She will do over two very small houses in Georgetown which she plans to rent later. If the gleam in her eye when she talks about "doing over" is any indication, she will thoroughly enjoy the summer.

Madame Espil looking younger than ever after the recent whirl of launching a debutante daughter, said that she will take in the climax of the Republican Convention. The Minister of South Africa is also following the convention with great interest though his work will probably not allow him to attend.

Others who came to wish the Curzon-Howes bon voyage and a prompt return were the British Ambassador, Lord Lothian; Hugh Wilson, Mrs. Neville Butler, Col. R. V. Read, Air Commodore and Mrs. Pirie, Commander and Mrs. Hamilton Bryan, Commander W. D. Thomas, Commander and Mrs. Anthony Celeby, Miss Marian Trumbull, Miss Irene Boyle, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hill, Mrs. Ralph William Close, the Australian Minister and his Counselor, Keith Officer, Leander McCormick Goodhart and Derek Hoyer Millar.

MRS. McCOOK KNOX entertained a few ladies informally at luncheon the other day at her attractive apartment on Sixteenth street. Mrs. Knox has so many interests in Washington and finds her home so pleasantly cool that she plans to spend most of the summer in town. Besides being an expert on art, Mrs. Knox has become an expert at skeet-shooting, which would seem to give her talents wide and varied scope. Among the ladies lunching with Mrs. Knox were Madame Hurban, wife of the Minister of Czecho-Slovakia, Madame Lombard, wife of the French Military Attache, and Mrs. Lawrence Houghteling.

Commander Charles Baker has gone to the West Coast where he will resume sea duty after his recent tour in Washington. Mrs. Baker and their daughter, "Pat," are remaining in Washington and will probably be at their home in Georgetown for most of the summer.

About the Town

with DUDLEY HARMON

ANYONE WHO FEELS lonely and thinks Washington is deserted this week should drop in at the Mayflower around lunchtime. As interesting a group of diplomats, politicians and chic residents as you could find at the height of winter was gathered there the other day.

The table just to the left of the entrance, usually considered the pet property of Sumner Welles or A. A. Berle, was occupied by John L. Lewis. He and Miss Josephine Roche, a former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, had their heads together.

MR. WELLES sat in another corner, discussing the Good Neighbor policy—no doubt—with Brazilian Ambassador Martins. The latter, by the way, is always being taken for an American member of Congress.

Two tables away, Hans Thomsen, German Charge d'Affaires, scanned a menu intently. He has been an almost daily Mayflower luncher ever since coming to Washington . . . Across the room, the Axis was further represented by the Marquis Rosti Longhi and the Marchesa. Former Counselor of the Italian embassy here, he now represents his country in Ottawa.

"EVIE" ROBERT, hatless as usual, cocktailed with Charles Stewart, former director of the Export-Import Bank and once widely mentioned as Ambassador to Russia. A former Ambassador to the Soviet, Laurence Steinhardt, who now represents us in Peru, was at another table with a friend.

Joseph Tumulty, a Mayflower "regular," enjoyed his favorite chicken hash and salad Andrew.. A real gourmet, he is one of few outsiders to attend the Escoffier banquets, gathering of chefs.

MRS. GEORGE SLOANE, of Warrenton, chic in navy blue with wide white collar and cuffs, shared a table with Mrs. Mondell Gregg. Mrs. Sloane, active in Virginia politics, is a delegate to the Democratic National Convention. Before and after Chicago she will vacation in Murray Bay, Canada, where she has taken a house for the season.

Mrs. Noyes Lewis dropped in to lunch with Mrs. John Buchanan. Mrs. Lewis is off on Sunday for Winter Harbor, Me.

ODDS AND ENDS: Wendell Willkie tells friends here that his secretary's chief job is to remind him to get haircuts . . . A visitor to the White House on Wednesday was novelist John Steinbeck.

D. C. Federation Plans Big 'Allied Aid' Benefit

July 7, Date of War Relief Affair To Be Held at Women's City Club; Mrs. John Tucker Heads Committee

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post's Club Editor

July 17 was set yesterday by the coordinating committee of the District Federation as the date for an "aid to the Allies party" to raise money for war relief. It is the first large benefit planned by the committee since its appointment last week at the federation's closing meeting of the season.

Mrs. John T. Lucker, chairman of juniors for the federation, who was named chairman of the committee, and Mrs. LeVerne Beales, first vice president of the federation, co-chairman, called the meeting yesterday to determine on a benefit project and also to spur work during the summer months among the various clubs.

The party July 17 will be an afternoon and evening fete at the Women's City Club with entertainment features, auctions and refreshments.

For the present, no work program will be outlined for the federation as a whole, as practically all of the clubs either have units of their own or their members have affiliated themselves with groups. Many individual members also are collecting Bundles for Britain.

Among the federated clubs, the Takoma Park Women's Club has been doing active Red Cross work for several weeks. Mrs. Albert F. Lingle, chairman of the Takoma Park Branch of the Red Cross and a member of the club, is in charge.

The Women's City Club has a group working at the clubhouse regularly. The Sunshine and Community Club members are working with various units. The Marietta Park Club has a sewing unit which meets once a week. The members of the Political Study Club are doing volunteer work with other units. The Entre Nous recently made a contribution to war relief and the members are also doing volunteer work. The Junior Alliance members are all at work and the Housekeepers' Alliance members have been making surgical dressings, sewing, knitting and have worked at booths in the relief campaign.

The Park View Woman's Club is giving one day a week to the Red Cross and has contributed to the relief fund. The auxiliary to the D. C. Fire Department has a group that meets weekly and is now working on a quota of 50 dresses for women refugees and also making surgical dressings.

The Petworth Club is working one day a week sewing, knitting and rolling bandages, and has also contributed to the relief fund. The Philo-Classics, one of the oldest clubs in the federation reported all of its members active in various units. The Columbia Heights Art Club also has members active in other units. The National Sabbath Alliance members likewise are working with other groups. The Junior Women's Club is planning a boat cruise to raise money for the fund within the next three weeks and individual members are giving one or two days a week to Red Cross work.

Those who attended yesterday's meeting, in addition to Mrs. Lucker and Mrs. Beales, were: Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, the federation president; Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, president of the Entre Nous Club; Mrs. Gladys Ball Middlemiss, president of the Women's City Club; Mrs. Edgar Boyd Kay, president of the Political Study Club; Mrs. Frederic Newburgh, president of the Housekeepers Alliance; Mrs. A. A. Ludwig, secretary of the federation; Mrs. John R. Phillips, president of the Junior Alliance; Mrs. Jay P. Conger, past president of the Junior Alliance, and Mrs. Ernest William Howard, sewing chairman for the D. C. Fire Department Auxiliary. These women will comprise the active committee.

Fairfax Club Plans Show

Fairfax society, from Pohick to the Leesburg border, and its Washington friends will rally tomorrow to the support of a flower show and supper dance at Gracelands, the 200-year-old home of Mr. and Mrs. Rixey Smith, at Great Falls, Va., for the benefit of the Red Cross.

Sponsored by the Garden Club of Fairfax, of which Mrs. Edward Howrey, of Oak Hill, is president, and the Difficult Run Garden Club, of which Mrs. David L. Wing, of the Madeira School, is president, the event will be attended by hundreds of people from not only Fairfax and Washington, but the entire hunt country of Virginia. This will be an old-fashioned Virginia countryside supper of sugar-cured ham and brunswick stew, and the gay outburst of countryside fiddles for square dances and the Virginia reel.

The flower show, which will begin at 2 p. m., will have 15 arrangement classes and 3 specimen classes, practically all open to any amateur flower lover. Exhibits must be in place by noon and remain until 6 p. m. Sandwiches and tea in the middle of the day will be served to all exhibitors.

From 6 to 9 p. m. there will be supper and music on the lawn, and from 9 to 12 p. m. dancing to the swing of a hill billy orchestra in the large log dining room of Gracelands.

Side shows to the main events will include the sale of many handsome presents to the Red Cross, such as a large English boxwood bush, balled and ready to set, given by Mrs. George Shirley Kernan, of Mount Air, and a handmade terrace table of wrought iron and hand set zodiac ceramics, made and donated by Mrs. Willard Herring, of Fairfax.

Patrons included Gen. Edwin B. Winans, R. Walton Moore, counselor of the State Department, and the Misses Moore; Mr. and Mrs. John S. Barbour, Mr. and Mrs. Wade Ellis, Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mr. and Mrs. John W. Price, Mr. and Mrs. Donald Down

Miss Helen Janet Liebman Wed To Dr. David Louis Weinstein

Dinner Follows Ceremony at Mayflower; Couple on Trip to White Sulphur Springs; Both Studied at George Washington University

In a setting of white flowers and palms, Miss Helen Janet Liebman, daughter of Mrs. Barney Liebman, of 4707 Connecticut avenue, was married at noon yesterday to Dr. David Louis Weinstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Weinstein, of Washington.

The ceremony took place at the Mayflower, Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld officiated. The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Allen Bluestein, wore a white silk net gown made with a full skirt, wide circular train, and fitted bodice trimmed with tiny rows of shirred lace. Her long tulle veil was held with a cap of shirred net, and she carried a bouquet of orchids and lillies of the valley.

Miss Alice West, maid of honor, wore white marquisette with a full skirt, lace bodice, and tiny white hat with a veil. She carried an armful of America beauty roses. The matron of honor, Mrs. Maurice Rosenberg, was similarly dressed. Dr. Max Weinstein served as best man for his brother.

A dinner followed the ceremony. Mrs. Liebman wore a gray jersey frock with a dusty pink ostrich hat to match and a corsage of orchids. The bridegroom's mother chose sheer black lace with orchids.

The couple left later for White Sulphur Springs, the bride wearing a navy blue and white outfit with a long fitted coat and white flowered disk hat. She attended George Washington University, and Dr. Weinstein studied there and at George Washington Medical School.

Out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Bluestein, Mr. and Mrs. Bluestein, Allen Bluestein, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kimmelman, Dr. and Mrs. Max Weinsten, Mr. and Mrs. David Rothenberg and Miss Lila Fink.

Chi Omegas Hold Tea At Fieser Home

The Washington Chapter of Chi Omega is entertaining at a tea today from 4 to 6 at the home of Mrs. James Fieser, on Edgemoor lane in Bethesda. Many prominent Chi Omegas returning from the biennial convention at White Sulphur Springs will attend.

Among them will be Mrs. Ida Pace Purdue, of Los Angeles, former national president; Mrs. Ada Caldwell Tallman, of San Francisco, former national vice president; Mrs. Vesta Lockwood Watson, of this city, former national treasurer, and Mrs. Lila Eccles Brimhall, of Salt Lake City, considered outstanding Chi Omega in Utah.

Miss Anne Woodall Blackistone, president of the active chapter at George Washington University, and Miss Barbara Watson, president of the Washington Alumnae Association, will receive the guests.

Doctor, Bride To Live in N. Y.

Dr. and Mrs. Eilif C. Hanssen, who were married June 21 in Los Angeles, have flown to New York, and will reside at 65 East Fifty-fifth street.

The bride is the former Miss Carroll Ellicott Henderson, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Robert Henderson of Los Angeles, formerly of Washington. The bride made her debut in the Capital when her parents lived here. Capt. Henderson, who is retired from the Navy, is now a newspaper publisher.

Dr. Hanssen is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hanssen, of New York. The couple were married at the Henderson home in the presence of members of the two families.

The bride attended Oldfield's School in Baltimore and Dr. Hanssen is a graduate of the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University. He is now on the staffs of the New York Post Graduate, the Bellevue and the Riker's Island hospitals. He is a member of the Columbia University Club and is a lieutenantt commander in the Naval Reserve.

Mrs. Hanssen's great-uncle, Maj. Andrew Ellicott, drew up the first plan of Washington, D. C., under the direction of George Washington. Another great-uncle, the Archbishop John Carroll, founded Georgetown University. Mrs. Hanssen was named for these two ancestors.

Police Shift 3 Captains, 100 Privates

Acting Lieutenant Demoted in One Of Department's Biggest Shakeups

Three police captains and nearly 100 privates will be transferred and an acting lieutenant will be demoted Monday in one of the most drastic shake-ups in police department annals, it was learned last night.

LITTLE

Capt. Sidney J. Marks, commander of the Twelfth Precinct, and one-third of his command will be transferred "for the good of the service."

Acting Lieut. Joseph Shimon, chief of the pickup squad, will be relieved of his assignment and will be detailed to the District attorney's office as a detective sergeant.

Lieut. George M. Little, former head of the vice squad, will take charge of the pickup squad.

Nineteen privates, a lieutenant and a sergeant will be transferred to the Capitol to augment the present force on the Hill.

MARKS

A captain, two lieutenants, a sergeant and two detective sergeants will be named to fill vacancies.

Capt. Marks' transfer and the shifting of personnel of that district comes as an aftermath of the fatal shootings three weeks ago of Sergt. Charles F. Cummins and Private Otho L. Blackwell, it was learned, although officials refused comment.

Shimon's transfer to the office of United States Attorney Edward M. Curran is thought to be an indication that the District attorney is planning an active campaign against the city's vice and racket worlds. It was explained that Shimon's rank of acting lieutenant was awarded him only for the time he commanded the pick-up squad.

SHIMON

Plans for the transfer of 21 men to Capitol Hill were revealed late yesterday after a conference between the police board at the Capitol and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police.

PEARCE

Brown said he has chosen Lieut. Robert C. Pearce, present acting captain of the First Precinct, and Sergt. Charles F. Sullivan, First Precinct, to take charge of the detail.

Pearce will have a private office aside from that of the Capitol police force, it was said, and will function under the direction of the Capitol police board "almost like another precinct." The personnel of the detail, all to be experienced men, will be taken from a list of volunteers. Money to replace the appointees with recruits will be granted his department, Brown said.

Vacancies brought about by the retirement of a captain and a lieutenant will result in the promotions of a lieutenant, a sergeant and detective sergeant and one private.

BEALL

Lieut. Lawrence R. Beall, Tenth Precinct, will be raised to the rank of captain to replace Capt. John E. Bowers whose retirement because of ill health is effective July 1. Beall will be made chief clerk and also property clerk.

Capt. Harvey G. Callahan, present chief clerk, will return to his old position—commander of the First Precinct—a job he held before being named chief clerk last July 1.

HARTMAN

Lieut. John M. Roper, Twelfth Precinct, will retire from the department, also because of ill health, Monday. His commission will be awarded to Acting Lieut. Earl P. Hartman, chief of a special investigations squad, who holds the rank of a detective sergeant.

Sergt. Loraine Johnson of the Traffic Division will be promoted to lieutenant to fill the gap left by Beall's promotion.

Arlington Red Cross Speeds Up Drive

Plans to speed up drive to raise Arlington County's quota of $4,000 will be made at a meeting of the war relief committee of Arlington Chapter Red Cross at the home of the committee chairman, J. Bryon Brooks, 1212 South Oakcrest road, tonight at 8 o'clock.

George A. Collier, chapter chairman, announces election of Mrs. Phila Maxwell, chairman of volunteer service in the chapter.

Models Give Foto-Crafters Acute Angles to Shoot At

"LIGHT UP THE LOVELIES"—This was a portrait lighting demonstration at the meeting of Federal Foto-Crafters last night. The "lovely" is blond Bernadine Curley

It was "Blitzeinfuhrung!"—"lightning introduction"—night at the regular meeting of the Federal Foto-Crafters last night, and a group of nearly 50 camera enthusiasts all but swung from the chandeliers of the U. S. Public Health Auditorium to make the acquaintance, photographically speaking, of two pretty models.

Models were "Miss Treasury Department," Miss Ruth Elder, brunette, and Miss Bernadine Curley, blonde. Photographers, mostly male, shifted lights, stood on chairs and studied the models through lenses in an effort to find new angles to "shoot" beauty.

"It's fun," said Miss Curley. Miss Elder smiled shyly.

Girl Clerk's Hula Costume Wins Prize at Sorority Party

By day an administrative clerk in a Government office, Miss Fanny R. Wathen last night posed as a barefoot hula-hula dancer in a crepe paper outfit and won the prize for the most comic costume at the Kappa Gamma Sorority party at the Raleigh Hotel.

Mrs. Wanda J. Cassiday, senior auditor in the General Accounting Office, decked herself out as a radio station, "WJC," and won the award for the most original. Her costume was spangled with newspaper headlines and bars of music.

Miss Lillian Jones, of Baltimore, topping off her satin dress with a flower-trimmed hat of monumental proportions, was judged wearer of the most beautiful costume.

Epsilon Chapter of the National Education Sorority gave the party as a farewell flourish before the summer vacation. Mrs. Helen McChesney, national president, who makes her headquarters in Washington, was among the approximately 30 persons present.

Amid the array of fancy costumes, Miss Irma Stickler, clerk in the City Postoffice, wore a cowboy costume suitable for a dude ranch. Although originally from Colorado, she is leaving soon for a first visit to such a ranch in her native State. Miss Wathen is an administrative clerk in the national bituminous coal division of the Interior Department.

Unshorn Bandit Returns

Several days ago an unkempt, unshaven bandit held up a liquor store at Fifteenth and G streets northwest and escaped with $100.

Last night he showed up in a liquor store at 1113 G street northwest, still unkempt and unshaven, and left with $50.

But Baby Sleeps On

Nineteen-month-old Irene White, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph P. White, of 834 Delafield street northwest, was asleep last night when a gust of wind slammed shut the door of her bedroom. Dorothy Schuler, the maid, heard the door slam, rushed upstairs, and on finding the door locked tight, sent out a call for help.

The Fire Department Rescue Squad came to the scene, climbed up a ladder and opened the door. Irene slept through it all.

Cure for Cannibalism

Secretary Ickes yesterday disclosed to an eager, expectant world that—

—cannibalism among game birds in capitivity may be cured by common table salt.

He reported that the Bureau of Biological Survey, which Interior recently inherited from Agriculture, made a study at its Bowie, Md., wildlife research center and found out that a slight increase of salt in the diet of adult bobwhite quails stopped outbreaks of toe-pecking and other cannibalistic practices in 24 hours.

The leaflet is available upon request.

D. C. Welfare Probe Asked By McCarran

Senator Would Defer Judge Fay Bentley's Reappointment Pending Inquiry

By James D. Secrest

A suggestion that Senate action on the reappointment of Juvenile Judge Fay Bentley be delayed until after a thorough investigation can be made of the District's entire social welfare system came from Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, yesterday, after he concluded an inquiry into her fitness for office.

At the same time he expressed the opinion that a domestic relations court should be established to handle nonsupport cases, so that the Juvenile Court could devote its entire time to juvenile affairs.

Senator McCarran emphasized, however, that he was expressing only his personal opinion and that his colleagues on the subcommittee and the full Judiciary Committee may think that confirmation should not be delayed. No decision will be reached until the return to Washington of Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, one of the subcommittee members.

Ends in Near-Turmoil

The fifth morning of the hearings ended in a near-turmoil as women social welfare workers exchanged sharp words in their eagerness to defend or attack the record of Judge Bentley.

Senator McCarran, who conducted the inquiry alone, except for the first, when Senator Chandler Democrat), of Kentucky, was present, declined to state what his vote would be on the question of confirmation. However, he was emphatic in his criticism of the social welfare system, of which the Juvenile Court is a part.

He explained that his proposed investigation would not be directed toward Judge Bentley or the Juvenile Court alone, but would cover all social welfare agencies. The inquiry, he said, should be made by "a responsible agency," such as the Senate or House District Committee, or the District Commissioners.

Senator McCarran, in a statement made at the close of the hearings, said it was obvious that the Juvenile Court did not give enough time to individual cases, yet he observed at the same time that the court had too much work.

Recognizes It as Big Job

"I don't know whether anyone could handle the cases any better than Judge Bentley," he said. "No one person can handle 3,000 to 4,000 successfully."

Afterward, Senator McCarran commented that social welfare work tends in either of two directions:

"It either works for the general moral improvement of a community," he said, "or else it becomes a racket."

He explained that he was not classifying social welfare work in Washington to either category.

Senator McCarran was forced to shut off the testimony of Mrs. Lester Buchanan and an attempt by Mrs. Leslie C. Wright to reply at the close of the hearing. Mrs. Buchanan made a vain attempt to introduce a letter into the record, but McCarran refused it. Mrs. Wright, charging that it contained libel, sought unsuccessfully to obtain possession of the letter.

As a final word Mrs. Wright thanked Senator McCarran for his patience and fairness in hearing all citizens who wished to testify.

Despite an announcement the day before that no further testimony against Miss Bentley's confirmation would be heard, the subcommittee listened to a recital of a second case of committal of an unemployed father to the workhouse for nonsupport of his child.

Attorney Tells of Case

The case was recited by Nita S. Hinman, attorney, who charged that Judge Bentley refused to listen to his plea that he had been unemployed and was expecting to get his WPA job back when she sent him to Occoquan for a year, for failure to meet his payments to the child.

John L. Laskey, counsel for Miss Bentley, presented several witnesses in rebuttal testimony to charges that had been made against the judge. One of them, Virginia Ottenberg, said that while she was a probation officer in the court she knew of no instance in which a mother had been denied the privilege of speaking in her child's behalf.

Alexander Holtzhoff, special assistant to the Attorney General, submitted a copy of a report he made on Miss Bentley prior to her reappointment. Upon being questioned as to the extent of his investigation, he said that he had attended one session of the court, had talked with her and with the assistant corporation counsel, and had examined the records of cases in which complaints had been made.

'Be a Good Example'

Women in Business World Must Shun 'Temperamental Fits,' Secretarial Class Told

TEMPLE SECRETARIAL SCHOOL GRADUATES LISTENING TO MRS. DOYLE'S ADDRESS

Men can get by with temperamental outbursts better than women can, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, warned the almost solid feminine bloc of graduates from Temple Secretarial School last night.

Mrs. Doyle, delivering an address at commencement exercises at the Kennedy-Warren, gave advice on how to get along in the business world. When a man, she said, has an outburst, people are inclined to excuse him for some such reason as that "his wife doesn't understand him."

"But women can't indulge in temperamental fits," she said.

Among several other bits of advice, she said that since women are still comparative pioneers in the business world they have a responsibility to other women to "be a good example."

Roger J. Whiteford, attorney, made a brief address in connection with presenting the diplomas. Mrs. Caroline B. Stephen, president of the school, announced awards.

Charlene Topping was named honor graduate. Awards to outstanding graduates were received by Mary Griffiths, Lois Hogue, Morris Weiss, Joseph Dollahite, Elizabeth Waesche, Alfred Rego, Jane Rust, Fredricka Waldman, Lottie Payne and Louise Buckley. Those receiving honorable mention were Sidna Buckler, Kay Cawthon and Dorothy Archambault.

Truck Kills Boy, 14 Months; Auto Hurts 2d

Injured 4-Year-Old Dragged 100 Feet After 'Hooking' Ride

Traffic accidents yesterday took the life of a 14-month-old boy and sent another child to a hospital painfully injured.

Lawrence H. Honesty, colored, 15 months, of 2215 L street northwest, was dead when he arrived at Emergency Hospital after being run over by a light delivery truck in front of his home.

Police said the truck was operated by Adolphus W. Ashby, colored, 35, of 1722 Fourteenth street northwest, who pulled from the curb, striking Lawrence with a front bumper.

Ashby was placed under a technical charge of "held for the coroner," and was released in custody of his attorney pending an inquest.

The death raised the District traffic toll this year to 36, five less than the number at the same time last year.

Fred Aubrey, 4, of 770 Eleventh street southeast, suffered cuts and bruises to his face, arms, legs and body yesterday when he was dragged nearly 100 feet by an automobile on which he "hooked" a ride.

The accident occured in front of Fred's home, police said, when the boy jumped on the rear of the automobile of Roy L. Gibson, of 513 Ninth street southeast.

Swanson Cox, 31, Galt place northeast, was in Casualty Hospital with head injuries after he was injured in an auto accident on the Largo road, about 2 miles from Marlboro, Md. He was taken to the hospital by the Bladensburg Rescue Squad.

Anti-Smokers Meet

England's young men are stunted and unfit for war service because of the use of tobacco, it was stated in a paper by Dr. D. H. Kress read at the eighteenth anniversary of the founding of the District Anti-Cigarette Alliance last night. The meeting was held at the First Congregational Church, Tenth and G streets northwest.

Miss Ella Mulligan, of the Georgetown branch of the Loyal Temperance Legioners, recited "The Touch of a Master's Hand." A group of girls presented slides and comments on evils of the use of cigarettes.

Plane Rushes Senator Clark's Daughter Here for Operation

Girl Stricken En Route To Home in Idaho, On Her 13th Birthday

Nancy Clark, daughter of the Idaho Senator, celebrated her thirteenth birthday Wednesday in a most unusual manner, it was learned last night.

Stricken with appendicitis while at Wooster, Ohio, Nancy was rushed in a special ambulance to a chartered plane in Akron, Ohio, and thence sped to Emergency Hospital for an immediate operation. At the hospital last night it was said that Nancy was doing nicely.

On Tuesday the Senator's wife, Mrs. D. Worth Clark, and their three daughters, Nancy, Helen, 10, and Dorothy, 3, together with Miss Lulu Shank, the Senator's secretary, left by motor for the Clark home in Pocatello, Idaho, where they planned to spend the summer.

At Wooster, Ohio, Nancy, who is an eighth-grade pupil at Immaculata Seminary, complained of pain and a physician there urged an immediate operation.

Arrangements were quickly made to hurry Mrs. Worth and Nancy back to Washington by ambulance and plane. They arrived early Wednesday. An operation was performed at once.

Meanwhile, Miss Shank and the other two Worth children drove back to Washington. Having given up their residence at 2913 Glover driveway northwest, the Worths took up temporary quarters at the Dupont Circle Apartments.

Court Halts Plan to Tie Up Huge Estate

Sets Aside Part Of Will Holding $2,000,000 in Trust 50 Years

The attempt of the late Willard A. Lalor, railroad official, to tie up his $2,000,000 estate in trust for more than 50 years, so it would increase to about $12,000,000, was thwarted yesterday by Justice David A. Pine of the District Court.

Justice Pine said such an accumulation was "inconsistent with the principles of democracy" and set aside this portion of Mr. Lalor's will.

The decision means that about $50,000 more of the estate income will be distributed among Mr. Lalor's heirs every year, instead of being hoarded by trustees as he directed.

Mr. Lalor was employed by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad for 42 years before his death in Chicago October 9, 1934. He lived at the Metropolitan Club in Washington, having neither wife nor children. Hill will was probated here February 19, 1935.

Mr. Lalor left $400,000 for educational purposes and these bequests were not affected by Justice Pine's decision. The will provided that the bulk of the remaining estate, which was slightly more than $2,000,000, be held by trustees until 21 years after the death of the longest lived of two of his nieces, Mrs. Ruth Lalor Olson, Richmond, Calif., and Mrs. Esther Lalor Guth, San Marino, Calif.

The will provided annuities upon a sliding scale, with a $6,000 yearly maximum, for these nieces and for his sister, Mrs. Anna Lalor Burdick, 142 Twelfth street southeast; his brother, Thomas Jefferson Lalor, a resident of California; a nephew, Dr. Charles Lalor Burdick, Wilmington, Del.; a niece, Mrs. Margaret Lalor Cary, of California, and a nephew, Thomas Morton Lalor, Los Angeles.

Dr. Lalor and the Chemical National Bank, New York, are trustees of the estate.

Upon termination of the trust, Mr. Lalor had directed that one-fifth of the accumulated estate go to each of the nieces and nephews or their heirs.

The trustees filed a suit against all of the legatees, on December 23, 1926, in which the [illegible] was informed that the estate had a yearly surplus of about [illegible] after paying all expenses and annuities. The trustees said the standard tables of life expectancy indicated that the property could not be distributed until 1966, by which year the estate would amount to $12,000,000.

The court was asked to determine whether such an accumulation was valid.

The question has been raised only once in the history of American jurisprudence. Justice Pine in his opinion praised Attorneys Spencer Gordon and Dallas Townsend (counsel for the heirs) and George C. Gertman (guardian ad litem for heirs not yet born) for their diligence in presenting legal learning relevant to the issue.

Justice Pine said, in effect, that by the Common Law of England which is still in effect here, the Lalor trust appeared to be valid. However, said Justice Pine, the common law rules the District only so far as "it has not become obselete or unsuited to our conditions."

"It would be sharply contrary to the trend of the law and a step backward," said Justice Pine, to hold that the law permitting such accumulations ever had effect in the United States.

"Public interest and welfare," he declared, "forbid that a dead hand from the past should shape and control the present except so far as permitted by law. Permitting restraints on alienation (of property from an estate) are inconsistent with the principles of democracy. They are the concomitants of an aristocracy. Such restraints are relics of a feudal society, are obsolete and are repugnant to our institutions and conditions."

Grand Jury To Investigate Boy Shooting

Accidental Wounding Of Youngster Will Be Considered Today

The District grand jury will start today an investigation of the accidental shooting of a 10-year-old colored boy by a United States Capitol Police sergeant, District Attorney Edward M. Curran disclosed last night.

The boy, Fred Walker, jr., 912 Fifth street northwest, suffered a bullet wound in the neck from the revolver of Sergt. Vernon O. Deus. The boy was caught bathing in the Capitol Plaza pool Monday afternoon.

Curran revealed that the case would be presented to the grand jury following a conference with his assistant, John W. Fihelly, who Wednesday received a report on the shooting from a group of colored leaders.

"Mr. Fihelly has made a complete report on his investigation of this case," Curran said. "It is our opinion that the facts ought to be presented to the grand jury immediately. We shall submit the case to the grand jury now sitting Friday morning."

The present District grand jury is scheduled to expire Monday night after making its final presentment of indictments Monday afternoon. Thus, it was pointed out, its decision in the shooting will be known soon.

Sergt. Deus was suspended indefinitely and reprimanded for the shooting, though Lieut. Roy W. Brown, who investigated the case for the Capitol Police Board, said the discharge of the revolver was "purely accidental."

The Walker boy and three other children were brought from the pool by Capitol police to the guard room in the Senate Office Building, where Sergt. Deus talked to them. Deus said his gun fired when he picked it up from a table and started to put it in his holster.

FCC Reforms Are Demanded At Hearing

Reforms of the Federal Communications Commission were urged yesterday before the Attorney General's committee on administrative procedure.

The committee is holding hearings at the United States Court of Appeals Building, receiving information upon which to base recommendations for improvement of Federal agencies.

Duke Patrick, of the Federal Communications Bar Association, said the FCC was reluctant to grant hearings on applications for broadcasting licenses and was arbitrary in its ruling upon petitions to intervene in proceedings.

Patrick suggested that trial examiners for Federal commissions be organized under a separate agency, such as the Department of Justice, and assigned as needed.

Clifton Aires, 50, Capital GuideBook Publisher, Dies

Clifton Aires, 50, editor and publisher of This Week in the Nation's Capital, official guide book of Washington, and prominent in local advertising circles, died yesterday in Georgetown University Hospital after a three-week illness.

Mr. Aires was a native of Washington and was educated here at Western High School.

Formerly advertising manager of the Washington Herald, he published the National Theater program besides editing the guide publication.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Rita Sullivan Aires; a son, Gregory Aires; a daughter, Miss Mary M. Aires, and a grandchild.

Funeral rites will be at 2 p. m. tomorrow at his home, 4329 Windom place northwest. Burial will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Red Cross Buys Auto Kitchens For British

Roosevelt Order Permits 'Mercy Ships' To Sail in War Zone

The American Red Cross yesterday announced further purchases of supplies for the British Red Cross including rolling kitchens of the automobile trailer type which will be sent together with ambulances, foodstuffs, clothing and medical supplies to war relief groups in England.

Meanwhile President Roosevelt signed an amendment to the neutrality act which gives him authority to send American Red Cross "mercy ships" into war combat zones without guarantees of safe conduct from belligerents.

American ships of any type have hitherto been barred from combat zones unless safe conduct assurances have been granted, under requirements of the act.

Plans Trip to Britain

At the same time Red Cross headquarters announced that David K. E. Bruce, a member of the American Red Cross relief advisory committee, will leave shortly for London to confer with the newly formed American Red Cross Committee in England, of which Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy is honorary chairman.

Meanwhile the local chapter continued to receive contributions in its war relief fund campaign as $7,233.58 was added to bring the total to $323,794.44, or $23,794.44 above its goal.

Officials said several Government departments were still combing their ranks for donations as the campaign reached a "clean-up" stage.

Several benefits scheduled in the next week will help swell the fund. The first of these is a baseball double-header tomorrow afternoon at Griffith Stadium. Another is the Red Cross Golf Tournament to be held at the Indian Springs Country Club on July 4, when some of the best known golfing stars will participate.

Children Add $13.10

A group of enterprising children yesterday added $13.10 to the local fund, representing proceeds of a lawn party. The contribution came from Bobby Oatman, 9, of 2920 Upton street northwest, as representative of the group.

The golfing fraternity received an appeal yesterday from President Tom Walsh, of the Professional Golfers Association, who urged 1,800 professionals throughout out the country to sponsor one-day Red Cross war relief benefit tournaments at their home clubs during the month of July.

26 CAA Student Inspectors Near End of Test Period

Twenty-six applicants for the rating of civil aeronautics inspector will complete intensive flight testing at the Hybla Valley Airport, Alexandria, July 1, it was announced today by L. G. Povey, CAA senior inspector.

The candidates have been performing numerous maneuvers at the Alexandria field for the past month, and upon completion of the examinations the pilots will be dispatched to various air fields throughout the United States and possessions.

Prior to instruction at Hybla given by Inspector Povey, who organized the Cuban air force in 1933, the fliers were required to complete a 30-day schooling period following the acceptance of their applications.

Two Are Arrested In Housebreaking

Vernon Shirley, 23, steam fitter's helper, and Robert B. Clokey, 34, steam fitter, both of 11 Conduit road, Montgomery County, are in the Arlington County jail on charges of housebreaking and grand larceny.

They were arrested by Detectives Hugh Jones and John Saunders.

Barred Tunes To Be Played By Symphony

Kindler Announces European Program For Concert July 14

Without bitterness, because "bitterness has no place in art," the National Symphony Orchestra will present a program of Europe's "Verboten" music at the Water Gate at 8 p. m. Sunday, July 14, Dr. Hans Kindler, the conductor, announced yesterday.

The 14th is Bastille Day to Frenchmen, Dr. Kindler reminded, in announcing the concert "for those nations that may have been politically conquered but which still are spiritually free."

Much of the music the orchestra will give then, at the second Water Gate concert (the first is scheduled for Sunday, July 7), is now forbidden by the German conquerors of European nations. Dr. Kindler, at the press conference yesterday, became emotional when talking about it.

"It will be a kind of 'verboten' program," he considered. "But it will be inspirational, with a theme of hope of victory running through, he said. He did not think of the program as "cultural propaganda," but as "something inevitable."

Asked if the Diplomatic Corps here would be invited, Dr. Kindler considered it to be a "good idea." The program will include:

The sixteenth century Dutch tunes, "Cursed Be the Oppressor" and "Oh, Unhappy Times;" Cesar Franck's Symphony (Belgian), Chopin Waltz (Poland), Grieg numbers (Norwegian), "Finlandia," by Sibelius, and some of the works of Mendelssohn.

Enthusiastic over prospects for the Water Gate season, Dr. Kindler observed that it is starting out "with a bang." He called attention to the favorable setting the Water Gate will afford the operas, "Pirates of Penzance" and "H. M. S. Pinafore," to be presented August 4 and August 7, respectively. Kirsten Flagstad, soprano, will appear July 31; Jessica Dragonette, soprano, appears July 10, in the Water Gate series.

The opening concert, with Dr. Kindler conducting, will be dedicated to the American Red Cross. The season ends with a "gala final concert" on August 28.

Prince Georges 'Sixth Column' Members Active

The members of the newly formed "American Sixth Column" executive council were announced yesterday by Allan S. Waldo, of Hyattsville, president. The organization was formed recently by war veterans and their associates of Prince Georges County to combat subversive activities in the county.

Other officers are Guy E. Curtis, Riverdale, vice president; Thomas A. McGaffin, Riverdale, secretary, and Woodruff Warren, Edmonston, treasurer. The members of the executive council are William Wedding, mayor of Riverdale; William A. Carson, Riverdale, chairman of the county board of commissioners; Al Du Verger, Mount Rainier; H. R. Wells, Riverdale, and William Manning, Bladensburg.

FCC to Expand Field Force

Preparing to strengthen its 24-hour watch of all communications channels, including broadcasting and other radio transmission, the Federal Communications Commission yesterday announced plans for augmenting its field force and its fixed and mobile monitoring stations to aid national defense.

Several hundred inspectors and other radio experts will be hired at once, the FCC said, to join the field staff.

Present radio monitoring facilities will be supplemented with ten primary long-range direction-finder stations.

Besides its customary field duties, the field division will be required to watch radiotelegraph and radiotelephone circuits for superfluous signals and to translate foreign language broadcasts.

Isaac Rabbitt, 77, Dies at Travilah

Isaac Harry Rabbitt, 77, Travilah (Md.) farmer, died suddenly yesterday from a heart attack in a barn on his farm. Police said he was driving cattle into the barn when he was stricken. His wife, Mrs. Anna May Rabbitt, was with him at the time.

Mr. Rabbitt was a life-long resident of Montgomery County and had been farming at Travilah for more than 40 years.

LOVE WALKS IN! Cunning canary Peggy Wood will leave the King Cole Room tomorrow eve because she's soon to be married to Ronnie Herren, who first saw her in the K. C. R. a few weeks ago. Yessah, love and Ronnie walked right in together. The wedding will probably take place at Peggy's home in Selma, N. C., in a few weeks. The prospective bridegroom is with the Department of Agriculture, studies law at nights, then goes King Cole Rooming. Stout fellow, what? P. S. There'll be a sensational new singer in the King Cole Room in a few days. Owner Vincent Gallagher doesn't want her name announced yet. But she's a honey.

MAYFAIR CHANGES APPROACH. The Gene Beri Trio, known for their satin-smooth harmonies, will open in Mayfair on July 8. They come direct from that gilded hostelry, the Palm Springs Hotel, Palm Springs, Calif. . . . They'll have to be awfully good to succeed Lyle Smith and his lads and Helen Reilly, who've made friends by the hundreds.

LA TRIANITA, exquisite and noted Spanish dancer, will head next week's extra large revue on the Shoreham Terrace. There'll also be Paul Mix, who's a sort of a junior Will Rogers and does rope tricks, and an intriguing act called Olive Miles & Co., presenting "Fifi, the Cow." (Note. Terrace patrons will positively not be permitted to milk Fifi.) Also in the line-up will be the Shyrettos, stratospheric unicyclists from the San Francisco World's Fair and the Folies Bergere. The Shyretto family has been unicycling for three generations.

EVALYN GETS BIG OFFER. Next stop for Evalyn Tyner, star pianist of the Neptune Room, may be the Starlight Roof of the Waldorf in New York. The Waldorf wants Evalyn now, but she's decided to remain in the Neptune Room with the new Milt Herth Trio. Later in the summer she may take up the Waldorf offer.

RIVIERA'S HARRIET DERCK is one of the most charming and unusual singers who's ever come to our town. She's even prettier than her pictures, sings in French and English (she can sing in German, too, but she doesn't like to right now), plays a mighty pretty piano and has a practically magical song delivery. But her best trick, we think, is the almost unbelievable one of being sophisticated and very wholesome at the same time. The Good Fairy must have been hanging around when Harriet made her debut in this world.

MAESTRO BILL STRICKLAND is vacationing from the Lotus. We think he went to Carolina, but you can't tell about Bill. He may even be back by the time you read this. Buddy Shaner is Lotus' pinch-hitter emcee, and does a nifty job.

RAINBOW DOG FANCIERS. The pure bred pet of Maestro Milton Davis, of the Rainbow Room, is Niggie, a black cocker spaniel. He's the successor to Milt's schnauzer, Schnootsy, who passed away at the ripe age of 10 . . . Violinist Durward Bowersox owns a black Scottie, cute as those you see on birthday cards . . . The gloom around the Meyer Davis office that books the Rainbow orchestra, is so thick you could cut it with a dull knife. For Manager Dave McWilliams is grieving over the death of Jerry, one of the handsomest and smartest bulldogs who ever walked.

"MOONLIGHT WALTZES" are providing big romantic moments on the Starlight Roof. The lights whisk out and the Arthur Herbert orchestra plays the dreamiest waltzes ever written. If there isn't any moon, well—that's all right, too.

MUSIC TO REMEMBER. Adele Van's (Glen Echo) caroling of "Stardust" . . . The way that Little Jack Little (Metronome) combines new and old numbers in every dance group. He says that it's psychologically the right thing to do . . . The rousing treatment given "Dear Old Girl of Mine" in the New Bavarian by the "Singing Congressman," Representative Louis C. Rabaut, Owner Fritz Miller and Tommy Suter . . . Those tickle-toe dance arrangements played by Rod Raffell and the Nightingale orchestra . . .

CUTEST WINK in town is that of frolicsome Eileen George, of the Anchor Room. Especially when she decides to acknowledge an acquaintance while she's in the middle of a song.

HI HAT PICTURE. So many people they're practically sitting on each others' laps . . . Oscar has to take the "Reserved" card off that corner table where he tries to eat his dinner every night . . . Bill Baker and his Diplomats putting so much zing into their rhythms that you hate to think they're leaving after Saturday . . . Perfect air cooling and perfect Hawaiian coolers.

CHANGIN' AROUND. Clarinetist Al Sokol, one of the finest, has joined George Stein's River Bend orchestra . . . Star Trumpeter Jack Torrey, of the Neptune Room Swing Islanders, will be with Paul Kain's Glen Echo orchestra beginning Monday.

PREDOMINANT PATRONS in the Harrington Tavern are business men, all with that chipper look that signifies someone's been sold a bill of goods . . . You'll always find a bunch of musicians in Dick's Grill. The Swing Club's upstairs, you know . . . Lots of happy looking couples are always at Lee Stables, either inside or getting the drive-in service. It must be that romantic influence . . . Big family parties have a special preference for the plantation dinners at O'Donnell's Farms. But the dancing crowd arrives en force for the Saturday night stepping.

CALL-OF-THE-WEEK. GMAC is looking for a bunch of hill-billy musicians. It seems they bought a car in Florida and the last payment on it was postmarked Washington . . . Dear GMAC: It's an old hill-billy custom.

Turn this picture any way you like. It's Laurence, the Australian What-Is-It at the Lotus

Dr. Griffith Sees German Victory Within Six Weeks

England will capitulate to Germany in "from two to six weeks," Dr. Ernest Griffith, American University professor of political science, predicted yesterday in a lecture to 300 students at the University of Maryland summer school.

The end of England's existence in its present form impends because of "too many different (political) opinions" in England which prevented the unified action accomplished in the dictator countries, he said.

Basis of the divergence in ideologies, Dr. Griffith said, originated in the four political groups in England in the last 20 years. The pro-French group, a pro-League of Nations and pro-Weimar group, an anti-Russian (conservative government) group, and a pro-Russian and Socialist domestic (labor) group.

U. S. Biologists Make Air Survey Of Water Chestnuts

Disturbed by the rapid spread of the water chestnut, two Biological Survey scientists, Clarence F. Smith and Robert H. Smith, flew above the Potomac River yesterday and declared the growth covers about 3,000 acres of water area.

They took pictures from the Goodyear blimp, Enterprise, and these will be shown to sportsmen's clubs and other outdoor groups as reminders that the water chestnut should be fought before it more seriously threatens river channels, boat propellers and many other forms of vegetation.

*X WASHINGTON: FRIDAY, JUNE 28, 1940 23

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Boston, June 27.—It is a cruel kind of trick that the baseball fates are playing on Joe Cronin and his Red Sox. This was supposed to be the year when the Red Sox had a chance to beat out the Yankees and the club which did that was supposed to win the pennant. But look at the Red Sox. They're comfortably ahead of the Yankees, but they are winning no pennant. The fans of Bostontown have almost concluded that their Red Sox are now in a futile chase for some sort of a will-o-wisp. Cronin's club went into the West with a growing league lead only to lose 9 out of 15 games and come back as a third place team. They are ahead of the Yanks, but its getting them nothing. To their great dismay the Red Sox have discovered that it isn't the Yankees—but two other clubs—who seemingly must be beaten before the Red Sox can win any pennant. The Cleveland Indians and the Detroit Tigers are both ahead of Boston and showing no signs of tossing in the towel. The Red Sox, like everybody else, underestimated these two clubs. The Red Sox, who are in no great shape to battle it out against one serious challenge are now confronted with two.

POVICH

One item which has not been overestimated is the Red Sox pitching. Even when backed by the most dangerous hitting club in the league, Bostons pitchers can't win with any consistency. It's Cronin's tough luck, too, that in a year when Lefty Grove's good left arm was more vital than ever to the club, Grove's left arm is no longer good. We refer you to the record—three victories and two defeats. There is no disposition to pick the Red Sox in any stretch battle with either the Tigers or Indians, much less both. Young Herb Hash is the only consistent winner on the Boston pitching staff, and both Detroit and Cleveland can toss well-rounded pitching staffs into the pennant battle. It's Cronin's tough luck also that in a year when his club needs all its power to off-set its pitiful pitching, he can't hit. At this writing he's the weakest hitter on the Boston Club, and has demoted himself to seventh place in recognition of that painfully harrowing fact.

We'd say that the solid club among the three leaders are the Detroit Tigers. They are confounding everybody, particularly your correspondent who couldn't even visualize 'em as a sure-first-division club in the south. But there the Detroit Club is, and its beginning to look like a dandy. Manager Del Baker seemingly has all the pennant ingredients.

Those Detroit hitters are murder. Hank Greenberg, Charley Gehringer, Ruby York, Barney McCosky and Pinky Higgins can overcome any ordinary pitching deficiencies with their slug. Rudy York is getting to be a fancy first baseman, honest, and Dick Bartell has been sparking the club from his shortstop job.

The Tigers have come up with pitching that the critics weren't willing to concede they had in the spring. Buck Newsom and Tommy Bridges and Schoolboy Rowe have lost only six games for the Tigers this year and they've been taking their regular turns. They've come up with a pair of rookie stars in Harold Newhouser and Johnny Gorsica. They're equipped with enough pitching to battle it out with any club in the last half of the season.

In contrast to the Tigers, the Indians are not a well-rounded club. Their pitching is the best in the league and so is their infield defense but they have not the power of either the Tigers or Red Sox and they're a notoriously bad road club. They also have a habit of beating themselves with internal dissension and a shocking lack of fortitude.

Place of Business Note.

Enroute to a Chicago suburb the other day a motorist was overhauled by a motor cop who gave him the old "What's the hurry" look. "Where do you live?" asked the cop. "In Chicago," was the answer. "Where do you work?" asked the cop. "At Thirty-fifth and Shields," said the motorist. The cop pondered that address a moment and said, "What are you giving me? That's the White Sox park. It's the only thing at Thirty-fifth and Shields." "That's right," said the motorist. "And you work there?" said the cop incredibly. "Yes, right in the middle of the blame thing," said Ted Lyons who had been batted out of the box earlier in the afternoon.

Choose your person note.

Frank Gabler was pitching for the White Sox years ago when the Athletics had the bases full with homerun hitter Bob Johnson at bat. The score was tied. Johnson was looking balefully at the pitcher. He gripped his bat with such intensity that Gabler later swore he saw sawdust coming out of the handle. Gabler walked Johnson on four straight pitches the last one an intentionally wide ball. Manager Jimmy Dykes stormed from the dug-out, "Why'd you walk Johnson and force over a run?" he demanded of Gabler. "Well," said the pitcher, "would you rather be one run behind or four runs behind?"

Dodger Runner Outscrambles Cub Infielder in Race Back to Third Base

Confusion rules as Pete Coscarat (No. 3), of the Brooklyn Dodgers, overruns third base and tries to scramble back ahead of Stan Hack. He outfumbled Hack, made it back. Action came in the seventh on Peewee Reese's bunt which Pitcher Bill Lee fielded, threw to Hack. Dodgers won, 5 to 4

17,000 See Bill Lee Lose Tenth Game

Two Hits for Two Runs Save Contest For Brooklyn's Tex Carleton

By the Associated Press

Brooklyn, June 27. — Brooklyn took the final game of the series from the Chicago Cubs at Ebbets Field today, 5 to 4, as big Bill Lee gained the questionable distinction of being the first National League flinger to lose ten decisions.

Trailing by a run going into the eighth, the Dodgers brought joy to 17,000 fans by pushing across the tying and winning scores on a fluke double by Dixie Walker, a walk, a double steal, a slashing single by Dolf Camilli and Joe Vosmik's fly to center.

The rally saved Tex Carlton from absorbing his second loss of the year and gave the victory to Left Vito Tamulis, who relieved him in the course of a three-run Chicago rally in the eighth.

Carleton, who has completed only one of eight starts since his early season no-hitter, was started on his way to the baths by Pinch-hitter Billy Rogell's home run over the scoreboard with Todd on base. When Tex walked the next man, Lee, he was yanked.

Billy Herman's double to center off Tamulis then put the Cubs ahead, but their advantage lasted only until the Flatbushers could come to bat.

Rogell's homer, incidentally, was only his forty-second in a ten-year big league career. It was the fifty-eighth four-master off Brooklyn's pitchers this season.

The Cubs scored in the first frame off Carleton when Stan Hack walked, reached third on Billy Herman's hit and came in on Gleeson's smash to first base. Though they kept him in trouble, Tex held them off from there until the eighth.

Pete Coscarart's double off the right wall scored a pair for Brooklyn in the second. Camilli made it 3 to 1 in the seventh when he singled, reached second on a sacrifice, stole third and romped home on Carleton's fly.

Four Eastern Players Left in College Golf

By the Associated Press

Manchester, Vt., June 27.—Half of the eight quarter-finalist berths in the National Collegiate A. A. Golf championships were won by Eastern college golfers today as the South gained three brackets and the Midwest one in third-round matches.

The survivors are Bill Clark, of Dartmouth; Eddie Foy, the Holy Cross football player; Bill Cordingley, of Harvard; Harry Haverstick, of Swarthmore; Cary Middlecoff, of Mississippi; Stewart (Skip) Alexander, of Duke; F. Dixon Brooke, of Virginia, and Bill Hall, of Iowa State.

A form-shattering second round spelled disaster for such outstanding favorites as Johnnp Burke, of Georgetown, the 1938 intercollegiate champion, and Lee Ramsel and Bert McDowell, both of Louisiana State.

A form-shattering second round spelled disaster for such outstanding favorites as Johnny Burke, of Georgetown, the 1938 intercollegiate champion, and Lee Ramsel and Bert McDowell, both of Louisiana State.

Brooke, who eliminated Burke by a 4 and 2 margin this morning, completed a busy day by beating Arnold Zimmerman, of Princeton, in a 20-hole match. Foy, Hall and Middlecoff gained one-hole victories over Earl Stewart, of Louisiana State; Phil Donohue, of Notre Dame, and Burleigh Jacobs, of Wisconsin, respectively, and Clark eliminated the last of the Princeton delegation, Peter Page, 2 and 1.

In the other third-rounders, Cordingley topped Tom Hoak, of Iowa State, 4 and 3. Haverstick eliminated Frank Newell, of the University of California at Los Angeles, 2 and 1, and Alexander overwhelmed Ed Meister, of Yale, 5 and 4.

Brooke, a 20-year-old Birmingham, Ala., youth who took up golf at the age of 7, opened his match against the favored Burke holing a 140-yard niblick shot for a birdie three on the first green to take a command that never was threatened.

Driving Trouble

Burke put almost every one of his tee shots into the rough, with the result he was constantly in trouble long before the smooth-stroking Cavalier, with a one-over 36, started home with a two-hole lead. Burke won the eleventh with a regulation three to cut his opponent's lead in half, only to have the latter wind up the match in decisive fashion by one-putting the last five greens. His par fours gave him three of them.

Ray Higgins, of Georgetown, followed Burke in defeat in a second round match, losing on the eighteenth hole to Tom Doak, of Iowa State. Baltimore's Otto Greiner also lost in the second round to Cary Middlecoff, the first University of Mississippi entry to start in the tournament.

Upper half—Cary Middlecoff, Mississippi, vs. F. Dixon Brooke, Virginia; Bill Clark, Dartmouth, vs. Eddie Foy, Holy Cross.

Lower half—Bill Cordingley, Harvard, vs. Bill Hall, Iowa State; Stewart (Skip) Alexander, Duke, vs. Harry Haverstick, Swarthmore.

Your Chance Wins Feature At Delaware

By the Associated Press

Delaware Park, Del., June 27.—Mrs. George D. Widener's good colt, Your Chance, which hauled down top money in last week's rich Dwyer Stakes at Aqueduct Park through a disqualification, proved much the best of five top-flight 3-year-olds which matched speed here today in the third running of the $5,000 added Diamond State Stakes.

Ridden flawlessly by the veteran Harry Richards, Your Chance raced the mile and an eighth of the Diamond State in the record-shattering time of 1:51, clipping one full second off the old record. The race was run over a lightning fast track.

Chasing Your Chance past the judges was Greentree Stable's Century Note, but he was a soundly beaten pursuer finishing three lengths in the wake of the flying Widener colorbearer. Third money fell to Dit, from the stable of Arnold Manger, and William L. Brann's Pictor and Wheatley Stable's Snow Ridge finished in a dead heat for fourth honors.

It was the richest Diamond Stake running since the stake was inaugurated in 1938 and top money was worth $6,380 to Mrs. Widener. In addition to the purse, the Philadelphia sportsman was presented a handsome trophy by Gov. Richard C. McMullen of Delaware, who, along with Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor of Maryland, witnessed the race from a flag-bedecked box.

Generally regarded as second only to Bimelech among the Nation's 3-year-olds, Your Chance was sent postward a solid favorite by the 10,000 fans in attendance.

Nash to Toss 1st Ball In Benefit Twin-Bill

Softball and Diamond Stars Are Ready For Games Tomorrow at Griffith Stadium For Red Cross War Relief Benefit Fund

By Bill Burnett

Adding appropriate color to a diamond double-header with plenty of color of its own, the Red Cross yesterday promised to send a squad of pretty nurses as usherettes to The Washington Post-sponsored "Sandlot Day" at Griffith Stadium tomorrow for the benefit of the Red Cross' war fund.

And an official opening will be given the twin session at 2 p. m. when Earl A. Nash, volunteer chairman of Public Relations of the D. C. Chapter, hurls out the ball that will send the Sport Center Softball League All-Stars against the finest "softie" aggregation in town, Senate Beer. Approximately one hour later, the baseball portion of the bill brings together The Post's All-District Schoolboy team and the Heurich Brewers, D. C. sandlot champions.

Huber to Announce

With the biggest display of sandlot talent in Washington only one day away, support of the affair was unanimous in all quarters. Latest luminary to offer his services to the benefit was George Huber, former WMAL sports commentator, who will do all announcing during hostilities. Each player will be introduced by Huber, and fans will be given a running description throughout.

Nats Invade Less Austere Boston Today

Boston, Mass., June 27.—Back in what they hope is still the effete East, the Nats open a four-game series with the Red Sox tomorrow after a bumpy trip through the West. Here they hope to save their road trip from being an utter and dismal flop.

Thus far they have four victories against nine defeats to show for their efforts on their road swing, but Boston does not present the same formidable aspects the Red Sox took on in the early season. Joe Cronin's club also has been

Schumacher's 3-Hit Pitching Defeats Phils

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, June 27.—Hal Schumacher shutout the Phillies with three singles tonight as the New York Giants pounded Hugh Mulcahy and Lloyd Brown for 15 hits and a 7-to-0 victory before 10,983 at Shibe Park.

Schumacher retired the first 13 Phils to face him. Merrill may then beat out an infield tap that glanced off Schumacher's glove.

In the seventh, Johnny Rizzo singled and became the only Phil runner to reach second when Schumacher let loose a wild pitch. May walked, but both were left stranded. Bill Atwood got the third and last Phil hit in the eighth.

The Giants scored three runs in the first on Mel Ott's single with the bases full, and Joe Marty's error. They put together three hits with a fielder's choice for two runs in the sixth. In the eighth Schumacher singled Ott home.

Harry Danning's single off relief pitcher Brown accounted for the last Giant run in the ninth.

Pitcher, 18, Drops Dead on Mound After Heart Attack

By the Associated Press

Petrolia, Ontario, June 27 (AP).—Edward (Ted) Ireson, 18-year-old pitcher for the Sarnia team in the Michigan-Ontario Baseball League, dropped dead on the mound today as he was about to deliver a pitch.

Ireson fell over on his face as he wound up. He was dead when Dr. R. P. Dougall, a spectator, reached him. Death was attributed to a heart attack.

Ireson had pitched two innings and Sarnia was leading 1-0 in the third. He had two balls and a strike against Johnny Dugan, centerfielder, when he collapsed.

Georgie Pace KO's Baltimore Bantam

Baltimore, June 27 (AP).—Georgie Pace, Cleveland Negro who holds the world bantamweight boxing championship, scored a technical knockout over the Veteran Lawrence Gunn, of Baltimore, after one round of vicious fighting in a non-title overweight bout tonight. Both weighed 123.

Pace went after Gunn in a hurry, pumping lefts to the face and body of the 30-year-old Baltimore baker, and near the end of the first round caught Gunn flush in the mouth with a whistling left that sent him down for a nine-count with blood gushing from his upper lip.

Gunn managed to last out the round, but Referee Charlie Short refused to let him come out for the second round.

Mrs. Zaharias, D. C. Star Win At Milwaukee

By the Associated Press

Milwaukee, June 27.—Combining powerful drives with deadly accuracy around the greens, Babe Didrikson Zaharias carded a searing 72, 3 under par, to advance to the quarter-finals in the Women's Western Open golf championship today.

Against the Babe's superperformance which cracked the all-time Wisconsin feminine record, her opponent, Mrs. Jac Ochiltree, of Indianapolis, offered futile resistance and succumbed on the twelfth hole, 8 and 6.

Mrs. Zaharias swung over the Blue Mound Club links in 34, 38—72, counting six birdies in the first 12 holes, and missing an ace by barely a foot on the short eighth.

Vass Leads Way to Semifinals of D. C. Junior Golf Tourney

Bill Cassedy, BobDonohue, Mrstik Win

Vass and Cassedy Meet This Morning; Mrstik Rallies To Beat Myers, 1 Up

George Vass, medalist and favorite in the District Junior Golf championship at Woodmont, led four youngsters into the semifinal round yesterday, all representing different clubs and different high schools.

Vass, runner-up in this tournament last year and also second best in the recent schoolboy tournament, will meet Bill Cassedy, a Blair High youngster from the Argyle Club in one semifinal match this morning.

In the other, Capital's Buster Mrstik, one of the most promising junior golfers in town, will meet Bob Donohue, of Indian Spring. Mrstik is a junior at Bethesda while Donohue attends school in Connecticut.

Mrstik received the closest call of the four players that remain. He was two and three to go at the hands of 15-year-old Arthur Myersin in the morning, but he evened the match on the eighteenth and won with a 25-foot par putt on the twentieth hole. In the afternoon, he was even 80 in beating Charles Price, 3 and 2, winning five holes in a row after trailing by one.

Vass came through on the last two holes as he did in the medal round to beat Bill Brownrigg in the morning, 1 up, and then he defeated Steve Olds, 4 and 2, in the second round.

Cassedy, making his first semifinal bid for a junior championship, was 79 in the morning as he defeated Logan Manders, of Manor, 4 and 3, and 81 in the afternoon as he defeated Joe Barse, Columbia, 3 and 2. Barse upset Dick Burgess in the first round, 2 and 1.

Donohoe played the best golf of the day. He had par for 73 in winning 5 and 3 over Georgia Rita and needed par for 74 as he won 3 and 2 over Graham Ellis.

Eddie Oliver To Play July 4 In Benefit Here

Disqualified in Open For Beating Time; Matches for Red Cross

Big Eddie Oliver, the boy who kicked away the National Open championship by disregarding his starting time, will play in the pro-amateur tournament July 4 at Indian Spring. Oliver wired Bradley Hills pro Al Jamison yesterday that he would be here for the charity tournament.

Oliver, disqualified by United States Golf Association officials for beating his starting time at Cleveland, has since gained Nation-wide publicity and is currently playing a series of exhibitions with Champion Lawson Little.

Long Hitter

Meanwhile Paul Runyan, the 1938 P. G. A. champion, notified tournament officials he would bring his home club champion, Harold Bergman, of the Metropolis Club in White Plains, as a partner.

Picard-Peacock a Threat

Charley Malone, the long-driving amateur from Congressional, may be paired with Jimmy Thomson. One of the leading teams to beat will be the duo of Henry Picard, P. G. A. champ from Hershey, Pa., and Roger S. Peacock, host club amateur.

Red Cross officials are cooperating with club chairmen on the event and the biggest crowd ever to attend a golf match here is virtually assured. Most of the big name pros competing will be here for the reception Wednesday night.

East-West Net Battle Comes Up Today

51-Year-Old Classic Brings Out Sprinkling Of Top-Ranked Stars

By the Associated Press

Sewickley, Pa., June 27.—East challenges West, and California in particular tomorrow, reviving a historic net rivalry expected to go a long way toward deciding on which end of the Nation lies lawn tennis supremacy.

Renewal of the 51-year-old intersectional classic as a temporary successor to war-canceled Davis Cup international matches brings together a sprinkling of America's top-ranking shotmakers.

Frankie Parker, the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association's second-ranked player from Seabright, N. J., heads the Eastern contingent with support of Gardnar Mulloy, No. 8, Miami Beach, Fla.; Henry Prusoff, No. 10, Coral Gables, Fla., and Archibald Henderson, North Carolina, rated among "Class A" players just below ranking stars.

The Western squad of four Californians includes fourth-ranked Welby Van Horn, John Albert Kramer, No. 17; Eddie Alloo, No. 19, and last but not least is Francis L. Kovacs, who may emerge the tourney's surprise package. An injury kept Kovacs out of the rankings last year but he's coming along fast.

Following Davis Cup style for the first time, the tourney gets under way with two singles matches pitting Van Horn against Parker and Mulloy against Kovacs, this will be reversed in Sunday's singles, with Kovacs engaging Parker and Van Horn taking on Mulloy. Mulloy and Prusoff challenged Kramer and Van Horn in doubles Saturday.

Both Capt. Walter Pate, of the Easterners, and Skipper Sam Hardy, of the Californians, only living successful Davis Cup captains, think victory will be theirs after a tough struggle.

Heurich Brewers Win Post-Industrial League First Half Title

Beat Motors, 6-2, to Avoid Play-Off

Coliflower Survives First-Inning Threat Of Defeat; Beermen In Benefit Saturday

Heurich's "old men of baseball" won themselves the championship of the first half of The Washington Pos-Industrial League yesterday—won it handily, 6 to 2, over Russell Motors after a first-inning threat of defeat that would have meant a play-off for the title.

The Motors nine started off in grand style with a five-hit attack on the Brewers' Pitcher Ed Colliflower that brought in two runs that left them in command of the situation when Heurich could get but one in its half of the first.

"Break" Settles It

With Colliflower settling down, the Brewers went to work, but not until a "break" in the fifth inning—a brief attack of jitters by Motors' Pitcher Johnny Clements—could the beermen swing the tide their way.

Cable, first man up, walked, advanced to second on a wild pitch, and then scored, to tie the count as Feeb Colliere singled. A moment later Colliflower walked, but was out on a fielder's choice by Knight. Another single, this one by Willie Kaufman, brought Colliere home with the winning run, however, and the Brewers clinched victory and the title by adding another run in the seventh and two in the eighth.

Colliflower Impressive

Thus the Brewers escaped with a clean slate fit and ready for Saturday's battle with The Post's all-high baseball team in Griffith Stadium for the benefit of the Red Cross. A loss would have meant a playoff with the second place Cameo Furniture club for first place. O'Donnell's Grill was left in third place.

The victory was particularly pleasing to Manager Bill Fiester, for in shutting out the Motors nine for eight innings, Colliflower allowed but one hit. The Beermen jumped on Clements for seven hits.

Boyd, Hassett Arrive Here For Battle

Heavyweights Set Up Camps for Monday Bout at Stadium

Wild Bill Boyd and Irish Danny Hassett, who will fight ten rounds or less Monday night in Griffith Stadium, will pull into town today to set up public training camps in Turner's Arena, Matchmaker Gabe Menendez announced yesterday.

Hassett is expected to arrive from Philadelphia with his manager, Pete Moran and Trainer Willie Clark in time to work out at 2 p. m. Boyd, along with his trainer, Heinie Blaustein, is to arrive an hour later from Baltimore.

Boyd scaled down to 195 pounds yesterday and looked in top shape in Baltimore, where he worked nine rounds with Red Burman, one of the current top-ranked heavyweights, Johnny Kapovich and Al Levy, Blaustein said.

Wild Bill, who was plucked from the ranks of the United States Navy when Jack Dempsey saw him fight in Seattle, returns to Washington for the first time since his knockout victory over Buck Everett almost three years ago. He has more recently knocked out Jim Robinson, Harry Bobo and Al Ford, who twice went the 10-round distance with Tony Galento.

Hassett's record shows victories over Jim Robinson, George Brescia, Sunny Jim McVey and Buddy Scott, the latter just last winter at Turner's Arena. Hassett also once fought a draw with Lou Nova. The Philadelphian lost decisions to Buddy Knox and Gus Dorazio, while Boyd fought a draw with Dorazio.

The preliminary card semifinal 8-rounder brings out the long-talked of, between managers and trainers, Carl Guggino-Billy Bullock battle. Guggino has been accused by Trainer Bob Hayden of being afraid to fight Bullock. In sixes, Billy Banks fights Jackie Carter and Tiger Jack Flowers meets Art Lind. A four-rounder brings out Gilbert Maye against Vince Trumenello.

U. S. Track Greats To Compete Tonight

Brilliant Field of 300 Enter 52d National Championships in Fresno; Cunningham's Race Is Highlight

By the Associated Press

Fresno, Calif., June 27.—America's greatest track and field athletes, denied a chance to gain international glory because of war-wrecked Olympic games, stage a two-day domestic version of the games tomorrow and Saturday nights in the fifty-second running of the National A. A. U. championships.

A staggering array of stars, nearly 300 from every section of the country, will compete in Fresno State College Stadium. The track is ranked one of the fastest.

College, club and unattached athletes will perform. Even the United States Marines will be represented. Junior championships will be decided Friday night and senior events Saturday night.

Cunningham Runs

Headlining the competition, at least from a sentimental viewpoint, will be the 1,500-meter run. The event will see Glenn Cunningham, Grandpa of the topnotch flat racers, making a bid for his sixth national crown. He recently ran the second fastest 1,500 meters ever clocked in this country, 3:49. Against him will be such notables as Blaine Rideout, defending champion; John Munski, national collegiate A. A., and Princeton mile winner; Gene Venzke, oldest rival of Cunningham; Walter Mehl, of Wisconsin; Louis Zamperini, of Southern California, and Paul Moore, of Stanford.

Hurdle events will provide renewal of the record-breaking duels of Fred Wolcott, of Rice Institute, and Ed Rugger, the Tufts Negro. Each has been clocked in 13.9 seconds.

Norwood (Barney) Ewell, Negro sophomore from Penn State, who has taken over the country's sprint leadership, will match speed with Harold Davis, Salinas Junior College student competing for the San Francisco Olympic Club; Mozell Ilerbee, f Tuskegee! Eulace Peacock, of the Shore Athletic Club, of New Jersey, and Eddie Morris, California prep sensation from Huntington Beach.

Two college sophomores, Ed Burrowes, of Princeton, and Campbell Kane, of Indiana, will fight it out once more in the 800 meters. Each holds a win over the other.

Tireless little Gene Rice, of Notre Dame, defends his senior A. A. U. crown against the challenge of Don Lash, the Indiana State policeman, in the 5,000 meters run.

The 400-meter dash will bring together Lee Orr, of Washington State College, the new N. C. A. A. champion, Grover Klemmer, University of California freshman; Warren Breidenbach, of Michigan, and Charles Belcher, formerly of Georgia Tech, among others.

Blozis to Toss

In the field, Georgetown's muscle man, Al Blozis, will renew his assault on shot and discus records. This season he has been in a class by himself, especially in the shot with a mark of 56 feet ½ inch.

Cornelius Warmerdam, world pole vault champion, will try to exceed his record bettering height of 15 feet, while Les Steers will attempt to set a new ceiling in the high jump. He recently cleared 6 feet 10⅛ inches, but absence of Enough A. A. U. officials cost him a chance at a recognized record.

Knox Scores K. O.

Abe Greene Bans Baer's 6-Pointed Star From Trunks

By the Associated Press

Paterson, N. Y., June 27.—Abe J. Greene, head of the New Jersey boxing commission, has forbidden Max Baer to wear on his ring trunks the six-pointed star symbolizing the Star of David when Baer fights Tony Galento in Roosevelt Stadium, Jersey City, next Tuesday night.

Baer has worn a star on his trunks in all of his fights since he won the heavyweight title from Primo Carnera in 1934.

Greene said:

"At no time should a boxer wear anything emblematic of his religious beliefs, but especially now, when the world is torn between conflicting emotions there is no room for any other symbol but of Americanism.

"A man does not fight as the representative of any religious creed or belief. He performs as a boxer and is entitled to support from the fans only in the measure he can attract it as a fighter and as a sportsman."

Two Title Games Set in City League

President Gauzza Declares Star Hurler Ineligible for Season

Vic Gauzza's Sunday National City League goes through one of its most hectic sessions since its organization this week with two clashes having direct bearing on first-half honors.

In A Division, Klein Tavern, defending titlist, and J. C. Flood meet in a one-game playoff for the crown, and in B Division, Plaza Tile and St. Francis Xavier nine decide the championship in a regularly scheduled game.

With the announcement of schedules, Gauzza also said that Bill Liggett, hurler for Interior nine in his Departmental League, had been declared ineligible for league play the remainder of the season. The star righthander, according to Gauzza, had been pitching in two week-day leagues in violation of a standing rule.

Complete schedule:

Section B, 11 a. m.—Plaza Tile vs. St. Francis Xavier, S. Ellipse; Atchison-Keller vs. Washington Home Improvement, W. Ellipse; Arcade Market vs. Capital Cafe, E. Ellipse; Terminal Ice and Variety A. C. drew byes.

On Fishing

For the week-end the best bet seems to be the Eastern Shore. This, however, makes little difference as the great majority of boats fish across when the fishing slows up on this side. From North Beach to Kenwood they fish Sharps, Diamond Shoals and the Gooses, while above, the mouth of Eastern Bay and the well-known Hilltop is the rendezvous. Solomons has been having exceptional going in the deep water of the steamboat channel at the mouth of the Patuxent, but in spite of this, so Capt. Harry Woodburn informs us, many of the best catches are being made under Hoopers Light.

ACKERMAN

The Middles, famous fishing grounds of the fleet at St. Jerome's Creek, is continuing to provide just about as good catches as are being made anywhere, with quite a few trout to vary the monotony of hardheads; and there is always the chance of a big cobia or channel bass.

Down the bay, the time seems to matter little, if at all, but up the bay early morning and late evening has been the best.

One of Capt. Crawford Savage's boats brought in to Ocean City a 165½-pound tuna last Sunday, and it created considerable conjecture in these parts as to whether the white marlin run was about to start.

Your guess about that is as good as ours. Last year the first marlin was taken on the sixteenth. The year previous was even a week later than that, so while we are all pulling for that first one, there isn't anything much to worry about as yet, because after all, it is early.

And in saying that, we don't mean it is to soon to give it a try, for the first one must be caught if we are to know they are there.

These Ocean City white marlin have a habit of slipping inshore singly and in pairs, and without much notice, eager and receptive to trolled baits. For those with early reservations, don't cancel, but go with the idea you are going to have the honor this year of the first fish.

According to the chatter over the radio phones there were all sorts of big fish sighted last Sunday off the Jersey shore, but actual catches returned to port were few and far between. Beach Haven boats brought in on Saturday 19 tuna, and seven on Sunday. The largest weighed 36 pounds.

Capt. Lev Raymond on Saturday morning left Absecon Inlet with the ides of running off until he found fish. He ran all-right—90 miles, sighting few Mother Cary's Chicks, and fewer gulls, and found the water cold and too green for so far off. One strike by an 80-pound make, which was landed by Bill Price, of Philadelphia, was the only thing that looked like a fin until they came back under the shore at Five Fathom at 7:30 in the evening.

We hope the four local anglers, Harry Kinnear, Joe Escude, Bob Thurmond and Capt. F. H. Lemly, who left with Raymond Sunday evening for a three-day trip have better going.

So many anglers have been experiencing the old trouble of tangled lines while night fishing that we think our trick of making a piano wire rig might be helpful. A two-foot length of wire is run through the eye of a swivel so that the standing part, that which runs with the line, is about 14 inches long, to which the lead is attached. The remaining part is left extending at right angles, to which a short-snelled hook is attached.

Fool-proof, it is, if one is satisfied to use but one hook. For those who want two or more try the Metalure Not-angle rig, designed particularly for night-fishing.

Palumbo, Roundly Booed, Then Rides Three Straight Winners

Razz Follows 'Poor Ride' On Nay Nay

Jockey Then Boots In Cats Cradle, Beaming Lady and Rosarian At Charles Town Oval

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 27.—Jockey Sammy Palumbo, called "The Gem o' the Ocean" by some and a "bum" by others, heard some of the loudest booing of his career today. He rode Capt. Ewart Johnston's Nay Nay, and the 9-year-old mare finished far back in the pack. That was in the fourth race.

Palumbo appeared to take the "raspberry crop" in good fashion, but from that point on he made his critics suffer if they did not back his mounts. He came back in the next race—the fifth—to give a fine performance on the same Capt. Johnston's Cats Cradle and brought the faithful among his backers an $8.20 mutuel.

The Cats Cradle supporters tried to give Sammy a hand when he came to weigh in, but that was drowned out by another booing. In the sixth race, the day's feature, Palumbo climbed aboard Beaming Lady, a 4-year-old filly owned by H. M. Luttrell & Sons. There was 8 to 1 staring him in the eyes as he went to the post on the filly.

Beaming Lady and Palumbo proved the right combinaton. The daughter of Happy Time shook off all challenges and, under some brilliant riding, held sway through the stretch. Vanelder put on a closing drive that might have won in a few more jumps, but Palumbo held his mount together. Beaming Lady paid $19 and once again the "Palumbo-baiters" gave him the "Bronx cheer."

As if he hadn't convinced them, Palumbo added his third straight winner of the program by scoring with Rosarian, an $8.50 shot, in the seventh race. I believe some of the boorers joined in backing this one. Palumbo rode a powerful race and it was just that which defeated Stonehaven which closed gamely. Palumbo did not have a mount in the eighth race.

The day's daily double returned another substantial sum. Those who backed the combination of No. 6 (Stubbs) and No. 4 (Peetomar), collected $93.20 for each $2 investment. Stubbs, nicely handled by Jockey A. F. Martinez, took the second race in a drive from Rockymount and Blue Prelude. Apprentice Martin Bletzacker had the mount on Peetomar and brought the 4-year-old through on the rail to win going away.

BOB JUNIOR, slow to begin, came with good energy in closing test. MISS MAKER had speed to go to leaders, challenged BEAMING LADY and weakened suddenly.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al—The Shenandoah Stable's Abbott's Lark, which finished second Tuesday, but not from the usual causes. The horse bumped into the wire on the starting gate and suffered a badly cut nose. I hate to criticize the starting gate here because it has been working in excellent style. However, I believe I can suggest an improvement. There has been an epidemic of horses stumbling after the break and horses throwing themselves backwards. Bet Wick did this yesterday and injured Jockey Joe O'Malley. I believe the wire netting on the stalls should be built higher. As it is now the horses seem to stretch their heads high in an effort to look over. It is my opinion that this has been causing some trouble. For instance, Nay Nay was trying to look over the screen when the start of yesterday's fourth race came and she stumbled for a few strides which were enough to cause her to be far back going to the first turn. Palumbo took a loud booing as the result. I still say that whether you bet on or against him, boo or applaud him, he's still tops of the riders hereabouts. And he never put me on a winner in his life, either. Harry Costello, one of Georgetown University's all-time football stars, was a visitor along with Jack Hagerty, present coach of the Hilltop eleven. Harold Bester came over from Hagerstown and distributed books for that meeting, opening July 9. Al J. Boyle has purchased Five Oakes, a daughter of imported Stefan the Great and Rose Hill from Dr. Mason Weadon, Washington veterinarian. She will be used for breeding purposes. Mrs. G. C. Everhardt brought Gold Sweeper up from the Virginia farm. Mrs. Frank Brooke, wife of the West Virginia racing commissioner, owns Parisian Mount, the 2-year-old filly which started in yesterday's first race. Mrs. Brooke traded her yearling, adjudged the best in this State, for the filly. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—Man At Arms probably will break from the outside if he gets off the reserve list. This distance is right and I'm going to string along. Lady Buck continues to run promising races and is dangerous. High Blaze has much weight but should be close.

Second race—Back Bay has flashed some speed and could be the right one in this rather open maiden-juvenile affair. Una H is reported to have speed and could be close. Danzig has had a rest and could be improved.

Third race—Runout has shown enough to warrant a top selection in company of this sort. With good handling at the curves I expect this one to get home. Geodesian gets about the right opposition and will be a dangerous contender. Patchpocket, of the Bennings Stable, has shown nothing, but I'm hoping.

Fourth race—Hurdy Gurdy appears nicely placed in this field and I'm going to take my chances. She has the speed to be prominent in the run to the first turn. Margie Wrack appears to be the one to beat. Chilleevalee is a possibility.

Fifth race—Counora has the rail position in this field and the speed to make the most of it. If she can beat them to the first turn it should be all over except the pay-off. Gold d'Or was messed about last out and will go good if in action. Gold Sweep to show.

Sixth race—Groucher's Boy found the route too long last out. This 7-furlong test is about right and I'm going to string along. Princess Lady has gone well here and is dangerous. Decotah surprised cheaper company.

Seventh race—This is a close fit between Best Policy and Clymene. They are like weights. Despite rooting for Clymene I have to take her rival on account of post positions. Worthowning for the show end.

Eighth race—Stand By turned in a good effort in that recent outing. The veteran is returning to good condition and may down this kind. Five o' Four is a threat. Extra Good has shown ability over the track and may surprise.

Substitute race—If this event is used, I'll take Happy Hosteses, Sail By and Regal Sun.

2—Miss Pixit, Chatabit, Cenesello.
3—Candibre Embers, Edwin Booth, Scurry Alesia.
6—Suburbanite, Nilson, Head Hunter.
7—County Cork, Nicky, Kimosha.
8—Sassma, Alsanda, Frosty Night.

Best bet—Shafileen.

Abrupt Drop Shown In Wheat Exports

Chicago, June 27 (AP).—Department of Commerce figures on grain exports from the United States for the 1939-40 season, which began last July 1, indicated United States wheat and flour exports have totaled nearly 41,000,000 bushels to date, compared with nearly 92,000,000 in the corresponding period last season.

Nearly half of the exports have been in the form of flour, and flour exports have been only slightly smaller than last year, reflecting the subsidy program.

Bank Reserves Set New Peak Of 6.8 Billions

$30,000,000 Increase In Week Attributed To Gold Purchases

By the Associated Press

Lendable excess reserves of banks increased $30,000,000 to a new record high of $6,800,000,000 in the week ended June 26.

The Federal Reserve Board said the increase was due primarily to Treasury gold purchases.

The board's statement said:

"During the week ended June 26 member bank reserve balances increased $11,000,000. Additions to member bank reserves arose from an increase of $102,000,000 in gold stock and a decrease of $18,000,000 in Treasury cash, offset in part by a decrease of $28,000,000 in Reserve bank credit and increases of $39,000,000 in money in circulation; $3,000,000 in Treasury deposits with Federal Reserve banks and $41,000,000 in nonmember deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts. Excess reserves of member banks on June 26 were estimated to be approximately $6,800,000,000, an increase of $30,000,000 for the week."

Changes in member bank reserve balances and related items during the week and the year ended June 26, 1940, were reported as follows:

Election Years Bad for Trade? 61% Weren't

Analysis Goes Back To 1792 to Disprove Hoary Theory

National business conditions are affected but little, and usually not at all, during a Presidential election year by the mere fact of the election, according to a study of economic trends in election years by Investors Syndicate, of Minneapolis.

The European war may effect American business more than the national elections for the rest of this year, the survey observes.

"The popular concept that a Presidential year must necessarily affect business adversely in some degree gets no support whatever from an analysis of business cycles in the United States since 1792," said E. E. Crabb, president of Investors Syndicate, in commenting on his company's study.

Thirty-seven Presidential years, from 1792 to 1936, are included in the study. The records show that the United States has enjoyed prosperity in approximately 61 per cent of the Presidential years. And business started an upturn in 11 election years, while declines began in only 8 such years.

"Twenty-two of the 37 national election years since 1792 were prosperous, while 14 were depressed," Mr. Crabbe pointed out. "The election year of 1864, during the War Between the States, should not be considered in comparison with other national election years."

The terms "prosperity" and "depression" as used in this study are relative, Mr. Crabbe points out. For example, 1936 compared with 1932 was "relatively prosperous," but if 1936 were compared with 1928, then 1936 would have been termed a severe depression year. Segregation of the years of relative prosperity or depression was arrived at through consideration of the four phases of a business cycle—prosperity, recession, depression and revival.

The study shows that prosperity, real or relative, marked the Presidential election years of: 1800, 1804, 1812, 1824, 1832, 1836, 1844, 1848, 1852, 1856, 1868, 1872, 1880, 1888, 1892, 1900, 1904, 1912, 1916, 1924, 1928 and 1936.

Depressions, or slackenings of the business pace, characterized by the Presidential balloting years of: 1792, 1796, 1808, 1816, 1820, 1828, 1840, 1860, 1876, 1884, 1896, 1908, 1920 and 1932.

Week's Loadings Are Reported 14% Above Last Year

The Association of American Railroads reported yesterday 728,098 cars of revenue freight were loaded during week ending last Saturday.

This was an increase of 13,651 cars, or 2.2 per cent, compared with the preceding week; an increase of 89,562, or 14.0 per cent, compared with a year ago, and an increase of 169,308, or 30.3 per cent, compared with 1938.

Arise of more than seasonal proportions pushed loadings into new high ground for the third consecutive week. With the exception of forest products, which declined slightly, all classifications chalked up gains.

The Associated Press seasonally adjusted index of loadings, based on 1929-30 as 100, advanced to 74.8 compared with 73.4 the previous week, and 66.1 a year ago.

Cuba May Pay Off Defaulted Bonds

Havana, June 26 (AP).—Authorization of $9,000,000 in 4½ per cent bonds for liquidation of defaulted Cuban public works gold obligations was proposed in a bill introduced in the House of Representatives by Congressman Anselmo Alliegro last night.

Simultaneously, President Laredo Bru, in a message to Congress, asked means with which to liquidate present obligations to Warren Brothers Co. and other liens defaulted following the downfall of President Gerardo Machado on August 12, 1933. (It was assumed in Wall Street this request referred to $9,883,000 in public works bonds issued by the Cuban government but not released by its treasury. Warren Bros. built the Cuban highway.)

Construction Awards Off Sharply in Week

New York, June 27 (AP).—Engineering construction awards fell off sharply this week to $34,889,000, a decline of 64 per cent from the previous week, in which contracts reached their highest level of the year to date, and 17 per cent below the corresponding week a year ago, Engineering News-Record reported today.

Private contracts were 70 per cent less than last week but were 34 per cent greater than a year ago. Public awards were 60 per cent smaller than the previous week and 30 per cent under the same week last year.

Economist's View

Tired of Amateur Interference, Business Heads Enter Politics

By Merryle S. Rukeyser
A Special Correspondent.

THE BUSINESS MAN is again coming to his own in popular prestige.

The scapegoat psychology of 1932 is disappearing, war and disillusionment with routine politicians are enhancing the prestige in the popular mind of men of achievement and competence. The extraordinary popular interest in the personality of Wendell L. Willkie was a symbolic expression of this change.

Another index of changing sentiment was the election of a big business executive as delegate to the Republican National Convention from the Congressional District which includes Peoria, Ill. When friends urged B. C. Heacock, president of the Caterpillar Tractor Co., to run for election as a delegate the political wiseacres predicted he would be snowed under. Yet without turning a finger in his own behalf, Mr. Heacock won overwhelmingly.

ONE SWALLOW does not make a summer, but it is interesting that Mr. Heacock won with the rank and file of voters of his party in a campaign based solely on his record during a decade of depression of doubling the average number of persons on his company's pay roll, in trebling the dollar pay roll during the period, and of taking on 600 high school graduates as apprentices through these years and training them for lucrative employment.

Mr. Heacock was able to expand his company operations during a subnormal period when politicians were engaged in a "crusade against excellence."

Chatting with me, Mr. Heacock made it clear that he does not look upon an armament boom as a way to solve American internal economic problems. Instead he said: "I would like to see us skin down total governmental expenditures and remove bobbles from industry so that we could produce more of the things that you and I want." The business executive was apprehensive lest loosing thinking about defense needs would lead to monetary inflation and also to a loss of personal liberty.

"Moreover," the businessman, who took a week off to serve in his new role as politician, said: "Many young people during the armament expansion will be trained for vocations which won't endure. Then there will be great dislocations of men and materials when abnormal armament building is over."

MR. HEACOCK thinks that the main issue before the people relates to foreign policy. He thinks that the isolationist postion is too mild and, instead, advocates an "insulationist" position.

The executive likewise applies business principles to military service. "Instead of universal compulsory service," he said, "I believe the service could be made attractive in competition with other activities. At present voluntary enlistment is held back, because men are deflected to other Federal services, such as NYA, CCC and WPA."

Unlike well-managed business, the atmosphere around this political convention seems amateurish. Even though on decisions nastily improvised the management of the assets of the Nation may hang, there is little of the spirit of applied science which has become a tool of well-managed business enterprises.

IF BUSINESSMEN have anything to contribute to national affairs, it should be the methodology of the fact-finding technique, in place of mere hunches. This involves an extension of the technique of double-entry bookkeeping to record the business activities of all the people in the same way those of a single business are now recorded.

At the same time, businessmen, through participating in the councils of politics, can get a better grasp of the psychology of the public. Businessmen are increasingly recognizing that the customer is the new boss, who has the power to mete out opportunities for human employment as well as for business profit.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler
A Special Correspondent.

Traders, Eyes Glued on G. O. P. Convention, Mark Time; Rail and Aviation Shares Rise

New York, June 27.—The stock market edged forward slightly in dull trading today but the interest of the Street was not centered on quotations nor on the war, nor on domestic business indices of business. It was centered on the Republican National Convention, to the exclusion of everything else, with the hope that before the day was ended a candidate for the Presidency would be nominated who could win.

It was a day of politics in Wall Street as it was in every other section of the country. Trite though it may be, it was realized that democracy stood at a crossroads.

When the market closed there has been no balloting on the various candidates whose names had been proposed. The market rallied for a time as it appeared that Wendell Willkie was gaining, respite the efforts of old line political groups to stop the popular clamor for his selection.

Minor Gain Shown

When the market closed, however, nothing was known of the outcome. The list showed a minor gain of 0.34 point. Trading amounted to only 414,020 shares. The ticker sputtered along and was dead a good part of the time. Habitues of brokerage houses dropped in, not to ask about this or that stock, but to ask about the convention.

In the face of this crisis it seems next to meaningless to record what went up and what went down. Utilities were no more than firm. Rails were favorites on the upside and there as good support for steels and the equipments. Aviation shares came back strongly after their recent irregular performance.

Sterling, which slumped last month on the invasion of the low countries to a historic low of $3.00, was buoyant today. It rose at its best to $4.01, the highest price at which it had sold since last October 26, andit closed at $3.97½, representing a net gain for the day of 23½ cents. Swedish kronor, Portuguese esvudos and Hong kong dollars also established new high levels for the year and Swiss francs moved up 4 points.

Foreign Bonds Stronger

Peace rumors were credited in part for some of the gains which took place in the list of foreign dollar bonds. Advances of from 1 to 3 points were fairly well scattered throughout the list. Obviously there was no official confirmation of hte rumors, but markets in days such as these are a fertile field for all such unconfirmed reports.

In the stock market Packard was the most active issue being aided by the Washington announcement that this company would manufacture the Rolls Royce engine in this country instead of the Ford Motor Co. General Motors was a favorite, raising more than a point. Chrayler was up a point. Among less active stocks, J. C. Penny jumped 3 points, Commonwealth & Southern preferred 5½ and Norfolk & Western 5.

Business news centered about the weekly carloading report, which showed a gain of 2.2 per cent over the preceding week last year. Improvement in railroad traffic has been in evidence since the beginning of the recent spending and war boom, and has contributed to the better tone of the rail shares.

Among the commodities, wheat was under pressure, while the trade awaited classification on negotiations to reopen the continental European markets to foodstuffs imports.

Treasury List Firm

A little buying appeared in every department of the bond market, but holders were not inclined to let go. Gains were sizable in various foreign dollar obligations, while domestic issues likewise improved.

United States Treasury securities moved fractionally higher, the gains ranging from one thirty-second to three-eighths of a point. The resumption of investment buying was apparent also in best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds ,which were mostly higher.

Speculative railroad issues came into renewed favor in the domestic section. Advances of a point or two were numerous, while some issues moved up 3 and 4 points. The thinness of the market had much to do with the extent of this gain, for the actual demand was small. Most share privilege bonds moved up with their related equities, and the tone otherwise was fair.

'Outside' Copper Price Drops ½ Cent a Pound

New York, June 27 (AP).—The "outside market" price for copper was generally quoted at 11 cents a pound today, or ½ cent under the level of primary producers.

Lack of consumer interest has tended to depress the unofficial price quoted by custom smelters for the last week or more, and the present ½-cent spread from the producers' quotation is the widest so far. France's collapse also affected the market adversely.

Hearing Set July 10 For Seaboard Airline

Norfolk, Va., June 27 (AP).—Hearings on proposals for the reorganization of the Seaboard Airline Railway will be resumed in New York on July 10 when an attempt will be made to work out a satisfactory capitalization plan for the new company.

No decision was reached on the capitalization problem at a hearing before Special Master Tazewell Taylor in the U. S. District Court here yesterday. The railway has been in receivership since 1930 and District Judge Luther B. Way recently named Taylor to work toward a speedy reorganization.

Tin, Rubber Move Higher; Grains Lower

Confused War Scene Reflected in Mixed Commodities Moves

By the Associated Press

Inability of commodity traders to find incentives for action in the confused picture of war and vague peace rumors was reflected in halting and irregular price movements in the futures market yesterday.

Chicago wheat dipped 1 to 1⅜ cents a bushel on pessimistic appraisals of the export outlook. Corn closed ¼ cent lower to ⅛ cent up.

New York Cotton futures remained in a narrow lane, but the tone was firmer with final prices 4 to 7 points higher.

Price movements in straits, tin and Rubber were of interest because of the Government's latest move to acquire large quantities of both materials for national defense. The former was raised .86½ to 1 cent a pound, Rubber finished .5 to .35 of a cent ahead. Slightly higher were Santos coffee, cottonseed oil, and wool tips. Cocoa and copper futures sagged. The rest were mixed.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot staples rose to 71.28 per cent of the 1926 average from 71.61 per cent Wednesday.

Wheat List Tumbles

Chicago, June 27 (AP).—After holding about ½ cent above previous closing level most of the session, wheat prices today tumbled almost 2 cents and closed 1 to 1¾ lower than yesterday.

Some late selling was attributed to hedging of new grain while favorable weather for harvest in the Southwest and spring crop growth in parts of the Northwest contributed to the bearishness.

Many traders also were inclined to even up accounts in view of the uncertain international situation, particularly because of rumors of possible truce negotiations in Europe. Trade was not on a large scale because most speculative activity apparently was curtailed by this uncertainty and the market appeared to suffer more from lack of interest than anything else.

July wheat closed at 77 cents and September at 77⅛-77⅜.

Chicago, June 27 (AP).—Ranges follows:

Wheat—	Open.	High.	Low.	Close.
July	78¼	78¾	77	77
September	78⅛	79¼	77⅜	77⅜

Celanese Stockholders Approve Debt Boost

New York, June 27 (AP).—Prior preferred stockholders of Celanese Corporation of America today approved management plans for increasing the company's indebtedness from $20,000,000 to $50,000,000 in order to provide new funds for plant expansion, refunding and other corporate needs.

Common stockholders approved these recommendations at a meeting on June 20, but because of the late arrival of proxies from European holders there was not a sufficient number of prior preferred proxies at the meeting to approve the proposals by that class of stockholders.

West's Plane Industry Maps Vast Expansion

Los Angeles Calif., June 27 (AP). The Pacific Coast airplane industry is planning for a 70 per cent expansion at an expenditure of approximately $20,000,000.

The plans were reported in a survey by three major Los Angeles County aircraft manufacturers—Lockheed, Vultex and Douglas—which have plant expansion programs in mind intended to double their own facilities at a cost in excess of $7,000,000.

The expansion program also will include such aircraft companies as Boeing at Seattle, Consolidated at San Diego, North American Aviation, Inc., of Inglewood, and Northrop, of Hawthorne.

Employment in aircraft factories is at a record high, with an estimated 40,000 men at work.

War 'Isolating' U. S. Farmers From World Trade, Says Clayton

Special Dispatch to The Post

Waco, Tex., June 27.—Because of the war the United States rapidly is approaching an economic state in which only the domestic market may be left the American farmer, W. L. Clayton, Houston, tonight told delegates to the cotton research congress.

Clayton is a member of the firm of Anderson, Clayton and Co., one of the largest cotton firms in the world.

"Today, the war has effectively eliminated as importers of cotton practically the entire continent of Europe, consuming about 5,000,000 bales annually of all growths of cotton," Clayton declared.

"Thus, for cotton as well as for other agricultural commodities, we are rapidly approaching a realization of that catch slogan of the isolationists—'The American market for the American farmer,'" Clayton said. "What the isolationists have not understood or at any rate have not made clear is that this really means—'Only the American market for the American farmer.'"

It will be fatal for the American people to underestimate the sacrifices involved in preparing America on the colossal scale that a victory by the totalitarian states would require, Clayton warned.

He estimated the cost for national defense preparation at $60,000,000,000, to be spent at the rate of $15,000,000,000 a year for four years. It will be impossible, he said, to spend any such sums for armaments without drastically lowering living standards for "every one now enjoying a standard above the minimum."

"Fifteen billions of dollars exceeds all the wages and all the salaries paid out by all the manufacturing plants in the whole United States in any year of our history," he declared. "It is twice the value of our entire agricultural production, employing about one-third of our population."

Labor, he held, must make its contribution in longer hours and relief distribution must, finally, be discontinued.

"The emphasis for national endeavor must be taken off of reform and placed on production," Clayton asserted.

In disclosing the company's participation thus far in armament business Charles J. Hardy, president, said there was a moderate resumption of railroad buying and a pick-up in miscellaneous business in the last half of the company's fiscal year.

Net loss for the fiscal year ended April 30, as cut to $10,777, from loss of $1,662,692 in the preceding fiscal year. In the first six months there as a loss of around $1,700,000.

The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $18,000,000 when compared with the previous week. Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $486,000,000.

Exchange Market

New York, June 27 (AP).—The British pound jumped 26 cents today in relation to the United States dollar. The buying was ascribed by foreign exchange dealers chiefly to "peace rumors."

Traders in the "free" foreign exchange market, tying Canadian currency to the improvement in the pound, "bought up" the Canadian dollar, raising its price 3.75 United States cents to a quotation of 85.50 cents.

Closing rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents):

Official Canadian control board rates for United States dollars: Buying 10 per cent premium, selling 11 per cent premium, equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of buying 9.91 per cent, selling 9.09 per cent.

They'll Renew 'Feud' With Senate Tonight

Nats Invade Less Austere Boston Today

Leonard Faces Hash In Effort to Atone For Western Defeats

Manager Bucky Harris will make his bid to win tomorrow's series opener with the Washington pitcher best calculated to win a game. He is, of course, Dutch Leonard. Leonard will be seeking his ninth victory of the season.

Williams Out

Manager Joe Cronin, of the Red Sox, like Harris, hard-pressed for pitchers, will send Herb Hash to the mound tomorrow despite the fact that Hash worked two innings on Wednesday at Detroit in a relief role. 'Andsome 'Erbert, who says his fast ball is as fast as Bob Feller's, has been potent help to Boston this season. The rookie from Minneapolis stoped a seven-game losing streak for Cronin the other day by winning a 2-0 shutout from the Indians.

The Nats are playing in some luck in meeting the Red Sox at this time, what with Ted Williams still convalescing from a shaking up received in an outfield collision with Ben Finney a week ago. Replacing Williams in the Boston line-up is Dominic DiMaggio, whose hitting the Nats do not fear, to any great degree.

Despite their recession into last place, the Nats have been playing better ball of late and have four victories to show for their last six games since halting their seven-game losing streak. Barring a bit of bad luck they would have recouled from that losing streak with six straight victories.

Hudson No. 2 Hurler

Sid Hudson's pitching has been a tremendous lift to Harris, who now counts the Florida rookie as the Nats' No. 2 pitcher. But equally gratifying to the Nats' boss is his club's sudden resurgence at bat.

The revised Washington line-up which has placed Charley Gelbert at shortstop has been producing runs at a rate the Nats did not know last month. Gelbert, seizing eagerly on his opportunity to make a place for himself in the infield, is now a fixture at shortstop and for two very plain reasons: (1) he is the best defensive shortstop on the club and (2) he has been hitting the ball with devastating effect.

Buddy Lewis' shift to the outfield which enabled Harris to restore Cecil Travis to third base has been a happy incident for the Nats. Travis has been playing the bag brilliantly despite his lapse in the last game at Chicago, and Lewis has been no drawback to the outfield defense.

One important item in the Nats' recent successes has been the play of George Case, who has suddenly begun to collect base hits for himself. He has finally begun to act the part of a lead-off hitter.

Second base is the only spot on the Washington Club which has no fixed occupant. Buddy Myer has shown new interest in his baseball career and will play the position against right-handed pitching, which has been baffling Jimmy Bloodworth.

Durham Pitcher Sold To Birmingham Club

Durham, N. C., June 27 (AP).—Optional sale of Bernard DeForge, ace of the Durham Bulls' mound staff, to the Birmingham Barons of the Southern Association was announced tonight by Freddie Fleig, president of the Durham Piedmont League Club. Fleig said the deal was a 30-day conditional one.

DeForge this season has won 13 games and lost 5, hurling more than one-third of the 35 games won by the Bulls.

Marble and Arnold Win Doubles Title; Barney Welsh Bows

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, June 27.—Alice Marble, United States tennis queen, and Mary Arnold teamed up to win the National clay courts women's doubles championship, 6—3, 6—4, from Helen Bernard, of New York and Gracyn Wheeler, of Los Angeles in a playoff late today.

The powerful overhead smashes which have led Miss Marble to the semifinals of the Tri-State tournament here provided the necessary punch for victory in the doubles, rained out last week in Chicago.

Miss Bernard trimmed Monica Nolan, of Cincinnati, 6—1, 6—4, and Catherine Wolf, of Elkhart, Ind., advanced with a 6—1, 6—1 decision over Ann Davis, of Columbus, Ohio.

Ronald Lubin, of Los Angeles trimmed Alex Guerry, of Chicago, 6—2, 6—1; Arthur Marx, of Los Angeles upset Johnny Doegg, a former Californian, 5—7, 6—3, 6—3, and Gardner Larned, of Chicago downed Barney Welsh, of Rockville, Md., 8—6, 7—5.

Doegg had been seeded No. 2 position, Harris Everett, of Jacksonville, Fla., bested Charles Hare, of England, 6—3, 4—6, 6—4, in a surprise victory.

Nash to Toss First Ball for Charity Games

ciation also has contributed officials for the All-Star-Senate battle. "Buck" Davidson, popular member of the association, yesterday assured sponsors he and two other capable officials would handle the game. The offer filled umpire berths for both games, the D. C. Baseball Umpires Association having promised Jack Mattingly and Irving Shoemaker for the clash of Heurich and the Schoolboys.

With the stadium furnished gratis by Clark Griffith, president of the Nats, the event promises to throw a huge sum into the Red Cross fund. Incidental expenses, and very few of those, are all that will be subtracted from the "gate."

All-Stars Drill

Meanwhile, as local radio commentators took up the drive to make the affair a success with regular broadcasts, the main preparation yesterday was made by the Sport Center Stars, who went through a lengthy drill at Edgewood Playground. Viv Baratte, selector of the team from the league of which he is president, looked over young Harry Dodson, who will relieve Starting Pitcher "Bump" Simonds if anything goes wrong. He expressed himself as pleased with the workout and predicted Simonds and Dodson would have little trouble stopping Abe Rosenfield, Senate's brilliant southpaw.

Baratte will not announce his starting line-up until today, probably to "keep Senate guessing." At his disposal, however, are 15 of the heaviest-hitting and finest-fielding youngsters of the softball sandlots.

At Atlas Sporting Goods, Lowe and Campbell and The Post Sports Department, where tickets are on sale, seats were going fast yesterday. There will be no reservations, all seats going at a flat rate of 50 cents.

Camp Fund Swelled $50 by Rassle Show

Murphy, Zum, Kirilenko, Krauser Win Benefit Show Performances

The royal business stole the show from the feature fight to a finish between Murphy and Martinelli. The five groan artists worked together to eliminate one another until only Zum and The Irish Angel were left. The Angel was disqualified after 18 minutes.

In order, out went Al Norcus, John Bognar and Juan Olaguivel. Murphy outlasted Martinelli in the feature at the art of dropkicking by kicking two of Gino's teeth out and rendering his adversary unconscious. Turner announced there will be no more rassles in his W street arena until July 4.

Today's Radio Highlights

Just how much longer the Republican National Convention will last no one knows. There will be the usual pick-ups from Philadelphia today, with WJSV promising two-minute reports every hour on the hour from noon through 4:02 p. m. WJSV also offers airings from the floor tonight from 9 to 9:30 and 10:15 to 10:35.

2:30 p. m., WJSV—Arch McDonald airs the Washington-Boston baseball game, lighting into his dugout chatter at 4 p. m.

6:30 P. M., WJSV—Harmonica harmonists, Ed and Tom Piehal accompany Artie Auerbach and Al Pearce for another edition of "The Screwball Sun."

7, WRC—Lucille Manners sings Geibel's "Kentucky Babe," Pinky Tumlin's "Love is All" and Sandoval's "Eres Tu" and joins baritone Ross Graham in "When You and I Were Young, Maggie." Graham sings Totsi's "My Ideal" as his highlight and Dr. Frank Black includes Herbert's "Pan-Americana," Gliere's "The Red Poppy," Johann Strauss's "Emperor Waltz" and Fritz Kreisler's "Liebesleid" on his orchestral program.

7, WJSV—Kate Smith offers her final variety hour of the season, repeating her well-received narrator role in Ben Schoenfield's "Johnny Appleseed," that legendary American who spent his life beautifying the countryside by planting apple trees. Abbott and Costello are on hand and Miss Smith again sings "The Lord Done Fixed Up My Soul," from Irving Berlin's "Louisiana Purchase." And, as a reminder, this is the last time this season to hear the buxom chanter in her smashing version of Berlin's "God Bless America."

7:30, WC—Alfred Wallenstein leads his Sinfonietta: "Abu Hassan" overature, von Weber; "Polonaise Arietta Passacalia," Handel; "Pavane," Ravel; "Kamarinskaya," Glinka.

9:30, WRC—Quiz Kids, a new idea, replaces Alec Templeton for the summer. This one cops the wee ones on their vacation period, plops them in an Information Please setting and exhibits the advantages of the American public school system.

Philadelphia.—To those folks who feel radio overdoes it's commercials, we respectfully suggest they turn their sensative ears in the general direction of a political convention.

Occasionally an announcer reading a commercial will send a listener into simple hysterics through sledgehammer subtleties about the merits of the product. But the worst radio salesman is just a modest, reticent, retiring rabbit compared to the lads and lassies who read the commercials for politicans.

The commercial reader for the politician, of course, is the gentleman who takes 30 minutes (no more than that allowed by the Republicans) to nominate a candidate plus the four gents who second each nomination, at 5 minutes per second.

This, obviously, is no place to seriously discuss the merits of the different claims. But radio has a lot to learn in the doubtful art of effusive salesmanship and the haphazard assassination of the adjective. And the boys to teach radio are in Philly right now.

Incidentally, C. B. S. has an instrument in its convention hall headquarters which measures the amount of vocal enthusiasm the delegates stir up during a nominating speech. If it is any indication of their voting to come, and, of course, it isn't, Wendell Wilkie's the boy. Wendell practically annihilated the machine when his nominator was in action. The crowd roared throughout the speech and kept the machine at peak half the time. After the speech they just belted it to pieces.

Jefferson Shrine to Open Next Spring

Dedication Planned Whether President Is Democrat or Not

President Roosevelt was told yesterday that the Thomas Jefferson Memorial, now 70 per cent complete, will be dedicated next spring whether the President is a Democrat or Republican.

This late dispatch from the Tidal Basin, where a marble monument to the "Father of Democracy" is taking final form, was brought to the White House by Stuart Gibboney, chairman of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission.

"We are in shape to go ahead," Gibboney said. He referred to the all-important appropriation for the construction work, contained in the Interior Department bill, just signed by the President.

But there is a hitch of monumental proportions that delays the dedication ceremonies. The hitch: for want of a sculptor, a proposed standing statue of the Squire of Monticello isn't even in the wet clay stage yet.

Lee Lowrie, New York sculptor, has been asked to submit a model by July 26, Gibboney said. If his model is accepted, it will solve that problem.

Insisting that it would make no difference whether the memorial is finally dedicated by a member of the party Jefferson founded, or by a Republican, Gibboney said simply:

"Thomas Jefferson belongs to the whole Nation, not to one party."

Towers Reveals City Lost $1,000 On Bad Checks

While Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal yesterday prepared legal action against at least 75 District motorists accused of offering worthless checks in payment for automobile tags, Tax Collector Chatham Towers disclosed the city has lost more than $1,000 in the transactions.

Towers said he would recommend to the Commissioners that no checks be accepted for license plates next year. He added that the police check squad and Department of Vehicles and Traffic are working to apprehend the suspected bad-check givers.

It was pointed out, however, that only in a few instances were the checks apparently passed with knowledge that they were worthless. Most of them were returned marked "insufficient funds," "account closed," "payment stopped," "exceeds balance." Several were labeled "no such account."

FAA Won't Issue Liquor Permit To Factor Firm

By the Associated Press

A basic wholesaler's permit was denied by the Federal Alcohol Administration yesterday to a company controlled by John Factor, of Chicago, because, the agency said, the concern was not likely to operate in conformity with Federal law.

The applicant company was the Old Oak Bottling and Distributing Corporation, Chicago, in which, the agency said, Factor held all but two shares of the outstanding stock.

"John Factor is an individual who cannot be believed under oath" the agency said. "His business experience and trade connections have been such that the applicant corporation is not likely in the event the permit herein applied for should be issued to maintain its operations in conformity with Federal law."

Museum Guard Retires

A PARTING GIFT—Surrounded by associates who wished him well and slipped a brand new billfold containing $100 in his hand, James Francis Cudmore (right), lieutenant of the guard at the Smithsonian Institution, retired yesterday after 22 years and 27 days of exemplary service. His record was commended by Alexander Wetmore (left), assistant secretary of the institution, who recalled that Cudmore began his service on November 5, 1919, with the title of watchman and was promoted to the rank of lieutenant of the guard on April 16, 1923. Cudmore lives at 5220 Chevy Chase parkway northwest.

"This hand is from a five-table duplicate game. We were the only team to bid a small slam," says contributor K. G. in discussing the hand shown in today's box. K. G. failed to discover the correct clew to play the hand at six clubs to his regret.

"It had been played three times when we met the cards," he continues, "three no trump, five-odd made, won top score. One team bid and made five clubs; the other teams played it at five diamonds.

"My favorite partner was the one who played it at no rump and he contends that six clubs should be made with a diamond lead. Of course, when I played the hand I found a way to go down one trick.

"This is the way I played it. I won the diamond lead with the ace in dummy, ran three rounds of hearts, discarding my two losing diamonds. I then led the spade five, winning in my hand and playing my high spade. I played a third spade and trumped low in dummy.

"Now for the losing play. I led the queen of diamonds, hoping to discard my spade if North didn't cover. However, she covered, so I trumped with the deuce. I played my last spade and trumped with the king. North overruffing with the ace. She then led a diamond.

"I knew that South was probably out of diamonds, so I ruffed with the ten of clubs and North won another club trick.

"The secret of the hand is to play one round of trumps, taking the singleton from South. Then on a diamond lead from North, I can ruff with the four-spot and my clubs are high. Oh, well, some day my play may equal my bidding. If and when that happens you may hear more of me."

Thomas Chadwick, Chemist, Found Dead by His Wife

Thomas C. Chadwick, 32, an associate chemist in the Department of Agriculture, was found dead yesterday on the floor of the bathroom at his home, 6301 Sixteenth street northwest. His wife, Mrs. Louise A. Chadwick, a teacher at Paul Junior High School, discovered him when she returned from a shopping trip.

She told police her husband left for work as usual yesterday morning and had not returned when she went out. Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald, District coroner, said an autopsy would be performed today at District Morgue.

Mr. Chadwick came to Washington in November, 1935, from Columbus, Ohio. He was a graduate of Ohio State University and held a Ph. D. degree. Besides his wife, he is survived by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Chadwick, and two sisters, Miss Maxine Chadwick, and Mrs. Doris Swann, all of Columbus.

Labor Agencies' Bill Signed by President

President Roosevelt approved yesterday a $1,023,282,690 appropriation bill for the Labor Department, Social Security Board and miscellaneous labor agencies for the fiscal year beginning July 1. Most of the total was for social security payments.

Congress drastically trimmed the National Labor Relations Board fund, primarily to curtail activities of its economics division headed by David J. Saposs, and made some cuts in money for inspectors in the wage-hour division.

Nazis Occupy Bridge Between France and Spain

Irun, Spain (At The French Border), June 27 (AP).—The Nazi swastika waved tonight over the International bridge between Irun and Hendaye as two battalions of motorized German troops moved up to the Spanish frontier to complete the occupation of France's southern Atlantic coast.

Formal ceremonies of occupation are scheduled for Saturday.

Simultaneously with the German arrival a sign reading "American Embassy" above the temporary headquarters of Howard Bucknell, jr., counsellor of the United States Embassy, was pulled down but he expected to be back doing business at the same stand in mid-bridge tomorrow.

German officers assured Bucknell they did not intend to interfere with the exodus of Americans.

It was learned that the Nazis had instructed French border authorities against permitting Jews to pass.

Alleged Nazi Agent Held Under $25,000 Bail in Los Angeles

Los Angeles, June 27 (AP).—Herbert Hoehne, 29-year-old German, was held under $25,000 bond today on a charge of failing to file with the Secretary of State a registration statement showing he is an agent of the Nazi government.

Agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, who arrested Hoehne yesterday, refused to discuss his case, but it was learned he carried a ticket, purchased in San Francisco last Thursday, for travel by Pan American Airways to Buenos Aires.

Arraigned before a United States commissioner, Hoehne denied the charge through an interpreter and asked permission to telephone the German consulate. Officers said that instead, he called Fritz Wiedemann, German consul general at San Francisco.

Fritz Paul Van Hagan, 40, identified by county detectives as a former German intelligence officer, was arrested yesterday on a charge of illegal entry and turned over to Federal agents.

Catholic Jail Chaplains Plan Organization

Spiritual Leaders Outline Program In Meeting Here

Formulation of a program definitely outlining the duties of prisons' spiritual advisors and formation of a Catholic prison chaplains' organization were effected at yesterday's sessions of the institute for Catholic prison chaplains here.

Meeting at the National Catholic School of Social Service, the chaplains from many leading State and Federal penal institutions agreed such a program should stress that chaplains function as religious leaders and counselors within prisons, and not be jack-of-all-trades, as is now necessary in many instances.

Cooperation Among Faiths Urged

The program, which is being embodied in a manual to be sent to prison chaplains throughout the country and to the Bureau of Prisons, also urged some sort of special training for such chaplains and cooperation and exchange of ideas with chaplains of other faiths.

According to the Right Rev. John O'Grady, secretary of the National Conference of Catholic Charities, the plan is urging establishment of a prison chaplains' clearing house, through which study material for chaplains will be available. The clearing house may be set up at the National Catholic Welfare Conference headquarters here.

The program also outlines the chaplains' relationships to the outside community, including released prisoners and families and social and other agencies.

May Elect Officers Today

The chaplains' group is expected to name its officers at today's closing sessions of the institute, which is being sponsored by the Federal Bureau of Prisons, Department of Justice, National Conference of Catholic Charities and the National Catholic Welfare Conference.

The Rev. Daniel R. Burns, chaplai of Great Meadow Prison, Fort Ann, N. Y., served as toastmaster for the fellowship supper last night at the parley's headquarters at 2400 Nineteenth street northwest.

Speaking briefly were the Right Rev. Msgr. Michael J. Ready, secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference; the Very Rev. Msgr. John R. Mulroy, of Denver, Colo., president of the National Conference of Catholic Charities; Sanford Bates, executive director of the Boys Clubs of America, and former director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, James V. Bennett, his successor; the Rev. Lucian L. Lauerman, director of the National Catholic School of Social Service; the Rev. Joseph M. Clark, S. J., chaplain of Alcatraz; the Rev. John Farrell, of Illinois State Penitentiary, Pontiac, Ill.; Msgr. O'Grady, Miss Agnes Regan, assistant director of the Social Service School, and others.

U. S. Resources Board to Handle Construction Plan

President Roosevelt yesterday directed Government agencies concerned with construction to submit their plans to the National Resources Board which will develop a six-year program.

White House officials said that it was proposed to send the board's program to Congress about the time the President submits his annual budget message.

In addition to coordination of the Federal construction program, Stephen T. Early, Presidential secretary, said that the order was aimed at taking some of the routing of budgeting and planning Federal construction off Mr. Roosevelt's shoulders.

Dr. Ballou Marks 20th Year as Head Of District Schools

The twentieth anniversary of Dr. Frank W. Ballou's service as superintendent of District public schools was celebrated yesterday at a surprise party given by 100 of his coworkers.

DR. BALLOU

The luncheon at Olney Inn preceded the actual date, July 1. A motion-picture projector was presented to him by the group, which included assistant superintendents, principals, heads of departments and directors of special subjects. Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, and Mrs. E. Z. Watkins, secretary of the board, were at the party, as were members of Dr. Ballou's family.

England Reported Seeking Eire Unity In Defense Move

By J. Norman Lodge
Associated Press Staff Writer

Dublin (Friday), June 28.—A statement in the Eire (Ireland) Senate by Vice Premier Sean O'Mally that the question of the Eire-Ulster border is again under consideration has given rise to rumors that Britain may be seeking union of North and South Ireland for defense.

O'Mally told the Senate Wednesday that it would not be "advisable" to say more "at this time," but reliable sources disclosed today that meetings, guarded with secrecy, have been held along the border.

Officials declined to discuss the nature of the meetings, but it was learned from an informed source that Prime Minister De Valera has refused an offer of the six Northern Ireland counties if the cost amounted to involving Ireland in the European war.

De Valera was said to have attended the border meetings, along with Cardinal Joseph McCrory, Lord Craigvanon, United States Minister David Gray, and important leaders of Eire and Ulster.

Broker House Creditors Get $1,300,000

Final Accounting Filed In Swartzell Firm's 10-Year-Old Bankruptcy

A final accounting, which showed more than $1,300,000 salvaged for creditors, was filed in the District Court yesterday by the trustees in bankruptcy of the brokerage firm of Swartzell, Rheem & Hensey Co.

The firm failed a decade ago, with liabilities of more than $8,000,000 and the trustees, Henry P. Blair, Julius I. Peyser and Michael M. Doyle, have been nine and a half years liquidating and distributing the assets, which consisted largely of real estate. Sale of the property was retarded by low prices induced by depression conditions.

Fred J. Eden referee in bankruptcy, will call a meeting of creditors, probably July 10, to accept the final accounting. Action then will be taken to fix compensation for the trustees, receivers and attorneys.

Among disbursements reported by the trustees were payments to secured creditors, $705,546; expense of conducting business, $253,830; compensation of receivers, trustees and lawyers, $49,029; taxes, $21,386.17, and payments to unsecured creditors, $285,980.06.

The claims of the unsecured creditors totaled $5,713,608.73, so that they have received about 5 per cent of their debts. The trustees' report said they probably would get $228,544.35, or about 4 per cent more, out of the $275,966.88 in cash now in the hands of the trustees.

The trustees' report pointed out that all the expenses of their administration have been met by income from properties belonging to the estate, so that no expenses have been paid out of the sale price of the assets, every cent of this going to the unsecured creditors.

Armored Truck Guard, $27,000 In Cash Disappears

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, June 27.—Thomas F. Phelan, a guard on an armored truck of the United States Trucking Corporation, and $27,000 which he was guarding disappeared simultaneously today, while two other members of the crew of the truck were having lunch in a cafeteria.

When they returned to the truck, the two men found the truck unattended. Phelan's cap and revolver were on a nook in the money compartment of the car and $2,000 in $1 bills was all that remained of the $29,000 which was in the van when the men went to eat.

Detectives started a city-wide search for Phelan. There was a possibility, they said, that he was held up and kidnaped.

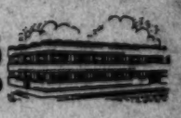
We Built a Huge Modern Parking Building



. . . One that seemed to have just everything in its favor . . . CAPACITY (thousands of cars are parked there daily) . . . CONVENIENCE (it's right at the rear of the store . . . no long walks after you've parked) . . . ECONOMY (only 10c the first hour and 5c for every additional half hour or fraction thereof.)

IF YOU WOULD PARK IN COMFORT . . . SHOP IN COMFORT . . . park your car in our modern parking building . . . shop for all your needs on any or all of our healthfully air-conditioned floors!
